

THERE'S NOTHING VERY SINGULAR IN THAT:

There's

something that I want to tell to you, There's nothing very singular in that; Per-

- haps my ob- ser- va- tions are not true, There's nothing ve- ry sin- gu- lar in that! There are some things that really should not be In this land of freedom where we all are free, I have a pair of eyes with which I see, There's nothing ve-ry sin-gu-lar in that.

Some men have voices very harsh and strong,
 There's nothing very singular in that,
 They always sing soft sentimental song,
 There's nothing very singular in that.
 I've noticed when I've been to any ball,
 The men who cannot dance will always sprawl,
 While those who can will lean against the wall,
 There's nothing very singular in that.

I called a cab one day in Portman Square,
 There's nothing very singular in that,
 The cabman wanted nearly twice his fare,
 There's nothing very singular in that.
 A member of the club at which I dine
 Went off with my new hat at half past nine,
 I brought away a coat that wasn't mine,
 There's nothing very singular in that.

John Singleheart a lady did adore,
 There's nothing very singular in that,
 She was all his fancy painted her and more,
 There's nothing very singular in that.
 She married some one rich and twice her age,
 John took a curacy to cool his rage,
 But eventually went upon the stage,
 There's nothing very singular in that.

To listen to this song you're very kind,
 There's nothing very singular in that,
 I know you'll turn it over in your mind,
 There's nothing very singular in that.
 If I knew another verse to sing I should,
 But as I don't I couldn't if I would,
 I feel I have not done a bit of good,
 There's nothing very singular in that.
