The sacred poems are not very well wrought, nor at all noticeable in thought or sentiment. But all through one feels that a sweet spirit utters itself. She d. on 30th November, 1880, and was interred at Highgate Cemetery, 4th Dec., 1880. [A. B. G.]

Of Miss Threlfall's hymns those in C. U. include:—

1. Hosanna! loud hosanna, The little children sang. Palm Sunday.
2. I think of Thee, O Saviour. Good Friday.
3. Lo, to us a child is born. Christmas.
4. Thou didst us seek Thine early. Early Picty.
5. We praise Thee in the morning. Morning.
6. When from Egypt's house of bondage. Children as Pilgrims.

These hymns are all taken from Miss Threlfall's Sunshine and Shadow, 1878. No. 2 was written during a dangerous illness, at her dictation, by a friend. No. 1 is the most widely used of her compositions. [J. J.]

Thresher, Mrs. J. B., a som de plume of Mrs. Van Alstyne, q. v.

Thrice happy saints who dwell above. S. Browne. [Sunday.] Appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1720, No. 122, in 10 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Lord's Day." In its full form it is not in C. U. In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, st. iv., v., vii., viii. were given as No. 293 as "Frequent the day of God returns." This cento has been repeated in a large number of hymnals in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Thrice happy souls, who born from heaven. F. Doddridge. [Walking with God.] This is No. 87 in the D. mss. in 8 st. of 4 l., headed, "Of spending the day with God," from Prov. xxiii. 17, and dated "March 27, 1737." In J. Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 79, it was given with several changes in the text, and with the heading altered to "Walking with God; or, being in His fear all the day long." Proverbs xxiii. 17; and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 93. This text again differs from both the above. That however in C. U. is from Orton. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 443, st. v., vi., iv. and iii., are given as, "Lord, we must labour, we must care." Both this and the text as in Orton are in several collections. [J. J.]

Thring, Edward, M.A., brother of Godfrey Thring, was b. at Alford, Somerset, on Nov. 29 1821, and educated at King's College, Cambridge; B.A. 1844. He won the Porson Prize in 1843, and was elected a Fellow of King's College in 1844. He became Head Master of Uppingham School in 1858, and retained the same to his death on October 22, 1887. He was the author of several important works for schools and colleges, of a volume of Sermons pub. in 1858, and two other vols. in 1886, and of Borth Lyrics, 1881. He was joint editor with Herr David of the Hymn Book for the use of Uppingham and Sherborne Schools, 1874, and to it he contributed some tra. from the German (see Index of Authors and Translators). Two of his original hymns are in Thring's Coll. (1) "A day of work is done" (For the Sick), and (2) "Death shut the gates of Paradise" (Death). His great success as the Head Master of a Public School has become a matter of history. [J. J.]

Thring, Godfrey, B.A., s. of the Rev. J. G. D. Thring, of Alford, Somerset, and brother of the Rev. E. Thring (see above), was b. at Alford, March 23, 1823, and educated at Shrewsbury School, and at Balliol College, Oxford, B.A. in 1845. On taking Holy Orders he was curate of Stratfield-Turgis, 1846-50; of Strathfieldsaye, 1850-53; and of other parishes to 1858, when he became rector of Alford-with-Hornblotton, Somerset. R.D. 1867-76. In 1876 he was preferred as prebend of East Harptree in Wells cathedral. Prebendary Thring's poetical works are:—Hymns Congregational and Others, 1866; Hymns and Verses, 1866; and Hymns and Sacred Lyrics, 1874. In 1880 he pub. A Church of England Hymn-book Adapted to the Daily Services of the Church throughout the Year; and in 1882, a revised and much improved edition of the same as The Church of England Hymn Book, &c. (for details concerning which see England, Hymns, Church of, p. 381, § vi.). A great many of Prebendary Thring's hymns are annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators); the rest in C. U. include:—

1. Beneath the Church's hallowed shade. Consecration of a Burial Ground. Written in 1870. This is one of four hymns set to music by Dr. Dykes, and first pub. by Novello & Co., 1873. It was also included (but without music) in the author's Hys. & Sacred Lyrics, 1874, p. 170, and in his Coll., 1882.
2. Blessed Saviour, Thou hast taught us. Quinquagesima. Written in 1869, and first pub. in the author's Hys. Congregational and Others, 1866. It was republished in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. It is based upon the Epistle for Quinquagesima.
3. Blast out our sins of old. Lent. Written in 1862, and first pub. in Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. It is in several collections in G. Britain and America, and has been specially set to music by H. H. Pierson (Novello & Co.), and in other hymnals.
4. Bowed down with sorrow, sin, and shame. Lent. Written in 1860, and first pub. in his Coll., 1882, as a Processional during Lent. It is of more than usual merit.
5. Bulwark of a mighty nation. Church Conference, &c. Written in 1876, and first pub. with music by the Rev. S. M. Barworth (Novello), 1877, and by many others. In the author's Coll., 1882.
6. Dead to life, yet leath to die. Invitation to the Worthy. Written in 1862, and first pub. in Morrell & How's Fs. & Hys., 1864; and again in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; and in his Coll., 1882, and in other hymnals.
7. For mercy, Lord, I cry. Lent. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, and his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874.
8. From the eastern mountains. Epiphany. Written in 1873, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882. It is a Processional for Epiphany, and is found in several collections.
9. Gird we, soldiers, for the battle. Purity. Written for the White Cross Army, and pub. in the Bath and Wells Diocesan Magazine, July, 1864.
10. God the Father, God the Son, Holy Spirit, Three in One. Litany for Close of Services. Written in 1871, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882, and in other hymnals.
11. Grant us, O our heavenly Father. Growth in Grace desired. Written in 1861, at the request of the Rev. Preb. W. Mitchell, Diocesan Inspector of Schools for Bath and Wells, to set forth the growth of religion through the ordinances of the Church, and first pub. in the author's Coll., 1882.
12. Great Architect of worlds unknown. Holy Trinity. Written in 1872, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and again in his Coll., 1882.
13. Hail, sacred day of earthly rest. Sunday. Written in 1863, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, in 13 st. of 4 l. Originally it was not intended for Public Worship; but from it st. l.-iii., vii., ix.-xi., and xiii. were adapted by the author and Ep. How for the R. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, st. l., ll. 3, 4, reading:

"Hail! day of light, that bringest light
And joy to me," for the original which read:—
"Hail! quiet spirit, bringing peace
And joy to me."

Although the altered form is in the author's Coll., 1882, the original is his authorised text for the future.

14. Hark! hear ye not the angel-song. Christmas Carol. Written in 1869 at the request of the Rev. B. R. Chope, and pub. in the author's Coll., 1882, in 2 st. of 6 l. Of this hymn, st. ii., ll. 1-4, are by George Withers.
15. Hark! the vault of heaven is ringing. Ascension. Written in 1873, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; again in his Coll., 1882; and again in other hymnals.
16. Hast thou sinned? sin no more. Lent. Written in 1867, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874. In C. U. in America.
17. Have we no soul for Him Who died? Conversion of St. Paul. Written in 1876, and pub. in his Coll., 1882, and again in 1882.
18. Hail me, O my Saviour, heal. Lent. Written in 1866, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, in 5 st. of 4 l., and, enlarged to 8 st., in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals. It has been specially set to music by H. H. Pierson in his Hymn Tunes, 2nd series, 1872. Its use has extended to America.
19. Hear us, Thou who kneedest. Processional for Whitenside. Written in 1873, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals. The latter is his authorised text.
20. In the Name of God the Father. Holy Baptism. Written in 1869, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and again in his Coll., 1882. The second stanza begins, "Washed beneath the mystic waters."
21. Jere, heavenly Shepherd. The Good Shepherd. Written in 1872, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and again in his Coll., 1880, also in other hymnals, but omitted from the 1882 ed. of the same, although it is by no means an indifferent hymn.
22. Lord God Almighty, Who hearest all, &c. God the Honour of Prayer. Written in 1866, and first pub. in his Coll., 1880, and repeated in the ed. of 1882.
23. Lord of Power, Lord of Might. Collect, 7th S. after Trinity. Written in 1862, and first pub. in Choep's Hymnal the same year. It was repeated in Morrell & How's Fs. & Hys., 1864; in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882. It is also in a large number of collections, and ranks in popularity with most of the author's best hymns. It has been specially set to music by Dr. Monk, and by H. H. Pierson.
24. Make me holy, O my Saviour. Holiness desired. Written in 1867, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and again in his Coll., 1882 (Private Use).
25. O death, thou art no more. Death anticipated with Joy. Written in 1862, and pub. in Choep's Hymnal the same year. Also in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. It has been specially set to music by H. H. Pierson and W. T. Best.
26. O for the faith that knows no doubt. Unfailing Faith desired. Written in 1864, and first pub. in his Hys. and Verses, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1880; but omitted from the ed. of 1882.
27. O God of mercy, God of might, in love and pity infinite. Offertory. Written in 1877, and first pub. in his Coll., 1880, and again in 1882. Specially set to music by H. S. Irons.
28. O God, the King of glory. Wbn. Collect, S. after the Ascension. Written in May, 1863, and pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1880; but omitted from the ed. of 1882.
29. O Mighty God, Creator, King. For those travelling by Land or by Sea. Written in 1878 for his Coll., and pub. therein, 1880, and 1882.
30. O sing to the Lord with a psalm of thanksgiving. Church Conference. Written in 1871, and pub. in How's Hymns, set to music by Dr. Dykes, 1873, in the author's Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and his Coll., 1882. A true Processional hymn for Church gatherings of various kinds.
31. O Thou Who dwellest in realms of light. Praise for Divine Mercies. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882. Specially set to music by H. H. Pierson in his Hymn Tunes, 2nd Series (Stimpkin & Marshall), 1872.
32. O Thou, Who every change of human life. St. Thomas. Written in 1876, and first pub. in his Coll., 1880, and also in the 1882 ed. of the same.
33. O Thou, Who from one blood shalt make. For Unity. First pub. in his Coll., 1880; again in 1882, and in other hymnals.

34. O Thou Who madest land and sea. For Orythms. Written in 1881, and included in his Coll., 1882.

35. O Thou, Who sitt'st enthroned above all worlds both great and small. Consecration of a Church. Written in 1867, and pub. with music by Dr. Dykes in Four Hymns, 1873, and used at the consecration of Hornblotkin Church, Feb. 19, 1874. Also specially set to music by H. S. Irons (Novello), 1874. It was repeated in the author's Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals.

36. See the Sun high heaven ascending. Mid-day. Written in 1864, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882.

37. The ocean hath no danger. For Use at Sea. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and in his Coll., 1882.

38. Thou that sendest sun and rain. Times of Scarcity. Written in 1862, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, as a hymn for a "Bad Harvest." It was repeated in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and in several hymnals.

39. Thou to Whom the sick and dying. On behalf of Hospitals. Written in 1870, at the request of Preb. Hutton of Lincoln, and first pub. in his Supplement, Lincoln, 1871; and again with music by H. H. Pierson in Hymn Tunes (Stimpkin & Marshall), 1872. It is also in the author's Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and several other hymn-books.

40. Thrice happy be whose tranquil mind. Contentment. Written in 1863, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; and his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874. It is given in one or two American hymn-books.

41. Thy love for all Thy creatures. Mid-day. Written in 1864, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; again in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and several hymn-books.

42. To Thee, O God, we render thanks. Holy Scripture. Written in 1880, and pub. in his Coll., 1882.

43. Watch now, ye Christians, watch and pray. Advent. Written in 1861, and first pub. in Choppe's Hymnal, 1862. Afterwards repeated in the author's Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and his Coll., 1882, also in other hymnals.

44. We know not, O we know not, how far a prayer may go. Prayer. Written in 1866, and first pub. in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; and again, abbreviated, in his Coll., 1882 (Private Use).

45. With tears and hearts bowed down with sorrow. Death of a Child. Written by request in 1881 for the funeral of a little boy, William Holmes Orr, son of the Rev. W. H. Orr, Rector of West Lydford, Somerset, who was killed by the fall of a shed, under which he with five other boys had taken refuge during the great storm on Oct. 14, 1881. It was included in the author's Coll., 1882. The special metre was adopted that the hymn might be sung to Neumark's Choral, "Wer nur den Heben Gott lasset walten." (See p. 796, ii.)

46. Work is sweet for God has blest. Work. Written in 1863, and first pub. in his Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866; his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874; his Coll., 1882, and other hymn-books.

In addition to the above, and those annotated under their respective first lines, Prebendary Thring wrote in 1868 a series of "Hymns on the Creation," as set forth in the first chapter of Genesis, and pub. the same in his Hys. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, and in his Coll., 1880 and 1882. These hymns have also passed into other collections. They are all in the same metre (8.8.8.8.6), and are certainly very fine. The first lines are:—

47. When o'er the water's misty deep. Sunday.

48. The earth in robes of light arrayed. Monday.

49. With azure globe circled round. Tuesday.

50. So grass, and herb, and fruitful tree. Wednesday.

51. Four days had come and gone to rest. Thursday.

52. The last great day of work had come. Friday.

53. And now, 'mid myriad worlds enthroned. Saturday.

Although, as is natural, Prebendary Thring's hymns are more fully represented in his own Coll. than elsewhere, yet a fair proportion are found in a large number of hymn-books in Great Britain and America. His hymns are mainly objective, and are all of them of a strong and decided character. The poetical, as distinct from the sermonizing style of hymn-writing on the one hand, and the grand use of Holy Scripture (as by Bishop C. Wordsworth) on the other, is very prominent, with a tendency to diffuseness and over-elaboration. His descriptive and narrative hymns are very few, and Passiontide and the two Sacraments of the Church are almost untouched. In some of his finer hymns his tone is high and his structure massive, in several others his plaintiveness is very tender, whilst very varied, and his rhythm is almost always perfect. The prominent features throughout are a clear vision, a firm faith, a positive reality, and an exulting hopefulness. His hymn-book possesses the same features of strength, beauty, and excellence. [J. J.]

Through all the changing scenes of life. Tate & Brady. [Ps. xxxiv.] 1st appeared in the New Version, 1698, in 18 st. of 4 l., divided into two parts. As a c.m. rendering it is regarded as one of the most successful in the New Version, and has been a perfect mine of wealth for cento makers. Its use as a whole in modern hymn-books is unknown, but centos of varying length and arrangements are in most extensive use. Of these the following are the most popular:—

i. St. l., ll., iii., vi., viii. This was given with slight alterations in Cotterill's Sel., 1810; and repeated with further alterations in 1819. From Cotterill, 1819, it passed into Stowell's Coll., 1831; Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833; Stowell's Ps. & Hys., 1876, and others in the Ch. of England. The Cong. H. Bk., 1836; Leeds H. Bk., 1853; New Cong. Soc., 1859; the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1868, &c., and numerous collections of various denominations both in Great Britain and America. In some instances Cotterill's alteration of st. ii. l. 4, "And charm their griefs," to "And soothe their griefs," is reproduced; but in most cases the original text is retained. This is the most popular extract form of the hymn.

ii. St. l., vi., vii., viii. Mitrc Hymnal, 1836; Morrell & How, 1854-54.

iii. St. l., ll., iii., vi. S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., 1855.

iv. St. l., ll., vii., viii. Elliot's Ps. & Hys., 1835; Mercer, &c.

v. St. l., ll., vi., vii., viii. Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844; Alford's Year of Fruits, 1867; Hy. Comp., 1870; Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1873, and others.

vi. The same arrangement with Tate and Brady's doxology; H. A. & M.; Hymnary; Thring's Coll. In Biggs's Annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, a French version of this cento, without the doxology, is given as in common use in Guernsey: "Jamais je ne feral."

vii. St. l., ll., iii., vi., vii., viii. Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855; Narry; Sarum; Wes. H. Bk., 1875; Jellington Ps. & Hys., and others.

viii. St. l., ll., vi., viii. Kennedy's Hy. Christ., 1863.

ix. St. l., ll., vi., vii., viii. Windlo's Met. Psalter & H. Bk.

x. St. l., ll., vi., vii., viii. The S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871.

xi. St. vi.-ix. In Martineau's Hymns, 1840, beginning, "The hosts of God encamp around."

Although other centos can be pointed out both in the older and modern collections, sufficient evidence is supplied in the above to show the great hold this version of Ps. xxxiv. has upon the public mind. The collections quoted are but a small part of those in which some portion of this version is found. Its use in various forms is universal. [See New Version, and Psalter, English, § 13 y.] [J. J.]

Through all the dangers of the night. T. Kelly. [Morning.] 1st pub. in the 1st ed. of his Hymns on Various Passages of Scripture, 1804, in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words in Job vii. 20, "O Thou Preserver of men" (ed. 1853, No. 497). It is found in several modern collections. [J. J.]

Through endless years Thou art the same. [Ps. cii.] This cento is found in several English and American hymn-books; sometimes in four and at other times in five stanzas; and in most cases differing somewhat in the text. The earliest date to which we have traced it is the English Bap. New Sel. of Hys., 1828, No. 17, in 5 st., the first of which is taken from Watts's version of Ps. cii., and the rest from the New Version, 1836, and in both instances with alterations. This text, with alterations and the omission of st. v., was given in the American Congregational Church Psalmody, by Mason and Greene, Boston, 1831, No. 102. In some later American hymn-books, st. v., as in the English Bap. New Sel., 1828, or altered, is restored. The text of the 1880 Suppl. to the English Bap. Ps. & Hys., is from the New Sel., slightly altered. [J. J.]

Through the day Thy love has spared us. T. Kelly. [Evening.] Pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1806, in 2 st. of 6 l. (ed. 1863, No. 500). It has come into extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and has been tr. into several languages. R. Bingham's tr. into Latin in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, begins:—"Per hunc diem trepidum." [J. J.]

Throw away Thy rod. G. Herbert. [Discipline.] 1st pub. in his posthumous work The Temple, 1633, under the title "Discipline," thus:—

"Throw away Thy rod,
Throw away Thy wrath:
O my God,
Take the gentle path.
"For my heart's desire Unto Thine is bent;
I aspire
To a full consent.
"Not a word or look
I affect to own,
But by book,
And Thy book alone.
"Though I fall, I weep;
Thou I halt in pace,
Yet I creep
To the throne of grace.

"Then let wrath remove;
Love will do the deed;
For with love
Sour hearts will bleed.
"Love is swift of foot;
Love's a man of war,
And can shoot,
And can hit from far.
"Who can 'scape his bow?
That which wrought on Thee,
Brought Thee low,
Needs must work on me.
"Throw away Thy rod;
Though man frailties hath,
Thou art God;
Throw away Thy wrath."

The earliest attempt known to us to adapt this poem for congregational use was made by John Wesley. In his Coll. of Ps. & Hys., printed at Charlestown, America, 1736-7, it was altered from its 5.5.8.5 metre to s.m. and given as No. vii. of the "Ps. & Hys. for Wednesday and Friday." The first stanza begins:

"O throw away Thy rod!
O throw away Thy wrath!
My gracious Saviour and my God,
O take the gentle path."

The original poem, usually in an abbreviated form, is found in several modern hymn-books, including the People's H., 1867; the Cong. Ch. Hymnal, 1887, and others. [J. J.]

Thrupp, Dorothy Ann, daughter of Joseph Thrupp, of Paddington Green, was b. at London, June 20, 1779, and d. there on Dec. 14, 1847. Her hymns, a few of which have come into extensive use, were contributed to the Rev. W. Carns Wilson's Friendly Visitor and his Children's Friend, under the nom de plume of Iota; to Mrs. Herbert Mayo's Sel. of Hys. and Poetry for the use of Infant Schools and Nurseries, 1838 (3rd ed. 1846, with change of title to A Sel. . . of Infant and Juvenile Schools and Families), in which her signature is "D. A. T."; and also to the Hys. for the Young, which she herself edited for the R. T. S. circa 1830, 4th ed., 1836. In 1836 and 1837 she also pub. Thoughts for the Day (2nd series), in which she embodied many hymns which previously appeared in the Friendly Visitor. In addition to her hymns, which are annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators), there are also in C. U. :—

1. Come, Holy Spirit, come, O bear an infant's prayer. Child's Prayer. Appeared in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys. and Poetry, 1838, No. 14, and signed "D. A. T."

2. God loves the little child that prays. God's love for Children. Given in Miss Thrupp's Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836; and again in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys., &c., 2nd ed., 1840, and signed "D. A. T." It is sometimes given as "God loves the child that humbly prays."

3. Have you read the wondrous story? Life and Death of Jesus. This appeared anonymously in Miss Thrupp's Hys. for the Young, R. T. S., 1830, No. 12, in 8 st. of 4 l. In Miss Thrupp's later publications this hymn is omitted, a fact which suggests that it was not her composition, but possibly that of a friend. It is in the Leeds S. S. Union H. Bk., 1833-78.

4. Let us sing with one accord. Praise of Jesus. This hymn is usually associated with Miss Thrupp's name, but on insufficient evidence. We find it in the 4th ed. of her Hys. for the Young, 1836, and again in the 3rd ed. of Mrs. H. Mayo's Sel. of Hys. and Poetry for the Use of Infant and Juvenile Schools, &c., 1846, and in both instances without signature. We know of no evidence which justifies us in ascribing the authorship with certainty to Miss Thrupp. The hymn is in the Leeds S. S. Union H. Bk., 1833-78, and several others.

5. Poor and needy though I be. Divine Providence. Appeared in Miss Thrupp's Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836, No. 22; and again in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys., &c., 2nd ed., 1840, and signed "D. A. T."

6. See, my child, the mighty ocean. Love of God compared to the Sea. Given in the R. T. S.'s Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836, No. 26, and in Mrs. Mayo's Sel. of Hys., &c., 1st ed., 1838, and signed "D. A. T." In Kennedy, 1863, it begins "Have you seen the mighty ocean?"

7. Thou Guardian of my earliest days. Jesus the Children's Friend. This hymn we have traced to her Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836. It is sometimes given as "Thou Guardian of our earliest days."

8. What a strange and wondrous story. Life and Death of Jesus. This hymn is found without signature in her Hys. for the Young, 4th ed., 1836, and again in Mrs. H. Mayo's Sel., 1838, No. 173, in 4 st. of 4 l. We have found no authority for ascribing it to Miss Thrupp. In the Ch. S. S. H. Bk., n.d., 8 lines have been added as a concluding stanza by an unknown hand.

9. What led the Son of God? Love of God in Christ. This appeared anonymously in her Hys. for the Young, 1830, and again in the Leeds S. S. Union H. Bk., 1833. In modern collections it is attributed to Miss Thrupp, on the ground that it is found in the Hys. for the Young, which she edited.

10. Who are they in heaven who stand? All Saints. Pub. in Mrs. Mayo's Sel., 3rd ed., 1840, No. 64, in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "A. D. T." It is in the Prim. Methodist S. S. U. H. Bk., 1879, and others.

Several additional hymns to those named above have also been attributed to Miss Thrupp on insufficient authority. This has probably arisen out of the fact that all the hymns in the Hys. for the Young, including her own, were given anonymously. [J. J.]

Thrupp, Joseph Francis, M.A., s. of a solicitor, was b. May 20, 1827, and educated at Winchester School and Trinity College, Cambridge. At Winchester he gained the Heathcote and Duncan prizes, and the Queen's gold medal for an English poem, and was Head Prefect during his last year. He graduated in 1849 as 7th Wrangler, and 11th in the 1st class of the Classical Tripos. In 1850 he was elect a Fellow of his college. Taking Holy Orders in 1852, he was appointed Vicar of Barrington, Cambridge, in 1852, and Select Preacher before the University in 1863. He was also for some time a member of the Board of Theological Studies, and was associated with the S. P. C. K. some 20 years. He d. at Surbiton, Sept. 21, 1867. His published works include An Introduction to the Study and the Use of the Psalms; A Revised Translation of the Song of Songs; Ancient Jerusalem; and Psalms and Hymns (Cambridge, Macmillan), 1853. This last contains prefaces, indices, with authors' names, 93 psalms, 236 hymns, 16 doxologies. Of these 23 psalms and 18 hymns are by Mr. Thrupp. The best known of his hymns are, "Awhile in spirit, Lord, to Thee" (p. 104, ii.); "Hail, that head, all torn and wounded"; "O Son of Man, Thyself once crossed." Mr. Thrupp's versions of individual psalms have not come into common use beyond his own collection. They are therein signed with his initials, "J. F. T.," but are not separately annotated in this Dictionary. His hymns are mainly on the special Festivals of the Church, and, in addition to those annotated elsewhere are:—

1. Abide with us, O Saviour dear. Evening.
2. Eternal Word! Incarnate Light. Christ our All.
3. Eternal Word! Who ever wast. Annunciation.
4. How beautiful are their peaceful feet. Ordination.
5. Lord of majesty and might. School Festival.
6. Master, the Son of God art Thou. St. Bartholomew.
7. O Saviour of our earthly race. St. Luke.
8. O Thou, Whom upward to the sky. Ascension.
9. O, where shall we deliverance seek. Lent.
10. Ope, Salem, ope thy temple gates. The Presentation.
11. Saviour of men, Almighty Lord. St. Mark.
12. Thou Who didst Thy brethren twain. St. Simon and Jude.
13. Thou Whose voice upon the border. St. Andrew.
14. To David's Son hosannas sing. Palm Sunday.
15. Two and two, Thy servants, Lord. St. Patrick and James.
16. What, though the ground all good at first. Lent.

Mr. Thrupp contributed several articles to Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, and was one of the selected writers on the staff of the Speaker's Commentary. [J. J.]

Thus far on life's bewildering [perplexing] path. J. Montgomery. [Safety in God.] 1st printed on a broadsheet for use at the Anniversary Sermons, on behalf of the Red Hill Sunday School, Sheffield, March 28, 1819, in 4 st. of 6 l., and signed "J. M." In Montgomery's Greenland and Other Poems, 1819, p. 171, it was given in 6 st. of 6 l., the new stanzas being st. iv. and v. of the text as included in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 479, and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 55. The 1819 text was altered in 1825; and again, but very slightly, in 1853. In modern collections the text is usually abridged. [J. J.]

Thus speaks the heathen: How shall man. J. Logan. [Mercy rather than Sacrifice.] 1st pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, No. xxxi., in 6 st. of 4 l., on Micah vi. 6-9. It is rarely found outside of that work. This paraphrase is ascribed to J. Logan, on evidence given in the memoir of M. Bruce (p. 119, u.). [J. J.]

Thus speaks [saith] the high and lofty One. J. Logan. [God with the Hum- ble.] Pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, No. 27, on Is. lvii. 15, 16, in 5 st. of 4 l. [See Bruce, M., p. 118, ii.] In Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphrases & Hymns, 1853, this text is given in an altered form as, "Thus saith the high and lofty One." [J. J.]

Thy living saints on earth, Thy saints who sleep. [All Saints' Day.] Appeared in E. W. Eddis's Irvingite Hymns for the Use of the Churches, 1864, in 3 st. of 6 l., and signed "E. S., 1849," in common with several other hymns in the same book. We have seen it stated that "E. S." was Ellen Eddis, née Shepherd, but have been unable to authenticate the statement. This hymn has passed into other collections. [J. J.]

Thy promise, Lord, is perfect peace. H. F. Lyte. [Ps. iii.] Pub. in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is in C. U. in its full form, and also, altered as "Lord, how the troubleshooters of my peace," in the American Bap. Service of Song, 1871. [J. J.]

Thy throne, O God, in righteousness. J. Montgomery. [For Schools.] The earliest work in which this hymn has been found is Select Portions of Ps. from the New Version, Hymns and Anthems, &c., compiled by the Rev. Dr. Sutton, Vicar of Sheffield, for use in that Parish Church, circa 1815, 2nd ed. 1816, No. 103. From thence it passed into Cotterill's Sol., 1819; Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 542; and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 343. Among modern collections it is found in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879; Major's Bk. of Praises, &c. [J. J.]

Thy way, not mine [ours] O Lord. H. Bonar. [Resignation.] Appeared in his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1st Series, 1857, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is sometimes given as, "Thy way, not ours, O Lord"; and as "Father, Thy way, not mine." There is also an adaptation in three stanzas, beginning, "My portion, Thou! my cup," in the American Church Pastorate, 1864. The original is in extensive use in most English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

Τί σοι θέλεις γενέσθαι. St. Gregory Nazianzen. [Private Use.] This hymn "To His own Soul," is given in his Opera, Paris, 1611; Dan. Thes. Hymn. iii. 13; and in the Anth. Græc. p. 26. Mr. Chatfield's tr. in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, in 52 st. of 4 l. is from the latter, which contains 181 lines. He says of this poem, "The original is one of the most spirited pieces anywhere to be found, truly forcible and racy," p. 106. His tr., "O soul of mine, repining," is pleasing and vigorous, but not adapted to congregational use. [See Greek Hymnody, § iv.] [J. J.]

Tibi Christe, splendor Patris. St. Rabanus Maurus (?). [St. Michael and all Angels.] Daniel, i. No. 189, gives the text of this hymn, and at iv. p. 165 cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 11th cent. It is not however included by E. Dümmler in his ed. of the Carmina of Rabanus. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 91 b.; Jul. A. vi. f. 56 b.; Harl. 2361 f. 242); in an 11th cent. Moravian Breviary (Add. 30848, f. 199 b.), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 266); in the Bern ms. 455, of the 10th cent.; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from a ms. of the 11th cent. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 34). Also in Moue, No. 307; and in G. M. Dreyer's Hymnarius Motaciensis, 1888, p. 64, from a 10th cent. ms. It is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries. In the Roman Breviary, 1682, it is recast greatly for the worse, and begins Te splendor et virtus Patris; and this recast is repeated in later eds. of that Breviary, in Daniel i. No. 189, and others. In some of the more recent eds. of the Roman Breviary (e.g. Kempton, 1748, and Lyons, 1852), the original form is repeated, with slight alterations to suit the festival of St. Raphael (Oct. 24); and this text is in Königsfeld ii. p. 136. [Various.] [J. M.]

This hymn has been tr. from both forms of the text as follows:—

1. Thi Christe splendor Patris.

1. Thee, O Christ, the Father's splendour. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediæval Hys., 1851, p. 25, and the H. Noted, 1852, No. 42. It has passed into a few collections, including the Hymner, 1882.

2. Christ, to Thee, the Father's glory. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, H. Seasons, No. 47, and Rice's Sol. from the same, 1870, No. 124. Altered in J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1856-61, to "Christ, to Thee the Father's brightness."

3. Christ, the Father's mirrored brightness. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauds Syon, 1866, p. 95, and the People's H., 1887, No. 284.

Other trs. are:—

1. Thy father's brightness, Christe to thee. Primer, 1699.

2. To thee, O Christ, thy Father's light. Primer, 1615.

ii. Te splendor et virtus Patris.

1. Thee, the Father's power and light. By Bp. R. Ment, in his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1837 (ed. 1871, p. 121), Dr. Oldknow's Hys. for the Services of the Ch., 1850, and later eds., &c.

2. Thee, Who the Father's brightness art. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 127, and subsequently in a few hymnals.

3. O Jesu! life-spring of the soul. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 145; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 79. Given in a few collections, including Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861, &c.

4. Life and strength of all Thy servants. By the compilers of H. A. & M. in the 1839 Suppl. of that collection.

Other trs. are:—

1. We praise thee, Christ, among the Quæres. Primer, 1688.

2. O Lord of Hosts, whose Beams impart. Primer, 1706.

3. Jesus, the Father's ray and might. Divine Office, 1763.

4. We praise Thee 'mid the Angel hosts. A. J. B. Hope, 1844.

5. O Brightness of the Father's Light. W. Palmer, 1845.

6. Ruler of the dread immense. J. F. Thrupp, in his Fr. & Hys., 1853. A paraphrase rather than a translation.

7. Splendour of glory all divine. J. Wallace, 1874.

[J. J.]

Till he come, O let the words. Rp. Bickersteth. [Holy Communion.] Written in 1861 and first pub. in his work The Blessed Dead, 1862, and subsequently in his Suppl. to Psalms and Hymns, No. 41; The Two Brothers, 1871; and the 1870, 1876, and 1890 eds. of the Hymnal Companion. The author says that it is given in his Hymnal Comp. as presenting "one aspect of the Lord's Supper which is passed over in many hymnals, 'Ye do show forth the Lord's death till He come'; and also our communion with those of whom we say 'We bless Thy holy Name for all Thy servants departed this life in Thy faith and fear.'" (Note in the annotated ed. of Hy. Comp.) It is in several hymn-books. [J. J.]

Time is earnest, passing by. [Old and New Year.] This popular Sunday School hymn appeared in three publications in the same year, and in each case anonymously. (1) It is found in Sidney Dyer's American South-western Psalmist, 1851 (p. 817, 11), and signed "Anon.;" (2) again in an American paper called Independent, 1851; (3) and again, in England, in The Bible Class Magazine, 1851, with the signature "Independant," the name of the American paper from which it was taken. It was in 4 st. of 4 l. Subsequently it was reprinted in The Bible Class Magazine, with music by Mr. Joseph Dyer, the Schoolmaster of the Wesleyan School, Pocklington. Miller says (Singers & Songs, &c., 1869, p. 351) that "it also appeared in Select Music for the Young (Sunday School Union), where it is headed, 'All Things Earnest; composed by Joseph Dyer.'" This curious association of two men of the name of Dyer with the hymn, the first in America, and the second in England, has led to its authorship being attributed at one time to Sidney Dyer, and at another to Joseph Dyer, and in each case without authority of any weight. Usually the hymn is given in an abbreviated form of 5 st. as in the Universal H. Bk., 1885, the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887, and others. [J. J.]

Time is winging us away. J. Burton, sen. [New Year.] Pub. in Hys. for the Use of Sunday Schools selected from Various Authors, Nottingham, J. Dunn, 1812, No. 305, in 2 st. of 8 l., and entitled "Brevity of Life." It has passed into a very large number of hymn-books in G. Britain and America. Of Burton's hymns it ranks next to his "Holy Bible, book divine," in popularity. [J. J.]

'Tis a point I long to know. J. Newton. [In Doubt and Fear.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 119, in 9 st. of 4 l. It is in C. U. in an abbreviated form, and opening with the first line as above. In some collections it begins, "Lord, my God, I long to know"; and in others, "Could my heart so hard remain" (st. iii.). These altered forms of the text are in use principally in America. [J. J.]

'Tis enough, the hour is come. J. Merrick. [Nunc Dimittis.] This paraphrase of the Nunc Dimittis was pub. in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1763, p. 13, in 22 lines. As given in Kennedy, 1863, No. 185, some of the lines are transposed, and the whole are expanded into 3 st. of 8 l. [J. J.]

'Tis finished, the Messiah dies, Cut off for sins, &c. C. Wesley. [Good Fri- day.] In 1762 this hymn, in 2 st. of 8 l., appeared in C. Wesley's Short Hymns, vol. ii. p. 234. These stanzas are:—

"'Tis finished! the Merits dies,
Cut off for sins, but His own!
Accomplish'd is the sacrifice,
The great redeeming work is done;
Finish'd the first transgression is,
And purg'd the guilt of actual sin,
And everlasting righteousness
Is now to all the world brought in.
'Tis finish'd, all my guilt and pain,
I want no sacrifice beside,
For me, for me, the Lamb is slain,
And I am more than justified;
Sin, death, and hell are now subdued,
All grace is now to sinners given,
And, lo, I plead th' atoning blood,
For pardon, boldness, and heaven."

It is from the first four lines of this hymn that Blair formed st. iv. of his cento, "Behold the Saviour on the cross," p. 180, l. The original, as above, was given in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 223, and thus came into use in the Church of England. Charles Wesley, however, was not satisfied with these stanzas, and at his death he left in ms. another hymn on the same text, "It is finished," in 8 st. of 4 l., of which st. i. and viii. are st. i. ll. 1-4, and st. ii. ll. 5-8 (slightly altered) respectively of the 1762 text, and st. iii.-vii. are new. This text was given in the 1830 Suppl. to the Wes. H. Bk., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xii. p. 99. [J. J.]

'Tis gone, that bright and orb'd blaze,
J. Keble. [Evening.] Dated Nov. 25, 1820, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 14 st. of 4 l., and headed with the text "Abide with us, for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. St. Luke xxiv. 29." The centos from this poem in C. U. are:—

1. Sun of my soul, Thou Saviour dear. This cento was given in three stanzas in Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1836. This was repeated in numerous hymnals, sometimes in the same form, but usually with additional stanzas, until it has become one of the foremost hymns in the English language. It has been tr. into several languages. Those in Latin include, "Sol antime viteque mese, pœdicitur Jēsu" (4 st.), by R. Plingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871; and "Sol meus: O mi Salvador!" (4 st.), by H. M. Magill, in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876.

2. The Rulers of this Christian land. This cento, for those in authority, is in limited use.

3. Thou Framer of the light and dark. This cento "For the High Court of Parliament" is in the 1863 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.; the Hy. Comp., and others, and is admirably suited for the purpose.

4. When the soft dews of kindly sleep. This cento for Evening was given in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1827; the Sarum Hyl., 1848, and others. [J. J.]

'Tis my happiness below. W. Cowper. [In Affliction.] Appeared in Lady Huntingdon's Coll., 1774, No 143, in 3 st. of 8 l., and in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 16. In the Lady Huntingdon Coll. it precedes, and in the Olney Hymns it follows Cowper's "God moves in a mysterious way" [see p. 423, l.], and seems to have been written at, or about the same time, and under the same circumstances. Its modern use is mainly confined to America where, in its full, or in an abridged form, it is somewhat popular. [J. J.]

'Tis pure delight without alloy. I. Watts. [Divine Love Desired.] Pub. in his Horæ Lyricæ, 1708, Bk. i., in 6 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Ascending to Him in Heaven." In the American Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1848, and in their Hymnal, 1878, it is given with the omission of st. iv. as, "O 'tis delight without alloy." It is from the original, as above, that Watts took a portion for his hymn, "Happy the heart where grace reigns." [J. J.]

'Tis seldom we can trace the way. Sir J. Bowring. [The love of God.] This hymn is in the Plymouth Brethren Hys. for the Poor of the Flock, 1838, No. 250, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is best known as "We cannot always trace the way." In this form it was given in Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855, No. 393, and signed "Bowring" in the Index. Some later collections attribute it to "Elliot;" but Millor says (Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 422) that Sir John Bowring assured him personally that it was his own composition. It is in several collections of a recent date, including Dr. Allon's Cong. Psalmist Hyl., 1886. Another form of the text in use in America is "I cannot always trace the way." It is in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, and some later hymn-books. [J. J.]

'Tis sweet to wake at early morn. T. Davis. [Morning. Heaven anticipated.] Pub. in his Devotional Verse for a Month, 1855, p. 23, in 4 st. of 6 l. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, it was given as "'Tis sweet on earth at early morn." In the author's Hys. Old and New, 1864, No. 5; and his Annus Sanctus, 1877, p. 194, it was given as "This sweet on earth to wake at morn," and this is the authorized form of the hymn. [J. J.]

Titius, Christoph, s. of Christoph Titius or Tietza, pastor at Wilkau, near Ramsau, in Silesia, was b. at Wilkau, May 24, 1641. He entered the St. Mary Magdalene Gymnasium, at Breslau, in 1654, and the Aegidien (St. Giles) Gymnasium at Nürnberg, in 1660. He matriculated as a student of Theology at the University of Altdorf, in 1662. After completing his studies at the University of Jena, in 1664, he noted for two years as a family tutor. On Aug. 24, 1666, he was ordained as pastor of Laubenzedel, near Gunzenhausen, in Franconia; and then became, in 1671, pastor at Henfenfeld, near Nürnberg. In 1685 he was appointed diaconus at Hersbruck, near Nürnberg, became archidiaconus in June, 1701, and in Nov., 1701, was appointed chief pastor and inspector of schools. He d. at Hersbruck, Feb. 21, 1703 (Koch, iii., 523; Wetzell, iii., 296; G. A. Will's Nürnbergisches Gelehrten-Lexicon, pt. iv. p. 34; K. Goedeke's Grandrius, vol. iii., 1887, p. 287, &c. Koch says he was b. Jan. 10, 1641, and d. Sept. 7, 1703, but gives no authority for these dates).

Titius had begun to write hymns while at the Nürnberg Gymnasium, and his best known hymns originated either then or during his University course. They appeared in his Sünder-Schmerzsen, Trost im Herben, Todten-Kortzen, erwecket, entdecket, angesteket von Christophoro Titio Silecio. Theol. St., at Nürnberg, 1663 [Library of the Prodiges-Seminar at Hannover], with 15 hymns; in the 2nd enlarged ed. pub. as Himmel-Reise, Seelen-Speise, Engel-Weise, &c., Nürnberg, 1670 (Berlin Library), with 45 hymns; and in the 3rd further enlarged ed. pub. as Vorige und neue Morgen- und Abend-Catechismus . . . Dieder, &c., Nürnberg, 1701 (Göttingen Library) with 66 hymns. The most popular were those of the 1st ed., many of which passed into the German hymn-books of the 17th cent., and various of which are still found in recent collections. The best of them are hearty and popular in style, earnest and scriptural in tone, and sententious.

Two of Titius's hymns have passed into English, viz.:—

I. O du Schöpfer aller Dinge. Holy Communion. This is a hymn of penitence before Holy Communion, and was 1st pub. in 1663, as above, as No. ii., in 8 st. of 8 l. Repeated in Crüger's Praxis, Frankfurt, 1676, No. 153; but recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, and erroneously ascribed to Johann Heinrich Keulisch or Calisius [b. 1833, at Wohlau, in Silesia; d. March 30, 1696, as chief pastor and superintendent at Gaidorf, in Württemberg]. This possibly arose from the fact that in Calisius's Hauskirche, Nürnberg, 1676, p. 388, there is a hymn beginning "O du Schöpfer aller Dinge, Dem bei dieser Morgen-Zeit," in 7 st., but it is entirely different from this hymn. Tr. as "Bow Thine ear, I now implore Thee." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845, p. 38.

ii. Sollt es gleich biswelen scheinen. Cross and Consolation. His most popular hymn, 1st pub. in 1663, as No. vi., in 10 st. of 4 l., entitled "Hymn of Consolation." Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1675, the Nürnberg G. B., 1676, Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, the Berlin G. L. S., 1863, No. 856, and many others, sometimes printed as 5 st. of 8 l.

Louwagse relates (Aock, viii. 488) that C. A. Dann, chief pastor of St. Leonard's Church, at Stuttgart, having spoken somewhat freely at the funeral of one of the courtiers, had been relegated in 1812 to the village of Oleschingen in the Swabian Alb [in 1819 to the neighbouring village of Masingen]. The king at last granted the earnest desire of the Stuttgart people for his return, and on Feb. 5, 1824, recalled him to Stuttgart. That night four friends walked over to Masingen, and in the early morning conveyed the news to Dann by singing this hymn at the door of his room.

The tr. in C. U. is:—

Seems it in my anguish lone. This is a good tr., omitting st. vi., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 201; repeated in her C. B. for England, 1865, No. 146. Included in full in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880, and abridged in the St. Aidan's College H. Bk., 1864.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Yea should it ev'n to man appear." This is a tr. of st. i., as st. v. of No. 1862, in the Suppl. of 1808 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1836, No. 605). (2) "Deem we sometimes, spirit-shaken." In L. Rehfuss's Church-cant., 1868, p. 44, only st. i., vi. being from this hymn. [J. M.]

Τῷ Βασιλεῖ καὶ Δεσποτῇ. St. Anastasius. [St. Stephen.] These stichera are appointed in the Greek Service Books in the Office for St. Stephen's Day, to be sung at Vespers. The probable date is the latter part of the 8th or the beginning of the 9th cent. [St. Anastasius, p. 43, l.] The hymn is found in the Messa, and the Anth. Græca Carm. Christ., p. 117. The tr. by J. M. Neale, "The Lord and King of all things," appeared in The Ecclesiastic and Theologian, 1853, vol. xv. p. 233, and again in a revised form in Dr. Neale's Hym. of the Eastern Church, 1862, p. 7, in 3 st. of 8 l. These texts are:—

Ecclesiastic: "The Lord and King of all things 1853. Upon the earth he born."
Hym. of the E. C., "The Lord and King of all things 1862. But yesterday was born."

Mr. Hatherly, in the 4th ed. of the Hym. of the Eastern Church, notes that "the Vespers of Dec. 27 occurring on the evening of the 26th, permits of the word 'yesterday' being used with reference to Christmas Day." [J. J.]

To Christ the Son Almighty. R. F. Littledale. [Adult Baptism.] This is a tr. by Dr. Littledale of a Syriac hymn given, together with a tr. into Latin, in Daniel, iii. p. 235. It appeared in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "F." [J. J.]

To day we're bidden to a feast. J. Cennick. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in his Sacred Hym. for the Children of God, &c., 1741, No. vi., in 8 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Before the Sacrament." In a few hymn-books a cento therefrom is given as "Together with these symbols, Lord" (st. vi.). [J. J.]

To God belongs the eternal sway. J. Mer. Ich. [Ps. xviii.] 1st pub. in his Psalms Translated or Paraphrased in English Verse, 1765, p. 293, in 48 lines. In 1797 Merrick's Psalms were republished by W. D. Tattersall "divided into stanzas for Parochial Use," and this version was given therein in 13 st. of 4 l., two lines being added to st. vii., and two lines to st. x. to make up the required number of stanzas. In this form it is unknown to modern hymn-books. In Cotterill's Sel., 1819, Ps. 97, it is given in an abbreviated and rewritten form as, "The Lord is King! let earth obey." This is given in some modern hymnals, including Kennedy, 1863, with alterations and the omission of st. ii., iii. [J. J.]

To God most awful and most high. J. Montgomery. [In time of Scarcity.] Written for the laying of the foundation stone of a Corn Mill at Sheffield, on Nov. 5, 1795, which was "built for the common use and benefit of the people." It was printed in Montgomery's Sheffield Iris newspaper the same day, and signed "Paul Positive," a nom de plume of the author. It subsequently appeared in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 260; Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 532; and his Original Hymns, 1858, No. 276. In the last two it is headed, "The poor praying for bread in the time of scarcity." It is found in a few modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

To God the only wise, Our Saviour and our King. I. Watts. [Preserving Grace.] 1st pub. in his Hym. and Spiritual Songs, 1797 (2nd ed. 1799, Bk. i., No. 51), in 5 st. of 4 l. It is found in most of the early hymn-books, especially those of a Calvinistic type, as the collections of G. Whitefield, M. Madan, and others, but to modern hymnals, except in America, it is not so well known, although still found in several books. [J. J.]

To God the only wise, Who keeps us by His word. [Doxology.] This doxology, which is in somewhat extensive use in America, is usually ascribed to I. Watts. One stanza only—the second, "Hosannah to the Word"—is from his works, and this is altered from his c. m. doxology in Hym. and S. Songs, 1707. Stanzas 1. and iii. we have not traced. The latter is 2 Cor. xiii. 14 turned into metre. [J. J.]

To God with mournful voice. Tate & Brady. [Psalm cxlii.] In the New Version, 1696, in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1836 it was re-written by J. Hall or E. Osler, probably the latter, and included in the Mitre H. Bk., as,

"In deep distress to God
I poured my care and grief," in 4 st. of 4 l., and from thence passed, without alteration, into the Wes. H. Bk., 1875,

No. 684. The version of Ps. cxx. in the Mitres H. Bk., in 3 st. of 4 l., beginning,

"In deep distress to God I cried
And He aveng'd my wrongs."

was by E. Oler, and is also found in his Church and King, 1836-37, p. 137, for the 2nd Sun. after Trinity. [J. J.]

To Him that loved us for Himself. J. Mason. [Praise.] This is No. xxxiii. of his Songs of Praise, 1633, in 4 st. of 8 l. and entitled, "A Song of Praise collected from the Doxologies in the Revelation of St. John." It is very unequal in merit, some lines being very fine, whilst others are of little worth. It has, however, the elements of a splendid hymn of Praise. In modern hymnody it is known as the hymn to which Watts is supposed to have been indebted for his "Now to the Lord that makes us know" (q.v.), a supposition which cannot be maintained. Original text in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Mason's Songs, 1859, p. 65. [J. J.]

To keep the lamp alive. W. Cowper. [In Trial and Despondency.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 74, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Dependence." In its original form it is in limited use. The extract from it beginning with st. iii., "Beware of Peter's word," is much more popular, and especially in America, where it appeared in Nestle's Village Hymns, 1824. [J. J.]

To me a sinner, chief of all. H. Alford. [Lent.] Written for and pub. in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 191, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in his Poetical Works, 5th ed., 1868. It has passed into Dale's English H. Bk., 1874; Thring's Coll., 1882, &c. [J. J.]

To me to live, let it be Christ. J. Montgomery. [The Image of Christ.] This is dated in the M. MSS., "Aug. 30, 1835." We have not traced it in print earlier than his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 122, where it is given in 3 st. of 4 l.; but probably it was published before that date. [J. J.]

Τὸ μῆγα μυστήριον. St. Andrew of Crete. [Passiontide.] This is the 3rd Ode of a Canon, containing 3 odes, found in the Compline for Great Thursday (the Thursday of Holy Week) in the Triodion, and is in 8 stanzas. It dates about 700, and was first rendered into English by Dr. Neale, and pub. in The Ecclesiastical and Theologian, 1854, p. 44, and again in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 6 st. of 6 l. as, "O the mystery, passing wonder." In this tr. st. iv. is omitted, and st. vi. and vii. are fused together. In 1863 it was included in Lyra Eucharistica, and the Parish H. Bk., and subsequently in numerous collections. [J. J.]

Τῷ παντάνακτος. [Εἰσωσε λαόν.]

Τῷ πρὸ τῶν αἰώνων. [Χριστὸς γενεῶν.]

To the hills I lift mine eyes. C. Wesley. [Ps. cxxi.] Pub. in Ps. & Hymns, 1743, in 6 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. viii., p. 235). In A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1776, st. i., ii. and iv. were given with alterations, as No. 227. This cento has gone out of use. The following arrangements of the text are in several modern hymn-books:—

1. To the hills I lift my eyes. This, with the omission of st. v., was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1806, as one of the additional hymns. It is in the revised ed., 1876, and other collections.

2. See the Lord, thy Keeper, stand. This in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, is composed of st. iv., vi. ll. 1-4; iii. ll. 5-8, altered.

3. God shall bless thy going out. In the American Unitarian Hym. for the Church of Christ, 1853, No. 74, and later American collections. It is composed of st. vi. ll. 1-4, and st. ll. ll. 5-8, altered.

This version ranks with the best of C. Wesley's renderings of the Psalms. [See G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883; and Fausters, English, § xvi.] [J. J.]

To the Source of every blessing. W. H. Bathurst. [Holy Trinity.] 1st pub. in his Psalm & Hymns, 1831, No. 2, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Praise to God." In 1853 it was included in the Leeds H. Bk., No. 443, and later in one or two collections. It is better known with the omission of st. i., as "Glory to the Almighty Father," as in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 156, and others. [J. J.]

To Thee, O dear, dear Saviour. J. S. B. Monson. [Rest and Peace in Jesus.] Pub. in his Hymns of Love and Praise, 1863, p. 172, in 5 st. of 8 l. In a few collections it begins "To Thee, O blessed Saviour"; whilst a cento, opening with line 5 of st. ii., "O Thou Whose mercy found me" is also in C. U. as in the Scottish Presbyterian Hymnal, 1876. [J. J.]

To Thee, O God, we homage pay. P. Doddridge. [Christ, the Sun of Righteousness.] This hymn is No. viii. in the D. MSS., where it is entitled "The Sun of Righteousness. From Matt. iv. 2." It is in 6 st. of 4 l. Although undated, its position in the D. MSS. shows it to be circa 1734. In Job Orton's ed. of Doddridge's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 173, the text differs somewhat from the MSS. Orton's text is repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the Hymns, &c., 1839, No. 194. It is in a few collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

To Thee, O Lord, our hearts we raise. W. C. Dix. [Harvest.] This hymn was given with five others at the end of the St. Raphael's (Bristol) Hym. for the Service of the Church, 1864, No. 202, in 4 st. of 8 l. By a printer's error it is accompanied by a note which really belonged to the next hymn, No. 203, "The Church of God lifts up her voice" (p. 1146, i.). In 1867 "To Thee, O Lord, &c." was given in the People's H., and since then it has passed into numerous collections, including H. A. & M., the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, Thring's Coll., and others. The fourth stanza is also given as a concluding chorus to Dr. Stainer's harvest anthem, "Ye shall dwell in the land." [J. J.]

To Thy temple I repair. J. Montgomery. [Distinct Worship.] Pub. in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 916, in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "A Sabbath Hymn." It was repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 286; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1823, No. 468; and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 115. It is in C. U. in its original form; as "In Thy presence we appear," in Kennedy, 1863; and as "To Thy presence I repair," in Dale's

English H. Bk., 1871. In R. Bingham's Hymns. Christ. Latina, 1871, the original, with the omission of st. v., is rendered into Latin as, "Sacratam Domini domum." [J. J.]

To us the voice of wisdom cries. J. Montgomery. [Invitation of Wisdom.] Appeared in Cotterill's Selection, 1819, No. 147, in 3 st. of 8 l., and entitled "The voice of Wisdom." In 1825, on its republication in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 501, it was partly rewritten, and given in 7 st. of 4 l., the title being also changed to "The Invitation of Wisdom." This latter text and title were repeated in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 29. It is the text in C. U. [J. J.]

To Whom but Thee, O God of grace. W. J. Irons. [Seven Words from the Cross.] In his Hymns for Use in Church, 1866, Dr. Irons included seven hymns on the words on the Cross, and repeated them in his Ps. & Hymns, 1878-75, as follows:—

1. To whom but Thee, O God of grace. St. Luke xxi. 34.
2. Thy presence, Lord, is heaven to those. St. Matt. xxvii. 46.
3. Jesu! Who for us didst bear. St. John xiv. 28.
4. O Thou, Our God, Who hearest prayer. St. Luke xxi. 42.
5. Son of God in glory reigning. St. John xiv. 28.
6. It is not finished! Lord of grace (1868). Lord, is it finished? God of grace (1873). St. John xiv. 30.
7. Faithful Creator, Lord divine. St. Luke xxiii. 49.

Most of these hymns have passed into other collections, but their use is limited. [J. J.]

To whom, my Saviour, shall I go? [Chiming to Christ.] This hymn is found in the Penitential, 1816, where it is signed "Carus." It was repeated in Nettleton's Village Hymns, &c., 1824, No. 408, in 4 st. of 4 l., and without signature. Subsequently it appeared in several collections, and amongst modern hymnals it is found in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and several others. [F. M. B.]

To-day the Lord our Shepherd leads. J. Montgomery. [The Good Shepherd.] Printed on a broadsheet for the use of Sheffield Sunday School Whit-Monday gathering, June 11, 1821, in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "J. M." There is also a copy in the mss. in Montgomery's handwriting, dated "Sep. 14, 1833." The text in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 161, is slightly altered from the broadsheet of 1821. In a few collections it begins "Now may the Lord our Shepherd lead." [J. J.]

To-day Thy mercy calls me [us]. O. Allen. [Invitation.] Appeared in his Hymns of the Christian Life, 1862, p. 102, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "To-day." It is found in several collections in Great Britain and America, and sometimes altered to "To-day Thy mercy calls us," as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It is the most widely used of the author's hymns. [J. J.]

Toke, Emma, née Leslie, daughter of John Leslie, D.D., Bishop of Kilmore, was b. at Holywood, Belfast, Aug. 9, 1812; married to the Rev. Nicholas Toke, Godington Park, Ashford, Kent, in 1837; and d. in 1872. Mrs. Toke's early hymns were written in 1831, "at the request of a friend who was collecting for the Committee of the S. P. C. K." (Müller, p. 573), and they appeared in the S. P. C. K. Hymns for Pub. Worship, 1852, as follows:—

1. Glory to Thee, O Lord (see p. 489, it.).
2. Lord, of Thy mercy, hear our cry. National Thanksgiving.
3. O Lord, in all our trials here. Saints' Days, General.
4. O Lord, Thou knowest all the snares. Lent.
5. O Thou, to Whose all seeing eye. Annunciation.
6. O Thou, Who didst with love untold. St. Thomas.
7. Thou art gone up on high. Ascension.

The most popular of these hymns are, "Glory to Thee, O Lord"; "O Lord, Thou knowest all the snares"; and "Thou art gone up on high." These hymns as a whole are simple and pleasing. They seldom rise into passionate fervour, and are weakened in several instances by faulty construction. They have been widely adopted in G. Britain and America. Another series of hymns by Mrs. Toke was contributed to the Sunday School Liturgy . . . and Hymn Book, arranged by the Rev. B. Judd, B.A., Incumbent of St. Mary's, Halifax. Halifax, F. King, 1870. These hymns have failed to attract attention, although in literary merit they fall little short of her earlier efforts. They are:—

8. Jesu! by Whose Almighty Grace. St. Andrew.
9. Lord God, the strength and stay of all. General.
10. Lord of all power and might. General.
11. Lord of light and life. St. Mark.
12. O Father, Whom in truth to know. St. Philip and James.
13. O God of comfort, Thou alone. St. Barnabas.
14. O God of mercy, chill and dark. St. John Feang.
15. O God, the strength and stay of all. General.
16. O God, upon this solemn day. St. Matthias.
17. O Thou, Who didst through heavens, &c. Purification B. V. M.
18. The joyful day at last is come. Easter.
19. This is the day when Jesus Christ. Christmas.
20. Upon this sad and solemn day. St. Friday.
21. We bless Thee, Lord, for that clear light. Conversion St. Paul.

In addition to these hymns Mrs. Toke re-wrote and expanded some of her earlier compositions. In their new form, however, they are almost unknown. [J. J.]

Τῶν ἀμαρτιῶν μου τὴν πληθύν. St. Joseph the Hymnographer. [Lent.] This is the opening line of a cento taken from a long Canon for the Monday of the First Tone in the Paracletic. It is virtually, as compiled by Dr. Neale, a new poem, representing neither the form nor the idea of the original. Dr. Neale's tr., beginning, "And wilt Thou pardon, Lord?" was pub. in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 5 st. of 4 l. In a slightly altered form as, "O wilt Thou pardon, Lord?" it was also given in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, and repeated subsequently in various collections. The Hymnary text opens, "And wilt Thou hear, O Lord?" The original dates from the middle of the ninth cent. [J. J.]

Τὸν ἐν προφήταις. St. Andrew of Crete. [St. John Baptist.] Three Idiomela from the Vespers of the Nativity of St. John Baptist, by St. Andrew of Crete (q. v.). The poems are in the form of an address to St. John, each of them closing with an appeal. It is found in the Menses. The tr. "The first of all Apostles," by Dr. Littledale, was made for and 1st pub. in the People's Hymnal, 1867, signed "L." and appointed for the Festival of St. John Baptist. St. i.-v. represent the 1st idiomelon, st. 6 the 2nd, and verses 7, 8 the 3rd. The doxology added by translator. [H. L. R.]

Τῶν ἱερῶν ἀθλοφόρων. St. Joseph the Hymnographer. [Martyrs.] The original from which this cento is taken is the Canon (see Greek Hymnody) for the Deacon St. Timothy and his wife St. Maura, whose martyrdom is commemorated by the Church of Constantinople on May 3. The Office for that day is included in the service-books of the Greek Church. The tr. of this cento was made by J. M. Neale, and first pub. in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 4 st. of 8 l., and beginning, "Let our Choir now anthems raise." As a hymn for congregational use it was included in the People's H., 1867, the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and many others, and usually with the omission of st. iii., and sometimes altered, as, "Let the Church now anthems raise," and "Let the Church now anthems sing." The martyrdom of SS. Timothy and Maura has been popularized for the English reader by Canon Kingsley, in his poem "Santa Maura," and Dr. Neale's tr. of the cento from the Canon ranks with the most popular and widely used of his trs. from the Greek. Stanzas i., ii. represent Ode i.; the remaining stanzas give rather the spirit than the letter of the original. [J. J.]

Τὸν πρὸ ἡλίου ἡλιον δύναντα ποτὲ ἐν τάφῳ. [Easter.] This is an Oktoe, or short hymn, in honour of the holy women who brought spices to anoint the body of Jesus, and follows in the Greek Office for Easter Day, a κοστάσιον (another short hymn), by St. Romanus (q. v.), to whom, possibly because of this close association, it is sometimes ascribed. It dates probably about 500, and is found inserted between Odes vi. and vii. of the Golden Canon of St. John of Damascus in the Pentecostarion. The original text, together with a blank verse tr., are given in Dr. Littledale's Offices, &c., of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 92 and p. 216, and the same tr. rendered into 8. 7s. measure by W. Chatterton Dix, in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 292. The two translations begin:—

Seeking as those who seek the day. E. F. Littledale.
As those who seek the break of day. W. C. Dix.

[J. J.]

Tonna, Charlotte Elizabeth, née Browne, commonly known as "Charlotte Elizabeth," was the only daughter of Michael Browne, Rector of St. Giles, Norwich, and was b. in Norwich, Oct. 1, 1790. She was first married to Captain George Phelan, of the 60th Rifles (who d. in 1837), and secondly to the Rev. Lewis H. Tonna. Her death took place at Ramsgate, July 12, 1846. Under the name of "Charlotte Elizabeth" she pub. several works, including Chapters on Flowers, Derry, a Tale of the Revolution, Personal Recollections, &c. Her hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Holy Father, heavenly King (1832). God Men's only Refuge.
2. O God of Israel, deign to smile. For Renunciation.
3. O Thou Who didst prepare. For Use at Sea.
4. Singer, what hast thou to show? Christians' Joy.
5. Soldier go, but not to claim. The Good Fight of Faith.

Of these hymns Nos. 3, 4 appeared in W. Urwick's Dublin Coll. of Hys., 1828. [J. J.]

Toplady, Augustus Montague, M.A. The life of Toplady has been repeatedly and fully written, the last, a somewhat discursive and sloakily put together book, yet matterful, by W. Winters (1872). Summarily, these data may be here given: he was born at Farham, in Surrey, on November 4, 1740. His father, Richard Toplady, was a Major in the British army, and was killed at the siege of Carthage (1741) soon after the birth of his son. His widowed mother placed him at the renowned Westminster school, London. By-and-by circumstances led her to Ireland, and young Augustus was entered at Trinity College, Dublin, where he completed his academical training, ultimately graduating M.A. He also received his "new birth" in Ireland under remarkable conditions, as he himself tells us with oddly mixed humility and lofty self-estimate, as "a favourite of heaven," common to his school:—

"Strange that I who had so long sat under the means of grace in England should be brought right unto God in an obscure part of Ireland, amidst a handful of people met together in a barn, and by the ministry of one who could hardly spell his own name. Surely it was the Lord's doing and is marvellous. The excellency of such power must be of God and cannot be of man. The regenerating spirit breathes not only on whom but likewise when and where and as He listeth."

To be read own grano salis; for the present writer happens to know that the lay preacher, a Wesleyan Methodist, was James Morria, and his text Ephesians vi. 13; and that he was not the illiterate man Toplady's words would have us believe. Likewise he had far more brain power than his convert, and was a born orator, though reticent and lowly-minded. Toplady received orders in the Church of England on June 6, 1762, and after some time was appointed to Broadbembury. His Psalms and Hymns of 1776 bears that he was then "B.A." and Vicar of Broadbembury. Shortly thereafter he is found in London as minister of the Chapel of the French Calvinists in Leicester Fields. He was a strong and partizan Calvinist, and not well-informed theologically outside of Calvinism. We willingly and with sense of relief leave unstirred the small thick dust of oblivion that has gathered on his controversial writings, especially his scurrilous language to John Wesley because of his Arminianism, as we do John Wesley's deplorable misunderstanding and misrepresentation of Calvinism. Throughout Toplady lacked the breadth of the divine Master's watchword "Forbid him not, for he that is not against us is for us" (St. Luke ix. 50). He was impulsive, rash-spoken, reckless in misjudgment; but a flame of genuine devoutness burned in the fragile lamp of his over-taxed and wasted body. He d. on August 11, 1778. The last edition of his works is in 6 vols., 8vo., 1825. An accurate reproduction of most of his genuine hymns was one of the reprints of Daniel Selgwick 1860. His name occurs and recurs in contemporary memoirs and ecclesiastical histories, e.g., in Tyerman's Life of John Wesley. The reader will find in their places annotations on the several hymns of Toplady, and specially on his "Rock of Ages," a song of grace that has given him a deeper and more inward place in millions of human hearts from generation to generation than almost any other hymnologist of our country, not excepting Charles Wesley. Besides the "Rock of Ages" must be named, for power, intensity, and higher afflatus and nicer workmanship, "Object of my first desire," and "Deathless principle arise." It is to be regretted that the latter has not been more widely accepted. It is strong, firm, stirring, and masterful. Regarded critically, it must be stated that the affectionateness with which Toplady is named, and the glow and passion of his faith and life, and yearning after holiness, have led to an over-exaltation of him as a hymn-writer. Many of his hymns have been widely used, and especially in America, and in the Evangelical hymn-books of the Church of England. Year by year, however, the number in use is becoming less. The reason is soon found. He is no poet or inspired singer. He climbs no heights. He sounds no depths. He has mere vanishing gleams of imaginative light. His greatness is the greatness of goodness. He is a fervent preacher, not a bard.

[A. B. G.]

Toplady's hymns and poetical pieces were published in his:—

(1) Poems on Sacred Subjects wherein The Fundamental Doctrines of Christianity, with many other interesting Points, are occasionally introduced... Dublin: Printed by S. Powell, in Crane-lane, MDCCLXXI; (2) his Ps. & Hys. for Public and Private Worship, 1778; (3) in The Gospel Magazine, 1771-1778; and (4) in Hym. and Sacred Poems on a variety of Divine Subjects, &c. D. Sedgwick's reprint, 1860. His Works, with a Memoir by W. Row, were pub. in 6 vols. in 1794. Walter Row was also the editor of the 2nd and some later editions of the Ps. and Hys. He was a most careless editor, and attributed several hymns by C. Wesley and others to Toplady.

A large number of Toplady's hymns are annotated in this Dictionary under their respective first lines. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) The following additional hymns in C. U., together with centos indicated in the sub-lines, are from:—

i. His Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1759.

1. Can my heaven-born soul submit? All for Christ.
2. Come from on high, my King and God. Holiness desired.
(1.) O might this worthless heart of mine.
3. Earnest of future bliss. The Witness of the Spirit.
4. From Thy supreme tribunal, Lord. Christ's Righteousness a Refuge.
(1.) The spotless Saviour lived for me.
5. Great God, Whom heaven, and earth, and sea. For Peace.
6. I saw, and lo! a countless throng. Saints Days. Revised form in the Gospel Magazine, 1774, p. 449.
7. Immovable our hope remains. Divine Faithfulness.
8. Jesus, God of love, attend. Divine Worship. Pt. II. Is "Prayer can mercy's door unlock."
9. Jesus, Thy power I firm would feel. Leat.
10. Lord, I feel a carnal mind. Mind of Christ desired.
11. My yielding heart dissolves as wax. On behalf of Arians, &c.
(1.) O Jesus, manifest Thy grace.
12. Not to myself I owe. Prayer for Conversion.
(1.) Not to ourselves we owe.
(2.) The Father's grace and love.
13. O that my heart was right with Thee. Dedication to God desired.
14. O Thou that hearest the prayer of faith. Christ the Propitiation.
15. O Thou Who didst Thy glory leave. Thanksgiving for Redemption.
16. O when wilt Thou my Saviour be. Trust in Jesus.
(1.) Jesus, the sinner's Best Thou art.

17. Redeemer, whither should I flee? Safety in the Cross.
18. Remember, Lord, that Jesus bled. Pardon.
19. Surely Christ thy griefs hath borne. Redemption. Revised text in Gospel Magazine, 1774, p. 548.
(1.) Weary sinner, keep thine eyes.
(2.) Weeping soul, no longer mourn.
- ii. From the Gospel Magazine.
20. Compared with Christ, in all besides. Christ All in All. Feb. 1772.
21. Eternal Hallelujahs Be to the Father given. Holy Trinity. Dec. 1774.
22. From whence this fear and unbelief. Reverting Faith. Feb. 1772.
23. How vast the benefits divine. Redemption. Dec. 1774. From this "Not for the works which we have done" is taken.
24. Whom have I in heaven but Thee? Christ All and in All. Feb. 1772. From this "If my Lord Himself reveal" is taken.
25. Jesus, immutably the same. Jesus, the True Vine. June, 1771.

All these hymns, together with "O precious blood, O glorious death" (Death of Christ), are in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns, &c., 1860. We have met with several other hymns to which Toplady's name is appended, but for this we can find no authority whatever. [J. J.]

Toss'd with rough winds, and faint with fear. Elizabeth Charles, see Bunde. [Consolation in Affliction.] Appeared in her Three Walkings, &c., 1855, p. 190. It was given in an abbreviated form of 8 l., and the refrain, "'Tis I, be not afraid," in the Hy. Comp., 1870, and again in other collections. The slight change in the text of st. iii. was made by Mrs. Charles. [J. J.]

Tourneux, Nicolas le, was born of poor parents at Rouen, April 30, 1640. The uncommon ability he displayed at an early age attracted the notice of M. du Fossat, Maître des Comptes at Rouen, who sent him to the Jesuits' college at Paris, where he made remarkable progress in his studies. He then retired to Tournai, where he passed some time with a pious ecclesiastic in the practice of prayer and penitential exercises. His friend, observing that he had a gift for preaching, advised him to return to Rouen. This he did, and adopted the clerical profession, and was in 1662 admitted to priests' orders by special dispensation, though still under canonical age. He subsequently removed to Paris, where he employed his time in study, and in 1676 obtained the prize given by the French Academy for prose composition. He was appointed to a canonry at the Sainte-Chapelle, and later became prior of Villiers sur Fore in the diocese of Soissons, and d. suddenly on the 28th Nov., 1686. He was the author of several theological and religious works, and wrote some hymns (see Index of Authors and Translators), which were inserted in the Cluniae Breviary of 1686, and the Paris Breviary of 1680. In the Cluniae Brev., 1686, his signature is "N.T.P.R." [G. A. C.]

Tract. Verses of Holy Scripture, originally always of the Psalms, sung after the Gradual instead of the Alleluia, in all masses from Septuagesima till Easter Eve in the Roman liturgy. The Tract was so called either because it was sung "tractim" by the cantor or cantors, without the interruption of other voices, or because, according to Durandus, it was sung in a slow, sad voice. In some of the later English Missals the Tract assumed a metrical form, as e.g. the following:—

" Dulce omen Jesu Christi,
Felix omen fœnis tristi
Jocundans mentem júbilo;
Tollit factum, avertit fructum,
Et obdutum et seductum
Purgat cor a rubilo.
Tam peccatum quam reatum
Condonatum, expurgatum,
Reddit mulcens leniter
Hostes ferit, mores serit,
Mala terit, graves gerit,
Plenum est præsidium;
Nos defendit, nos ascendit,
Nos intendit, et extendit
Hoc nomen in gaudium.
Nominatum, invocatum,
Honoratum, prædicatum
Semper sonat dulciter."

This Tract in the Masses of the Name of Jesus is found in three ms. Missals now in the Bodleian, viz., a Sarum (Barlow 5), a York (Univ. Coll.), and a Hereford (Univ. Coll.), each dating about the end of the 14th cent. [F. E. W.]

Tregelles, Samuel Prideaux, LL.D., s. of a Quaker, was b. at Wodehouse Place, Falmouth, Cornwall, Jan. 20 (sometimes dated Jan. 30), 1813, and educated at the Falmouth Grammar School. From 1838 to 1844, he was employed in the Neath Abbey Iron Works. In 1836 he became a private tutor in Falmouth. His deep interest in biblical studies developed in an earnest desire to produce the most perfect edition of the Greek Testament it was possible to publish. The first specimens of his work were pub. in 1838, and the first instalments of his task for public use, in 1844. His Greek Testament thus begun was pub. in parts, Pt. vi, appearing in 1872. The work was hindered by his two attacks of paralysis (1861 and 1870); and the Prolegomena had to be added by Dr. Hort and A. W. Stronach in 1879. Dr. Tregelles received a Civil List Pension for some years. He was one of the Revisers of the New Testament, but ill-health prevented him from taking an active part in the work. He d. at Plymouth April 24, 1875. His hymn-writing began, so far as we can gather, before 1837, and extended to 1861 or later. The earliest were pub. in the Plymouth Brethren's Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1838; their Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, 1842; and their Few Hymns and some Spiritual Songs, selected, 1856. Some also were contributed to Dr. P. Maurice's Ch. of England Choral Hymn-Book, 1861, in which they are marked as having been supplied in "ms." Some of those so marked were, however, in print before. His hymns now in C. U. include the following, the date of each as given being that of the collection named in which it appeared:—

1. Father, we Thy children bless Thee. Thanksgiving for Divine Mercies; and the Second Advent (1838). In the Few Hymns of 1866, st. iv., v. were given as No. 310, "Father, O how vast the blessing."
2. Holy Saviour, we adore Thee. The Second Advent desired (1838).
3. Lord Jesus, we believing. Peace to Jesus (1861).
4. O God of grace, our Father. Praise for Electing Grace (1866).
5. O look not on the Cross of Christ. Christ the One Oblation (1861).
6. The gloomy night will [shall] soon be past. Heaven anticipated (1842).
7. Thou God of grace, our Father. Praise for Electing Grace (1838).

8. Thou, Lord of all, on earth hast dwelt. Passion-side (1861).
9. Thou, O God, Thy love commendest. Complete in Jesus (1861).
10. Thy Name alone, O Lord, we own. Jesus, our Strength and Safety (1861).
11. Thy Name we bless, Lord Jesus. Jesus, the Name over all (1858).
12. 'Tis sweet, O God, Thy praise to sing. The Sacrifices of Praise (1861).
13. 'Tis sweet to think of those at rest. The Dead in Christ; or, All Saints (1842).
14. 'Twas the Holy Ghost who taught us. Passion-side (1841 Appendix to Hymns for the Poor of the Flock).
15. Worthy the Lamb is now the song. Communion of Saints (1861).

The use of Dr. Tregelles's hymns is mainly confined to the Plymouth Brethren; and taken as a whole they are marked by no striking features of excellence. [J. J.]

Trench, Richard Chenevix, D.D., was b. in North Frederick Street, Dublin, on Sept. 9th, 1807, during a visit of his parents of some months to Ireland. His father was Richard Trench, 8th son of Frederick Trench, of Woodlands, co. Galway; his mother Melesina, only grandchild and heiress of Richard Chenevix, Bishop of Waterford, and widow of Colonel St. George. On his mother's side he was almost purely French, the grandfather of Bishop Chenevix of Waterford, Philip Chenevix of d'Épily of Lorraine having only taken refuge in England on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The Huguenot refugee families married for a long time within themselves, and in Mrs. Richard Trench, four distinct foreign strains were blended. Her sons (the Archbishop and his brothers, besides his two sisters) were the only descendants of the Refugee Philip, either in the male or female line, all the other branches having come to an end. Trench's home in childhood was Elm Lodge, close to the village of Bursledon, not far from Southampton. In February, 1816 he proceeded to Teyford School, and in 1819 to Harrow, where he won great distinction. In October 1825 he was entered at Trinity College, Cambridge. His mother's correspondence is full of references to a little periodical called The Translator, begun in 1823, or immediately on his becoming an undergraduate. She was his ardent co-worker both as contributor and critic. In 1826 he had acquired Spanish, and in that year applied himself to preparing and publishing a volume of Miscellanies, of which the "profits were to be sent to the committee formed for the relief of the exiled Spaniards." On May 27th, 1827, his mother died at Malvern. The Letters and Memorials (1888) give vivid and exciting details of his continuous interest and daring personal service and sacrifices on behalf of Spain. It was during the winter days of 1829-30 that the consultations and schemes respecting Spain were discussed in John Sterling's apartment. Robert Boyd, Trench's cousin, threw himself and his entire fortune into the plot by purchasing a small ship in the Thames and storing it with arms, in which General Torrijos and fifty picked Spaniards were to sail for the new adventure of the Golden Fleece. The enterprise ended tragically. Boyd and others perished by the inevitable vengeance of the Spanish sovereign when captured. By the hand of God, Trench was safe in Gibraltar. Till far up in young manhood he was unde-aided as to his calling, Law rather than Divinity colouring his thoughts and plans. He left Cambridge on February 1st, 1829, and rejoined his widowed father at Elm Lodge, near Southampton. He married, at the Abbey Church, Bath, on May 31st, 1832, his own cousin, Frances Mary Trench, daughter of his uncle, Francis Trench (2nd son of Frederick Trench, of Woodlawn, co. Galway, Ireland, and next brother to the 1st Lord Ashdown). On October 7th, 1832, he received Deacon's Orders in Norwich Cathedral at the hands of the aged Bishop Bathurst of Norwich. His first curacy was at Hadleigh, Norfolk, with H. J. Rose. He was ordained priest early in July, 1835, by Bishop Sumner, of Winchester. He pub. in 1835 The Story of Justin Martyr, and other Poems (Moxon). This was (practically) his first book. In 1838 followed Sabbation, Honor Neale, and other Poems, with Notes. In 1840 appeared his first prose work, Notes on the Parables of our Lord, subsequently companionable with Notes on the Miracles of our Lord (1846). In 1841 "the loving discipline of pain" visited his heart and hearth by the death of his eldest born, a deep sorrow which gave its subtlest and finest inspiration to his Elegiac Poems. A third volume of poetry, Poems from Eastern Sources, the Steadfast Prince, and other Poems, was pub. early in 1842; and a fourth, Genoveva, later in the same year. Early in 1843 he delivered his Five Sermons before the University of Cambridge, pub. in 1844. In 1844 also was pub. Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount, drawn from the Writings of St. Augustine, with Observations. In this same year he became Vicar of Itohen Stoke. In 1845 he delivered a lecture "On Language as an instrument of Knowledge," which expanded into his famous and suggestive Study of Words. In 1846 he was appointed Professor of Divinity at King's College, London, later changed into "Professor of the Exegesis of the New Testament," which he held until 1858. The friendship between Trench and Maurice here was very beautiful. In 1846 also came the Hulsean Lectures, their subject being Christ "the Desire of all Nations." In 1849 appeared his Sacred Latin Poetry. This is an inestimable book. In 1852, Lessons on Proverbs and Study of Words, and in 1855 English Past and Present appeared. His Synonyms of the New Testament (1854) was a permanent contribution and inspiration to Philology and Theology. Life's Dream: the Great Theatre of the World, from the Spanish of Calderon, with an Essay on his Life and Genius, was pub. in 1856; 2nd ed. in 1880. The Crimean war drew from him his finest verse, Poems written during the Russian War (1854-55). In 1856 he was appointed Dean of Westminster. In 1861 was pub. his Commentary on the Epistles to the Seven Churches in Asia. On New Year's Day, 1864, he was consecrated Archbishop of Dublin in Christ Church Cathedral. He instantly took a foremost place in the regard of the entire community. His pub. Sermons, including his Studies on the Gospels (1867), are amongst the most thoughtful and quietly eloquent in our language; as are his Lectures on Plutarch (1873), and others. Timoleon (1881) was his last poem. His final confirmation was in St. Bartholomew's Church on May 16th, 1894. On November 28th, 1884, he resigned his Archbishopric. He d. in London, March 28, 1896. Few have left behind them a more stainless, a more loveable, a more enviable memory. He was sweetness and light embodied. [A. B. G.]

In the strict sense of the word Archbishop Trench, although a poet, was not a hymn-writer. Some of his poetical pieces are used as hymns, but their use is limited. These include:—

1. High thoughts at first, and visions high. Ordination. Appeared in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., 1835, p. 63, in 1 st. of 8 l., and entitled "To a Friend entering the Ministry." (Poems, 1865, i. p. 30.) Its use as a hymn is in an abbreviated form.

2. I say to thee, do thou repeat. Safety in Divine Guidance. Pub. in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., 1835, in 10 st. of 3 l., again in his Poems, 1865, p. 98, and ed. 1885, i. p. 140. It is headed, "The Kingdom of God."

3. Let all men know that all men move. Love of God. Pub. in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., 1835, p. 111. It is given in Dale's English H. Bk., 1874; Horner's Cong. Hym., 1894, and others.

4. Lord, weary of a painful way. Evening. Appeared in his Sabbation, Honor Neale, &c., 1836, p. 117; and Poems, 1865, i. p. 207.

5. Not Thou from us, O Lord, but we. Divine Love. Pub. in his Story of Justin Martyr, &c., 1835, p. 62, in 14 l., and in his Poems, 1865, i. p. 103.

6. Pour forth the oil, pour boldly forth. The Law of Love. Appeared in his Sabbation, Honor Neale, and Other Poems, 1836, p. 132, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Law of Love," also in his Poems, 1865, p. 150, and ed. 1885, i. p. 215. From this is taken the hymn, "Make channels for the stream of love."

7. Some murmur when their sky is clear. Contentment. Pub. in the Sabbation, Honor Neale, and Other Poems, 1836, p. 118, in 2 st. of 8 l., in his Poems, 1865, p. 113, and ed. 1885, i. p. 142.

8. Thou inevitable day. Death. From his Sabbation, Honor Neale, &c., 1836, p. 92, in 14 st. of 3 l., and headed, "The Day of Death." Also in Poems, 1865, i. p. 213. [J. J.]

Trestrail, Elizabeth Ryland, née Dent, was b. at Milton, near Northampton, March 24, 1813, and is great-granddaughter of the Rev. John Collet Ryland, A.M., grand-niece of the Rev. John Ryland, D.D. (v. Ryland, John), and sister of Miss Caroline Dent (p. 283, ii.). Her first husband was John Roby, banker, of Rochdale. In 1858 she was married to the Rev. F. Trestrail, D.D., an eminent minister of the Baptist Denomination.

Mrs. Trestrail contributed a few pieces to the Thoughts and Sketches in Verse, pub. by her sister. She also wrote the Sketch of the Life & Character of John Roby, prefixed to his Legendary & Poetical Remains (Longmans, 1854). She was also joint authoress with her sister of a small vol. of consolatory verses printed for private circulation, and entitled Our Darling (1861). Only one of Mrs. Trestrail's hymns is in C. U.—"Hallelujah! Praise the Lord" (Præterit). It was written in 1864, in celebration of the Jubilee of the Baptist mission in Jamaica, and is No. 5 in the Bap. Ps. & Hym. for School and Home, 1832. [W. R. S.]

Trinitas, Unitas, Deitas æterna. [Trinity Sunday.] Given by Mone, No. 6, from a Munich ms. of the 12th cent. and arranged in 36 lines, and repeated in Daniel v. p. 206, and Kehrein, No. 141. Tr. as:—

Trinity, Unity, Deity, Eternal [Majesty]. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Psalms, 1854; the Hymnary (with alterations), 1872; the Hymner, 1882, &c. [W. A. S.]

Triodion. [Τριώδιον.] [Greek Hymnody, § xiv., xvi. 10.]

Trisagion. [Τρισάγιον.] [Greek Hymnody, § x. 7.]

Tritton, Joseph, was b. at Battersea, Surrey, Sept. 21, 1819, educated at Charterhouse and other schools, and was for upwards of 40 years a partner in the banking-house of Barclay, Bevan, Tritton & Co., Lombard Street. He was a member of the Baptist Denomination, and for many years Treasurer of the Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, and of a number of other important philanthropic and religious institutions. During the latter part of life his residence was Bloomfield, Norwood. He d. May 1, 1887. Mr. Tritton was for many years an occasional writer of hymns and poems. Two of the hymns sung at the opening of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, in 1861, were composed by him for that occasion, and afterwards incorporated by Mr. Spurgeon in O. O. H. Bk., 1866. These are:—

1. Sing to the Lord with heart and voice. Opening of a Place of Worship.
2. Spirit of glory and of grace. Opening of a Place of Worship.

A third hymn in the same book,

3. Behold He comes! the glorious King (Second Advent).

was composed in 1856. In the 1880 Supplement to the Bap. Ps. and Hys. are two hymns prepared for use at meetings of the Baptist Missionary Society in 1880. These are:—

4. Head of the Church and Lord of all. Missions.
5. Lord God of our salvation. Missions.

Other hymns of merit by Mr. Tritton have appeared from time to time in The Missionary Herald. [W. R. S.]

Triumphe! plaudant maria. [Ascension.] Probably of the 17th cent. Included in the Sirenes symphonicas, Cologne, 1678, p. 108; the Psalterium cantionum catholicorum, Cologne, 1722, p. 114; in the Hymnodia sacra, Münster, 1763, p. 118; and in Daniel li. p. 365. Tr. as:—

1. Sing victory, O ye seas and lands. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediæval Hys., 1851, p. 157.
2. With all your floods attending. By H. Kynaston, in his Occasional Hys., 1862, p. 106, and the Hymnary, 1872.
3. O clap your hands, ye oceans. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1837, with the signature, "B. T." In The St. Michael's Hyl., Teignmouth, it begins, "O clap your hands, great ocean." [J. M.]

Troparia. [Τροπάρια.] [Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 10.]

Troparium. The Tropary was a mediæval service-book, of which specimens exist from the 9th century onwards. It contained the Tropitags or fuses prefixed to or inserted into the Introit, Kyries and other choral parts of the service. It also contained the Sequences or Proseæ ad Sequentiam, an extension of the last syllable of the Alleluia preceding the Gospel. These non-scriptural and complicated additions to the Ordinary and Canon of the Mass mostly fell out of use in the thirteenth century. Those which survived became incorporated in the Gradual or Missal. But the word Troparium still appears from the 13-16th century, with an altered meaning, as a book merely containing the Sequences. A 15th cent. (ss. Troparium in the Bodleian Library (Laud.

c. 90), imperfect at the commencement, contains 101 Sequences, and another Bodleian ms. of the same date (Laud. Misc. 524) contains 65. See also Brit. Mus. ms. Add. 8902, 15th cent., and article on Sequences. [F. E. W.]

Trope. Tropes were short verses prefixed, or added to, or introduced into the middle of the Introit, Gloria in Excelsis, and other choral parts of High Mass, and added much to the intricacy of the service. They were certainly in use in the tenth century, perhaps earlier, but they were entirely excised from the Roman Missal in the revision under Pius V. They seem occasionally to have taken a metrical shape. The following, given as among the Tropes in an ancient English Troparium for the recently baptized, at Easter or Pentecost, is an instance.

"Audite vocem hymni
Qui estis vere digni
In hac beata nocte
Concedite ad fontem," etc.

Paschalis Liturgicum, ii. 816.

[F. E. W.]

True Bread of Life, in pitying [tender] mercy given. H. Bonar. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 2nd series, 1861, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The True Bread." It is usually given in 4 st., and sometimes as "True Bread of Life, in tender mercy given," as in T. Darling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, 1887. [J. J.]

Try us, O God, and search the ground. C. Wesley. [Prayer for Unity.] Pub. in the Wesley Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 4 parts, as follows:—

- i. Try us, O God, and search the ground. This part is in 6 st. of 4 l. It was included, with the omission of st. v., in G. Whitehead's Ps. & Hys., 1753, p. 135; M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, No. 122; and in later collections to the present day. The full form of the text was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 489. Both forms are in extensive use. G. J. Stevenson's note in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 316, is especially interesting as setting forth the spiritual use of these stanzas.
- ii. Jeau, all power is given to Thee. This is in 8 st. of 4 l. Not in C. U.
- iii. God of our life, at Thy command. In 6 st. of 4 l. Not in C. U.
- iv. Jeau, united by Thy grace. This part, in 9 st. of 4 l., was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 490, and has also passed in full or in part into several collections in G. Britain and America. In the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853, st. i. and iii. are given as "Father, united by Thy grace."

There are also the following centos in C. U.:—

1. The sacred bond of perfectness. This, in the American Methodist Episco. Hymns, 1849, &c., is composed of st. vi.-ix. of Pt. iv., slightly altered.
2. Through Him Who all our sickness felt. This, in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1875, is thus composed: st. ii. and iii. are from Pt. I. (st. iii., iv.), and st. i. and iv. are based upon thoughts and expressions scattered through the four parts.

The complete hymn is headed "A Prayer for persons joined in Fellowship." Full orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, ii. p. 136. [J. J.]

Tu Christe nostrum gaudium. [Ascension.] This is a portion of "Asterne Rex altissimo" (p. 29, ii.), and begins with line 37. It is in the Sarum and Aberdeen Breviaries; in Daniel i. No. 162, and Mone, No. 172. Its use was on the Vigil of the Ascension, and Daily up to Pentecost. Tr. as:—
L O Christ, Thou art our joy and light. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, 1852, p. 209. In this Lauda Syn., 1857, p. 101, and the Hymner, 1882, it begins "O Christ, Thou art our joy alone."

8. O Christ, our joy, gone up on high. D. T. Morgan, in H. A. & M., 1875, and his Hys. and Other Poetry of the Latin Church, 1880.

Other tra. are:—

1. Lord Christ, our living Joy art Thou. W. J. Blaw, 1882-85.
2. O Christ, the Source of our delight. J. C. Earle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus. 1884. [J. J.]

Tu qui velatus facie. [Passiontide.] Mone, Nos. 87-91, gives this from a 14th cent. Beichonan ms. where it bears the title "Hours of the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ, compiled from the Prophets and the New Testament by the blessed Pope Urban." [The pope meant may possibly be Urban the 4th, pope 1261-1264; more probably Urban the 5th, b. 1302, d. 1370.] It is in five parts, viz.: i. "Tu qui velatus facie," for Prime; ii. "Hort qui ductus tertia," for Terce; iii. "Crucem pro nobis subit," for Sext; iv. "Beata Christi passio," for None; v. "Qui jacuisti mortuus," for Compline. Mone's text is repeated by Daniel iv. p. 220, who adds that an office with this hymn was in use at Halberstadt till the beginning of this century. [W. A. S.]

The trs. of this hymn into English, and as divided for divine service, are:—

1. Tu qui velatus facie. Prime.
 1. Thou, Who though veiled Thine glorious face. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Egon, 1887, p. 164.
 2. O Thou, Who, though with veiled face. By Elizabeth Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1888, p. 175.
 3. Sun of Righteousness, blast face. By F. Oakeley, in his Devotions Commemorative of the Most Adorable Passion of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, 1842.
 - ii. Hora qui ductus tertia. Terce.
 1. Thou Who at this third hour of dread. By J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 165, with the opening line given as "Tu qui hac hora tertia."
 2. Thou Who at the third hour wast led. By Mrs. F. Charles, as above, p. 177.
 3. Who to die, along the road. By F. Oakeley, as above.
 - iii. Crucem pro nobis subit. Sext.
 1. The Cross for us the Saviour bore. By J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 165.
 2. For us the bitter cross He bore. By Mrs. E. Charles, as above, p. 177.
 3. The Cross for us see Jesus bear. By F. Oakeley, as above.
 - iv. Beata Christi passio. None.
 1. Now may Christ's blissful Passion ever. J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 168.
 2. Christ's blessed Passion set us free. By Mrs. E. Charles, as above, p. 178.
 3. Suffering Christ, we pray to Thee. By F. Oakeley, as above.
 - v. Qui jacuisti mortuus. Compline.
 1. Thou sinless King, Who stark and dead. By J. D. Chambers, as above, p. 167.
 2. O Thou Who layest dead, the King. By Mrs. E. Charles, as above, p. 178.
 3. Who in the grave. By F. Oakeley, as above.
- Of these trs. those by Mrs. Charles are in Thring's Col., 1882; and those by Canon F. Oakeley, in Skinner's Daily Service Hyl., 1884. [J. J.]

The Compline hymn "Qui jacuisti mortuus" has also been rendered into English through the German as follows:—

Der da Herr Jesu, Ruh und East. Included in the Königsberg G. B., 1860 (preface 1843), p. 167, in 2 st., marked as by Georg Werner. It is also in Crüger's Præcis, 1848, No. 125, the Ünw. L. S., 1861, No. 82, &c. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Lord Jesu, Who with holy rest. In full, as No. 28, in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.
2. Lord Jesu, Who our souls to save. A full and good tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1859, p. 36, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No.

55. Repeated in the Irish Church Hyl., 1868 and 1873; Boardman's Sol., Philadelphia, 1861; Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1869; Ohio Luth. Agendas, 1880, &c.

[J. M.]

Tu Trinitatis Unitas. St. Gregory the Great? [Friday Morning.] (St. ii. is "Jam [Nau] lectulo consurgimus.") Mone, No. 279, and i. p. 372, gives this as probably by St. Gregory (it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors), and cites it as in a ms. of the 8th cent. at Trier, one of the 9th cent., also at Trier, &c. By Hinomar in his De und et non trinā Deitate, 887, it is ascribed to St. Ambrose; but it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors nor by Biraghi in his Ann. sinceri e Carni de Sant' Ambrogio, 1862. Daniel gives the text at i. No. 25, and at iv. p. 38 cites it as in a Rhcinan ms. of the 10th cent. ranking it as one of the hymns of the 7th or 8th cent. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 22; Jul. A. vi. f. 28; Harl. 2961 f. 224); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium (Add. 30851 f. 174 b), an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848 f. 78 b), &c. It is in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 236); in two mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387, 413; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Sarntees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 8 b). It is included in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and the revision of 1682), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1648, and other Breviaries, as a hymn on Friday at Matins and Nocturna. The text is also in Wackernagel i., No. 6, Hymnarium Sarrab., 1851, p. 54; in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and G. M. Dreyer's Hymnarium Moisiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. See also note on following hymn. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Dread Unity in Trinity. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 40. This is given in the Hymnary, 1873, in an abridged and altered form, as "Dread Trinity in Unity."
2. O Three in One and One in Three. In the Antiphoner and Grad., 1880, p. 20.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. Thou great mysterious Three and One. Primer, 1706.
2. Holy Being, One and Three. Sp. K. Mont., 1837.
3. Thou Unity of Trinity. J. D. Chambers, in his Præcis, 1852.
4. May the dread Three in One, Who sways. Card. Newman, 1863.
5. Dread Triune Mystery. Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.
6. O Thou, Who dost all nature sway. E. Caswell, 1849.
7. Thou Trinity of Unity. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
8. O Three in One, eternal Cause. F. Frappes, 1866.
9. Thou Godhead One in Persons Three. J. Wallace, 1873. [J. J.]

Tu Trinitatis Unitas. [Trinity Sunday.] This cento was added to the Roman Breviary at the revision of 1568, and is found at p. 436 of the ed. pub. at Rome in 1570, as the hymn at Lauds on Trinity Sunday. It consists of st. i. of the hymn noted above, and of st. iii. of the hymn "Aeterna coeli gloria" ("Ortus refulget lucifer"); with an added doxology. This form is repeated in the 1632 and later eds. of the Roman Breviary, and in Card.

Newman's Hymni Ecclesias, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Thou great mysterious Three and One. Primer, 1708.
2. Three in One, and One in Three, Sov'reign of the universe. Ep. Doane, 1824.
3. Thee Trinity in Unity. Ep. J. Williams, 1848.
4. Thrice-holy One, All-glorious Trine. W. J. Copeland, 1848.
5. O Thou! Who dost all nature sway. E. Caswell, 1849.
6. Thou Three in One, Who mightily. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.
7. Thou Godhead One in Persons Three. J. Wallace, 1874.
8. Blast Three in One, and One in Three. R. Campbell, circa 1850, from the Campbell ms. into O. Shipley's Aetna Sanctus, 1884. [J. M.]

Tuba Domini, Paula, maxima. Peter Abelard. [Conversion of St. Paul.] Cousin in his ed. of Abelard's Opera, Paris, 1849, vol. i. p. 320, gives this from a ms. in the Royal Library at Brussels. This ms. is of the 12th cent. and is probably the collection of hymns which Abelard prepared for the use of the Abbey of the Paraclete, of which Heloise was abbess. The text is given with full notes in Trench, ed. 1864, p. 207. Also in Neale's Sequentiae, 1852, p. 98, Daniel v. p. 234, and Kehrein, No. 385. It is tr. as "Mightiest of our militant Lord," in the Monthly Packet, 1869. The tr. which in some copies of the Hym. Noted is marked as from this hymn, is really from the "Paula doctor egregia": p. 387, l. [J. M.]

Turner, Daniel, M.A., was b. at Blackwater Park, near St. Albans, March 1, 1710. Having received a good classical education, he for some years kept a boarding-school at Hemel Hempstead, but in 1741 he became pastor of the Baptist church, Reading. Thence he removed, in 1748, to Abingdon, and continued pastor of the Baptist church there until his death on Sept. 5, 1798. He was much respected throughout his denomination, and was the friend and correspondent of Robert Robinson, Dr. Rippon, and other eminent men of that day. He probably received the honorary degree of M.A. from the Baptist College, Providence, Rhode Island. Turner was the author of works on Open Communion and Social Religion; also of Short Meditations on Select Portions of Scripture. His Divine Songs, Hymns and other Poems were pub. in 1747, and his work, Poems Devotional and Moral, was printed for private circulation in 1794. Four of his hymns are in the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash & Evans (1769), and eight (including the four already named) in Rippon's Bap. Sel. (1787). Only the following are now in C. U.:—

1. Faith adds new charms to earthly bliss (1769). Excellence of Faith.
2. Jesus, full of all compassion (1769). Stoner's appeal to Christ.
3. Lord of hosts, how lovely fair (1787). Divine Worship. Altered in Baptist Ps. and Hymns, 1863, in "Lord of hosts, how bright, how fair!"

The well-known hymn "Beyond the glittering starry skies," in its enlarged form of 28 stanzas, was the joint production of Turner and his brother-in-law, the Rev. J. Fanch, for details of which see p. 189, ii. [W. R. S.]

Turney, Edward, D.D., an American Baptist minister, was b. at Easton (then Weston), Connecticut, May 6, 1816, and graduated at Madison University, New York. He was successively pastor at Hartford and at Granville, Ohio (1842-47); Professor of Biblical Criticism, Madison University, 1850, and also of Biblical Literature at Fairmount Theological Seminary, Cincinnati (1853-58). Subsequently he taught in Washington, District of Columbia. He d. at Washington, Sept. 28, 1872. He pub. Baptismal Hymns, 1862, and Memorial Poems and Hymns, 1864. Of these hymns the following are in C. U.:—

1. Blessed Jesus, blessed Jesus. Peace and Rest in Jesus.
2. Come to Jesus, little one (1860). Invocation.
3. I will go in the strength of the Lord (circa 1860). Missions. In the Church Missionary Gleamer (English) in 1861.
4. O love divine, O matchless grace (1864). Divine Love.

These hymns are in the Memorial Poems & Hymns, 1864. [F. M. B.]

Tuttiett, Lawrence, M.D., son of John Tuttiett, surgeon in the B.N., was b. at Cloyton, Devonshire, in 1825, and educated at Christ's Hospital, and King's College, London. It was originally proposed that he should follow the medical profession, but, abandoning it for the ministry, he took Holy Orders in 1848. In 1854 he became vicar of Lea Marston, Warwickshire; and in 1870 incumbent of the Episcopal Church of St. Andrew, Scotland. He was also preferred to a prebendaryship in St. Ninian's Cathedral, Perth, in 1880. He is the author of several manuals of prayer, and by the S. P. C. K., and other prose works, and also of:—

- (1) Hymns for Churchmen, 1854; (2) Comasts of a Godfather, 1861; (3) Hymns for the Children of the Church, 1862; (4) Germs of Thought on the Sunday Service, 1864; (5) Through the Clouds; Thoughts in Plain Verse, 1866.

From those works and other sources the following hymns have come into C. U.:—

1. As calmly in the glowing west. Evening.
2. Come, our Father's voice is calling. Confirmation. Appeared in his Hym. for the Children of the Church, 1862, in 6 st. of 4 l. It passed into Mrs. C. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861.
3. Grant us Thy light that we may know. Divine Guidance. Included in his Germs of Thought, &c., 1864, in 6 st. of 4 l. In Horner's Cong. H. Bk., 1884; the Universal H. Bk., 1888, it begins, "O grant us light that we may know."
4. I come, O Father kind. Holy Communion.
5. Lo, like a bride, in pure array. Septuagesima.
6. No sign we seek from heaven above. After Holy Baptism. Pub. in his Hym. for Churchmen, 1854, in 4 st. of 6 l. It has passed into several collections, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871; Turing's Coll., 1882, &c.
7. Now, eternal Father, bless. Holy Baptism. In his Hym. for the Children of the Church, 1862, in 3 st. of 6 l., and Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861. In the latter it is attributed to Ep. MacLagan in error.
8. O happy Christian children. Divine Protection. From his Hym. for the Children of the Church, 1862, into Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861, &c.
9. O Jesus, ever present. The Good Shepherd. Pub. in his Germs of Thought, 1864; in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871; and many others.
10. Shepherd good and gracious. The Good Shepherd. In his Hym. for the Children of the Church, 1862; Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861, &c.
11. Sometimes o'er our pathway. In time of Trouble. From his Hym. for the Children of the Church, 1862, in 3 st. of 8 l., into Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861.
12. What the world is brightest. Litany to the Saviour. Pub. in his Through the Clouds, &c., 1866, in 10 st. of 8 l., with the note:—"These words were written for the music of a Roman Litany 'Ave Stella Maria.'" This Litany is in extensive use.
13. Who is this? the long expected. Advent.

In addition to these, several of Mr. Tuttiett's hymns are annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators), the most popular of which are, "Father, let me dedicate"; "Go forward, Christian soldier"; and "O quickly come, dread Judge of all." Mr. Tuttle's hymns are characterised by smoothness of rhythm, directness of aim, simplicity of language, and deep earnestness. Those for special services and seasons are of great merit. He d. May 21, 1897. [J. J.]

"Twas on that night when doomed to know. John Morison. [Holy Communion.] First appeared as No. 35 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, in 6 st. of 4 l., as a version of Matt. xxvi. 26-29. Here st. iv. ll. 1, 2, read:—

"Then taking in his hands the cup,
To Heav'n again he thanks sent up."

The rewriting of these lines was the only change made in the public worship ed. issued in that year to the Church of Scotland, and still in use. The hymn bears a close resemblance to a Latin hymn, beginning, "Nocte qua Christus rabidia Apellis" (Private Prayers, p. 405, Parker Society, 1831, quoted in full in the notes to the larger ed. of the Free Church H. Bk., 1882), by Andreas Elmagar, who was b. 1526 at Orlantunde, on the Saale, a little above Jena, and d. March 12, 1582, at Jena, where he had become Professor of Medicine in 1569. Mr. William Bonar, of London, considered it a tr. from Ellinger by William Archibald (ordained parish minister of Unst, Sutherland, in 1735, d. there March 7, 1785), and that Archibald's text was altered by Morison for the Translations and Paraphrases. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ll.), it is ascribed to Morison. It is very generally used in Scotland as a Communion hymn. Included in Burgess & Money's Ps. & Hys., 1857; Common Praise, 1879; Church Praise, 1883, and other collections; and in full and unaltered, as No. 35 in the Free Church H. Bk., 1882. The resemblance to Watts's "Twas on that dark and doleful night," in his Hymns, 1709, Bk. iii., No. 1, often referred to, is but slight. [J. M.]

"Twas silence in Thy temple, Lord. J. Keble. [Ordination.] Dated March 28, 1828, and pub. in the 4th ed. of his Christian Year, 1828, in 13 st. of 4 l. The following couplets therefrom are in C. U.:—

1. Spirit of Christ, Thine earnest given (st. viii.). In Hardey's Cong. Hymns, 1884.
2. Spirit of Christ, be earnest given (st. viii.). In the Cong. Church Hymnal, 1887.
3. Spirit of Light and Truth, to Thee (st. x.). In the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1889; the New Cong. H. Bk., 1889, and others.

It is somewhat curious to note that whilst this poem has been thus made use of by Non-conformists, the Church of England, upon whose Office for Ordination it is based, has utterly ignored it in her hymnody for public worship. [J. J.]

Twells, Henry, M.A. was b. in 1823, and educated at St. Peter's College, Cambridge. B.A. 1848, M.A. 1851. Taking Holy Orders in 1849, he was successively Curate of Great Berkhamsted, 1849-51; Sub-Vicar of Stratford-on-Avon, 1851-54; Master of St. Andrew's House School, Mells, Somerset, 1854-66; and

Head Master of Godolphin School, Hammer-smith, 1856-70. In 1870 he was preferred to the Rectory of Baldock, Herts, and in 1871 to that of Waltham-on-the-Wolds. He was Select Preacher at Cambridge in 1873-74, and became an Honorary Canon of Peterborough Cathedral in 1884. Canon Twells is best known by his beautiful evening hymn, "At even ere the sun was set" (p. 84, ll.). He also contributed the following hymns to the 1689 Suppl. Hys. to H. A. & M.:—

1. Glorious is Thy Name, O Lord. The Name of God.
2. Know ye the Lord hath borne away? Ascension.
3. Not for our sins alone. Prayer for Divine Mercy.
4. The voice of God's Creation found me. The Word of God a Light. [J. J.]

Two brothers freely cast their lot. Card. Newman. [SS. James and John.] Written at sea, June 22, 1833, and printed anonymously in the British Magazine, 1835, vol. vii. p. 661, in 4 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Lyra Apostolica, 1836, p. 31, and again in Card. Newman's Verses on Various Occasions, 1868. Usually in modern collections it is appropriated to St. James, and a doxology is usually added, as in the Wellington College H. Bk., 1860, or as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. [J. J.]

Two clouds before the summer gale. J. Keble. [St. Luke.] Written April 6, 1822, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 20 st. of 4 l. It is also given in all subsequent editions of the same work. In 1854 a cento from this poem, consisting of st. ix.-xii., xix. and xx. were given with slight alterations, in Hys. for the Christian Seasons, pub. at Gainsburgh, No. 148, as, "Behold and see Christ's chosen saint." This cento is also given in the same form in Chope's Hymnal, 1862. [J. J.]

Tye, Christopher, MUS. D., b. at Westminster in the reign of Henry VIII. He was celebrated as a musician, and was granted the degree of MUS. D. at Cambridge in 1545. He was musical tutor to King Edward VI. and organist of the Chapel Royal under Queen Elizabeth. Besides composing numerous anthems, he rendered the first fourteen chapters of the Acts of the Apostles into metre, which were set to music by him and sung in Edward 6th's Chapel, and pub. in 1553. [English Hymnody, Early, § vi.] He d. circa 1550. [J. J.]

Tyers, John, was b. at Wymeswold, in Leicestershire, Oct. 14, 1782. For a number of years in the earlier part of his life he lived at Loughborough, where he was in business as a lace manufacturer. In 1835 he removed to Leicester, where he d. Sept. 11, 1848. Mr. Tyers was a General Baptist, widely known and much respected, and though never the pastor of a church, was often engaged in preaching. Seven of his hymns are in the 1830 Appendix to the General Baptist Hymn-book, and two as below in the Baptist Hymnal, 1879:—

1. Come, Holy Spirit, from the throne. The Holy Spirit.
2. Great God, avow this house Thine own. Opening a Place of Worship.

Besides these Mr. Tyers wrote a number of hymns for Sunday Schools, which appeared in the school hymn-books of his day, but are no longer in use. He was also the author of a short poem on the Death of the Rev. Robert Smith, of Nottingham (Lond., 1829). [W. B. S.]

Tymms, Thomas Vincent, was b. in Westminster, Jan. 5, 1842. After being educated for the Baptist ministry in Regent's Park College, London, he became, in 1865, pastor at Berwick-upon-Tweed. Thence, in 1868, he removed to Accrington, and in 1869 to London, where he now ministers to an influential congregation in the Downs Chapel, Clapton. In 1885 Mr. Tymms published an able book entitled The Mystery of God; a consideration of some intellectual hindrances to Faith (2nd ed. 1886; a 3rd ed. 1887). Mr. Tymms has written several hymns, which have been printed in the 1880 Supplement to the Bap. Psalms and Hymns, and in the Bap. Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882:—

1. Another Sabbath ended (1866). Sunday Evening.
2. In Shiloh, where Thine ark was stored (1861). Prayer to the God of Sassaui.
3. O Lord of glory, be my light (1862). Invocation.
4. Lord, I read of tender mercy (1862). Tenderness of Jesus.

Of these hymns, No. 4, originally in 7 st. of 4 l., was altered and abridged to 5 st. in the Bap. Ps. and Hys. for School and Home. The original st. v.-vii. are:—

Ulrich Anton of Brunswick. [Anton Ulrich.]

Ultricibus nos undique. C. Coffin. [Friday.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1786, and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, of the same year, p. 27. In the Paris and other French Brevs, it is the hymn for Fridays at Lauds from Trinity to Advent. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 80, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. While Thine avenging arrows fall. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 35, and again with alterations as "Lord, while Thy chastening arrows fall," in the Hymnary, 1872.
2. Lord, when Thine avenging dart. By G. Risson, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 58. In the 1869 Appendix to the same No. 307, the last 4 st. are given as "Lord, Thy chastening hand we fear."

Other trs. are:—

1. While Thine avenging arrows, Lord. J. Chandler, 1837.
2. When Thou, O God, Thine own elect. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
3. Great Searcher of our hearts, Whilset Thy, &c. D. T. Morgan, 1860. [J. J.]

Ἕμνοῦμεν κούρον νύμφας. Synesius. Bp. of Ptolemais. [Christmas.] This is hymn v. of the ten hymns which he wrote at various periods of his life, and dates 375-490. It opens as a hymn for the Nativity, but expands into a prayer to Christ in the fulness of His glory. The Greek text is found in the Anth. Græca Carra. Christ., 1871. From this Mr. Chatfield's tr.:—"Awake, our lute, the child to sing" was made, and first pub. in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, in 18 st. of 4 l. [See Greek Hymnody, § v.] [J. J.]

Ἕμνοῦμέν σου Χριστὲ, τὸ σωτήριον Πάθος. [Easter.] The author of these "four Resurrection Stickers of the Octoechus" is unknown. They are found in the Office for the "Sunday of Easter," as reprinted by Dr. Littledale in his Offices of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 95, together with a blank verse tr. at p. 220. This latter has been rewritten by W. Chatterton Dix, and included in the Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 277: "Christ, we sing Thy saving passion." This was repeated in the People's H., 1867. [J. J.]

Uncta Cruz Dei cruce. Jean Baptiste de Santosil. [Holy Cross.] This is a cento from three of his hymns, viz: (1) "Luce quanta se sub una;" (2) "Publici fontana salutis;" and (3) "Totius fons sanctitatis"—all given in his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1698, pp. 93-96. It was appointed in the revised Paris Brev., 1786, as the hymn at Lauds at the Feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross. Tr. as "With the precious blood anointed" by "Sister M." for the Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 46. Repeated in the People's H., 1867, and marked as from "Uncta Dei Cruz cruce." [J. J.]

Under Thy wings, my God, I rest. Anna L. Waring. [Trust in God.] 1st pub. in her Hys. and Meditations, 1850, No. xv., in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words "I will trust in the covert of Thy wings," Ps. lxi. 4. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, it is given as, "Beneath Thy wings, O God, I rest." [J. J.]

Ungrateful sinners, whence this scorn? P. Doddridge. [Despising Divine Mercy.] This hymn is No. 72 in the D. MSS., headed, "Of despising Divine Mercy, and treasuring up Wrath. From Rom. ii. 4, 5." In Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, the same text and heading were given as No. 258; and in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 258. This hymn was given, with slight changes, in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, from a ms. described under Doddridge, P., in Vacua. In the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraph., 1781, the 1745 text was recast, viz., st. i. from 1745; st. ii. from 1745, with scorn for "spurn"; st. iii. from the 1751 Draft; st. iv. new; st. v. Doddridge rewritten; st. vi. new. According to the marked list by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, it.) this final form of the hymn was by Cameron. [J. J.]

Unheard the dew drops around me fall. [Peace amid silence.] This hymn appeared anonymously in Dr. G. W. Briggs's (Unitarian)

Hys. for Pub. Worship, Boston, 1845, in 4 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Hedge and Huntington's Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, and later American collections; and in Martin's Hymns, &c., 1873. In Stopford A. Brooke's Christian Hys., 1881, No. 177, it is slightly altered, and another stanza (iv.) is added. This text is repeated in Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, No. 438. [J. J.]

Unitarian Hymnody, Welsh. [Welsh Hymnody.]

Unitarian Hymnody.—For the right understanding of English Unitarian Hymnody a few words of historical introduction are needed.

1. The English Presbyterians, after close fellowship with the Independents during the early decades of last century, gradually moved into a separate position. Through force of circumstances they had become as much congregational in their system of church government as their neighbours, but after the Salters' Hall controversy of 1719 they were more and more confirmed in the principle of non-subscription to any formulated statement of belief, the Bible only being their standard of authority in matters of doctrine. The consequence was that while the Independents at the close of the century occupied much the same doctrinal position as at the beginning, the Presbyterians had passed through various changes. Their original Calvinism had been abandoned for a form of Arminian doctrine, and then, through the influence of such men as Locke and Dr. Samuel Clarke (their teachers, though not of their fellowship), they gradually adopted the scheme of Arianism. This was held in various degrees of precision, until it passed into Unitarianism, as in the person of Dr. Friesley and those who thought with him, towards the close of the century. A similar change had taken place in a portion of the General Baptist churches, especially in the south of England, and those two groups of non-subscribing congregations were naturally drawn together by their common sympathies. Then there was the congregation of Unitarians organised in Essex Street Chapel, London, by Theophilus Lindsey, on his leaving the Church of England, as early as 1774; and to these have been added during the present century other congregations, either through doctrinal development (as with certain Methodist Societies under Joseph Cooks, early in the century, or later through the influence of Joseph Barker), or through fresh missionary effort on the part of established societies of Unitarians. (Cf. Rev. J. J. Tayler's Retrospect of the Religious Life of England, chap. 3 and 5, and Rev. Brooke Herford's Story of Religion in England, chap. 30, 32 and 33.) In Wales and Ireland there are also similar groups of non-subscribing churches, in which Unitarianism is now the prevailing doctrine. Taken together, all these are popularly known as the Unitarian body of this country, but it is a body which has not always been Unitarian, and is in fact a group of Free Churches, which hold to the fundamental principle of the liberty of prophesying, and impose no restraint of formulated creed on further doctrinal development. It is of the hymn-books and hymn-writers of this group of churches, various in their origin, but united in their broad principles, that the present article is to speak. [See also references to special articles on p. 1191, i.]

2. The marked individualism which from early times has characterised the members of these churches appears also in their hymn-books. From the time when the various departures from the use of Dr. Watts began, about the middle of the last century, to our own day, there has been a long succession of books, often two or three appearing in a single year; and although occasionally a book has made its way into very general use, there has never been any one recognised hymnal of the whole body of churches. The Psalms and Hymns of Dr. Watts were as popular for some time with the Presbyterians as with the Independents. The Psalms on their appearance, quickly superseded the books previously used, and in many congregations remained in use even to the close of last century, when various other books had already been provided. These others had their origin at first in the needs of special congregations. As the doctrinal movement into Arianism became more decided, and as Watts himself had not lived to make that revision of his work, which his own reported change of opinions would have required, ministers of Presbyterian congregations in various parts of the country took in hand to supply the want. They either made a selection from Watts, with the necessary alterations, or compiled a supplement to the Psalms from his hymns and other sources, or made an entirely new collection, in which, while Watts remained predominant, his psalms and hymns were mingled with those of other writers. This last was the course most frequently adopted.

3. Thus in 1757 there appeared

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Divine Worship, London, Printed and sold by J. Noon, at the White Hart, in Cheapside, near the Poultry; James Waugh, at the Turk's Head, Lombard Street; and Aaron Turz, in Exeter. This was a collection of 218 psalms and hymns, the authors in addition to Watts being Addison, Tate & Brody, Browne & Doddridge. It is said to have been edited by Rev. Micaiah Towgood, Arian Minister of James's Meeting, Exeter, and was certainly used by his congregation. A second ed., enlarged to 346 psalms and hymns, was printed in 1779, by W. Grigg, at Exeter. In the year following the first appearance of this book, it was reprinted with alterations and additions for the Presbyterian congregation of Lewin's Mead, Bristol.

In 1760 the Rev. Michael Pope, minister of the Leather Lane Meeting, in London, followed the same example, though in more independent fashion. His book is entitled Psalms and Hymns for Divine Worship, London: Printed for J. Waugh, in Lombard Street; J. Ward, in Cornhill; J. Buckland, at the Book; T. Longman, at the Ship; W. Fenner, at the Angel and Bible, in Paternoster Row; and E. Dilly, in the Poultry, 1760, and is known as Pope's Col. It is divided into two parts, (1.) 228 psalms, of which 176 are by Watts, 28 by Tate & Brody, others by Patrick, Addison, Doddridge, Flexman, &c. (II.) 203 hymns, nearly half being by Watts, other authors being Doddridge, Addison, A. Pope, Browne, Grove, Kippis, Flexman, and Amory (?). This collection was the first in which the hymns of the four last authors (all Presbyterian ministers) appeared. The alterations and omissions from the psalms and hymns of Watts and others, due to the editor's Arianism, or to his poetical taste, are considerable.

A similar, though smaller collection, appeared in Liverpool in 1764, edited by Revs. John Breckell and W. Enfield, ministers of the Key Street and Benn's Garden chapels respectively:—

A New Collection of Psalms proper for Christian Worship, in Three Parts. I. Psalms of David, &c. II. Psalms of Praise to God. III. Psalms on Various Subjects. Liverpool. Printed in the Year 1764. There are 242 psalms, more than half by Watts, and in addition to names mentioned above, Gibbons, Carter, Rowe, Cotton, Ogilvie, Huginbotham, and Steele, are represented. There were later editions in 1767 and 1770; in 1787 a new edition was printed (for J. Gore), with 66 psalms added to the third part, including some by Mrs. Barbauld and T. Scott. This edition, entitled merely A Collection of Psalms, &c., was reprinted in 1788 and 1806. A few years after it was superseded by new collections separately made for each of the two congregations.

4. Different in character from the above collections was Dr. Enfield's second book:—

Hymns for Public Worship, selected from Various Authors, and intended as a supplement to Dr. Watts's Psalms. Warrington. Printed for the Editor, 1772. Later editions 1781 and 1789. Its character is indicated by the title. There are 160 hymns, more than a third being selected from Watts's hymns, while after Doddridge, Mrs. Barbauld and Thomas Scott hold the chief place. Some of their hymns appeared for the first time in this collection.

5. Different again was a book issued without date, but probably in 1780, by two Presbyterian ministers, Revs. W. Wood and Benj. Carpenter:—

An Abridgment of Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, with some alterations. To which is added an appendix containing some hymns, selected from other authors. Birmingham. Printed by Piercy and Jones, and sold by them and by the editors at Dudley and Stourbridge. This collection is notable for the very slight alterations of Watts, when compared with what he has undergone other hands. It contains 163 psalms and then 116 hymns. Only the last 14 hymns form the appendix, by Addison, Doddridge, Kippis, and T. Scott. A third edition considerably enlarged, with an entirely new title-page, was issued in 1802 as A Selection of Sacred Poetry, adapted to Public and Private Worship. In Three Parts. Stourbridge. Printed and sold by J. Fleming. The former appendix of 14 hymns is enlarged to a third part, and includes hymns by Wesley, Cowper, Beddome, Steele, Dyer, &c.

6. These are examples of various departures from the exclusive use of Dr. Watts in the old Presbyterian congregations. The collection of Theophilus Lindsey was of other origin. To the second edition of his Book of Common Prayer Reformed according to the Plan of the late Dr. Samuel Clarke, prepared in 1774 for use in Essex Street Chapel, he appended—

A Collection of Hymns and Psalms for Public Worship. London. Printed for J. Johnson, No. 72, St. Paul's Church Yard, 1774.

It contains only 127 hymns and psalms, of which more than half are by Watts. In subsequent editions, 1784, 1793, 1805, 1822 (the last two by Rev. T. Belsham), it was gradually enlarged. In the editions of 1835 and 1848, by the Rev. T. Madge, it became practically a new collection.

7. The method of appending hymns to the forms of liturgical services had already been adopted in Liverpool in 1763 by the congregation which met for a few years in the Octagon Chapel. To their "Form of Prayer" was added A New Collection of Psalms, for the use of a Congregation of Protestant Dissenters in Liverpool. It contains only 150 psalms, and is quite distinct from the larger Liverpool Coll. of 1764. Other examples of the same practice are found in the Mansfield Liturgy of 1797, and the Sherborne Devotional Services for the Public Worship of the One True God, issued in 1812 by Rev. W. Blake (the second), of Crewkerne. The title-page of the Salisbury Forms of Prayer for Public Worship, 1776, also promises a collection of hymns, but apparently it was not issued until two years later, as

A Collection of Hymns for Public Worship: on the general Principles of Natural and Revealed Religion. Salisbury: Printed in the year 1778.

There is more originality shown in this collection than in the other books of the same period. Watts and Doddridge are not so strikingly predominant, there is greater variety of authorship, several hymns by John and Charles Wesley (greatly altered in some cases) being introduced; and "of the originals contained in this collection the greater part consist of peculiar metres, which have been but lately introduced into psalmody." One of the editors, Rev. Benj. Williams, the last minister of the old Presbyterian congregation in Salisbury, was a man of considerable poetical power. He contributed hymns of his own, including "Holy, holy, holy Lord"; and the adaptations of Methodist hymns, of which in more than one instance only the first line and the metre are adopted, and a quite new hymn written, are full of genuine music. The collection contains 316 hymns, without names of authors.

8. There were other notable collections made by Presbyterian ministers about this time. The Rev. Newcome Cappe, minister at St. Saviour-gate, York, a Biblical critic of clear Unitarian convictions, was the editor of A Selection of Psalms for Social Worship. York: Printed by A. Ward, 1786. On the title-page are printed extracts from Watts's preface to his Psalms and Hymns, and a passage from a sermon of Lardner's, expressing the view that in worship only language should be used in which all devout Christians of whatever party could join without offence. The preface elaborates the same position, and contains an "explication of terms and phrases," to aid in the right understanding of the chief theological ideas which are found in the book. There are 279 psalms, arranged in four books, according to metre, long, common, short and particular. Similar collections were that of Rev. George Walker of Nottingham:—

(1) A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Public Worship, united with the disputed doctrines of any sect. Warrington. Printed by W. Egges. . . 1786, and:—

(2) Psalms and Hymns for the use of the New Meeting in Birmingham. Birmingham: Printed by J. Thomason, 1790.

This latter collection was edited by Rev. William Hawkes and Dr. Joseph Priestley, ministers of the congregation. In the preface they say:—

"Most of the variations from Dr. Watts's compositions have been made for the sake of rendering the sentiment unexceptionable to Unitarian Christians. . . . Propriety of sentiment was the first thing to be attended to; and it is to long use only that many of Watts's own verses are indebted for the little offence they now give even to the ear, and much more to the understanding."

The alterations are very freely made in accordance with Priestley's theological views, but often apparently only from difference of taste, not always to the advantage of the poetry.

In 1791 the larger number of the new books perished in the fire by which the mob destroyed not only Priestley's house, but both the Old and the New Meetings. Part of the issue had been provided for the congregation of Cross Street Chapel, Manchester, and remained in use there until the introduction of Kippis; but the Birmingham congregation, joining for a time in common worship with their friends of the Old Meeting, returned to the use of Watts's Psalms and Hymns, which the latter congregation had not yet relinquished. Afterwards a fresh collection was made for the New Meeting, issued in three books successively in 1799, 1805, and 1834. The Old Meeting adopted Kippis.

9. Among the Presbyterians in the North of Ireland the Scottish Psalms and Paraphrases occupied the same place as Watts's Psalms and Hymns with their brethren in England. The first book of their own seems to have been the Hymns for the use of the Presbyterian Congregation in Lisburn. Belfast, 1787,—a collection of 100 hymns taken from much the same sources as the English books, altered in the same way. A somewhat larger collection, but of similar character, was A Collection of Psalms and Hymns proper for Christian Worship. In two parts. I. Psalms of David. II. Sacred Hymns. London-Derry, 1788. Second ed. 1794. This book was afterwards discarded by the congregation as not sufficiently orthodox.

10. The collection known variously as Kippis or Bees, from two of its editors, was the first of the Unitarian books to attain to any very extended circulation. It went through many editions, and has remained in use in some out-of-the-way places until quite recently. It may be taken as typical of the kind of Unitarianism most prevalent in England at the beginning of the present century, before the deeper spiritual influence of Channing made itself felt on this side of the Atlantic. The title of the book is:—

A Collection of Hymns and Psalms for Public and Private Worship; selected and prepared by Andrew Kippis, D.D., F.R.S., & F.S.A.; Abraham Rees, D.D., F.R.S., F.L.S.; The Rev. Thomas Jervis, and the Rev. Thomas Morgan, LL.D. London, 1795. The editors were all Presbyterian ministers resident at that time in London. The preface states that hitherto the Presbyterian societies in the Metropolis and its vicinity have been contented with Dr. Watts's Psalms, with the exception of one congregation, which has a book of its own (Pope's Coll., 1740, at the Leather Lane Meeting). To remedy this defect the present compilation is made on the same principles as the earlier Presbyterian collections. Alteration and adaptation are freely resorted to, in order to avoid whatever might "clash with the sentiments, or hurt the feelings of any sincere Christian." There are 680 hymns by more than 80 authors, including Watts, Mrs. Steele, Doddridge, Herrick, Jervis, Mrs. Barbauld, Thomas Scott. Other well-known names are Milton, Dryden, Addison, Pope, Cowper, Burns, besides many less remarkable, common to the early Presbyterian books. In 1807 a Supplement of 94 hymns was added, and in 1852 a much enlarged Supplement, edited by Rev. Edmund Kell.

The general impression made by Kippis is of a somewhat cold and external piety. Though very excellent in moral tone and exhortation, too much of its celebration of the attributes of God and the greatness of His works touches no spring of living emotion, and the redemptive work of Christ seems to be viewed rather from outside than expressed in the kindling words of actual experience. It must be added however that the hymns of Cowper, J. Wesley's "Commit thou all thy griefs," and others which spring from the deeper sources of inspiration, are included in the volume.

11. In spite of the considerable popularity attained by Kippis, it is not too much to say that during the 45 years between its appearance and the publication of Martineau's Hymns for the Christian Church and Home, on an average one Unitarian hymn-book, large or small, was issued every year. It was a period of considerable activity in Unitarian propagandism, and several of the books are of importance. Only a few can be so much as named here, e.g.:—

Dr. Enfield's Norwich Coll. of 1795; the Exeter Coll., 1801; Dr. Estlin's (Bristol), 1808; Rev. W. Turner's (Newcastle), 1806; Norwich, 1814; Liverpool, Paradise Street, 1816; Samuel Dobell's, 1817; Liverpool, Reshaw Street, 1818, and again 1836; Warrington, 1819 (the curious book in which the editors object to "the introduction of the term soul, in connections where it necessarily implies an immaterial and separable principle in man"); Dukinfield, 1822 (still in use); R. Wallace's, 1822; Rev. J. J. Taylor's (Mosley Street, Manchester), 1829; Dr. Carpenter's (Bristol), 1831; Rev. Benj. Carpenter's (Nottingham), 1838.

In Ireland appeared the Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs; selected for the First Congregation of Presbyterians in Belfast, 1801, which in that congregation superseded the use of the Psalms and Paraphrases, and was itself superseded by A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for the use of the Presbytery of Antrim and the Congregation of Strand Street, Dublin. Belfast, 1818, really a new ed. of the earlier book. There was also Rev. A. G. Malcom's Newry Coll., 1811.

12. In 1810 Rev. Robert Aspland of Haekney published A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Unitarian Worship, which passed through several editions, and to which in 1824 a supplement was added. This is said to be the first instance of the term Unitarian appearing on the title-page of a hymn-book. To hold such doctrine was still a penal offence. This collection contains 500 hymns for private and domestic as well as public worship, by more than 60 authors. There is greater variety and freshness of devotional expression than in Kippis.

13. The two books between Kippis and Martineau which had the widest circulation were those known as the Exeter Coll. and Howse's Coll. The former was A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Social and Private Worship, Exeter, 1812, edited chiefly by Dr. Lant Carpenter, at that time minister of the George's Meeting. Many editions were printed, not only at Exeter, but also at Glasgow and London, the 12th ed. being London, 1835. It is a collection of 313 hymns, and while strictly Unitarian in doctrine, it aimed "to increase the number of suitable hymns especially referring to Christian privileges and requisitions." The same may be said of A Selection of Hymns and Psalms for Christian Worship. By H. E. Howse, jun. Bath, 1830. Of this nine editions were printed, and it was extensively used by the congregations of Gen. Baptists who had become Unitarians, as well as by others, in some cases until quite recently. There are 528 hymns by about 80 authors.

14. One other book of this period must be named:—

A Collection of Hymns for Public and Private Worship. Compiled by John R. Beard. London: John Green. Manchester: Forrester & Fogg, 1837.

The peculiarity of this collection was that only hymns by Unitarian writers were admitted. The result was a collection of 560 hymns by 55 authors, the chief contributors being: John Bowring, William Gaskell, J. C. Wallace, J. R. Wreford, John Johns, S. G. Bulfinch, J. Brettell, and Mrs. Barbauld. Only a few of these hymns have passed into general use in G. Britain, and the principle of selection has not found favour among the Unitarians of the English non-subscribing churches. Many of these hymns have however passed into American Unitarian collections.

15. In 1840 appeared the book which has made the most striking epoch in the history of Unitarian hymnody. As Képpis fairly represents the condition of English Unitarians at the end of last century, so the may be taken as the best expression of the new spirit of devotion which, largely through the influence of Channing, had for some time been making its way in their societies. When the new hymn-book appeared Dr. Martineau was minister at Paradise Street Chapel, Liverpool. It was to some extent only a prophecy of what was to be, for the book was received at first with objection in some quarters; but quickly made its way, and, far more generally than Képpis at the beginning of the century, superseded all earlier collections. It is now the book most widely used among Unitarians in England. It was a collection of 650 hymns, Mrs. Adams's "Nearer, my God, to Thee" being added as hymn 651 to the 10th ed. of 1853. The preface develops the thought of worship as being the natural expression of emotion, awakened in the mind "possessed with the religious or mysterious conception of God, of life and death, of duty, of futurity," and shows how the substance of the devotion of the various writers, whose hymns are adopted, is preserved, while the special dialect of their dogmatic theology is changed into a more universal language.

Of the 161 authors from whom selection is made not a third could be rightly classed as Unitarians: the chief of these being Adams, Barbauld, Bowring, Bryant, Butler, Enfield, Estlin, Furness, Gaskell, Johns, Norton, Pierpont, the Roscoe, J. K. Smith, John and Emily Taylor, Ware and Wreford. But the chief contributors are members of other Churches, Catholic, Lutheran, Anglican, Wesleyan, Baptist, Independent, and others; Dr. Watts standing first with 77 hymns, and after him Montgomery with 57, Doddridge 53, Charles Wesley 45, Heber 28, Cowper 14, Newton 14, Conder 12, Hemans 11, Steele 10, Milman 10. The hymns are divided into six books according to their subjects.

16. From 1840 until the appearance of Dr. Martineau's last collection in 1873, was a period not so prolific as the preceding in Unitarian hymn-books. This was natural, since the need of the churches had been so well supplied. Various books for individual congregations were however issued. Among these may be named:—

(1) W. J. Fox's Hymns and Anthems, London, 1841, to which were first contributed the hymns of Sarah Adams; (2) the Plymouth Hymns for Public and Private Worship, 1858; (3) the Liverpool Benschaw Street Hymns, Chants, and Anthems; selected and arranged by John Hamilton Thom, 1858; (4) a new Evangelical Collection, 1863, edited by Rev. T. W. Chignell; (5) the Rev. Charles Clarke's Book of Prayer and Praise, Birmingham, 1871; (6) the Rev. J. P. Hopp's Hymns for Public Worship, Glasgow, 1873. In Ireland appeared the (7) Psalms, Paraphrases and Hymns for Christian Worship, Belfast, 1841, and in 1856 what was really a new edition of the above, also at Belfast, (8) Hymns for Christian Worship; edited by members of the Non-subscribing Presbyterian Church of Ireland. Further editions in 1861 and 1866.

17. This period however not only added greatly to the treasures of Christian hymnody, but witnessed marked further changes in the religious attitude of the free churches, for which particularly Dr. Martineau produced his earlier hymn-book. To meet the fresh need he published:—

Hymns of Praise and Prayer, collected and edited by James Martineau, LL.D., D.D., "Vatum scriptis solutum Ecclesiae." London, Longmans, 1873.

There had come to be less importance attached to the external historical records, Biblical incidents were less dwelt upon than formerly, and greater stress was laid on the inwardness of the religious life, identifying Christianity with the religion of Christ in its pure and personal essence. And so in this collection the new hymns admitted belong "chiefly to the poetry of the inner life; while the old hymns excluded mainly deal with objective incidents either in Biblical history or in the apocalyptic representation of the future." But besides the change in character of the collection there were large additions to be made from new writers. There are 797 hymns, 417 being also in the former collection and 380 added. Of hymns where names are given there are 255 authors, those not included in the former collection being gathered from every quarter of the Church, from the Roman Catholic to the Unitarian. Among them are Newman, Faber, Caswall, Procter, Lyte, Neale, Trench, Bonar, Gill, Ellerton, Lyuch, Waring, Whittier, Parker, Emerson, Holmes, the Longfells, Jones Vary, Johnson, Clarke. In amount of contribution Watts loses his pre-eminence, Montgomery standing first with 67 hymns, then Charles Wesley with 58, Watts 49, Doddridge 34, Heber 17, Faber 16, Cowper 15, Barbauld 15, Lyte 15, Conder 13, Hemans 11, Gill 11. The same principle of alteration is adhered to as in the earlier collection, "for grave reasons of religious veracity." The growing acceptance of this collection in the "Nonconformist Broad Church," for which it was designed, shows that it has rightly gauged the condition of the religious life of English Unitarians. After Hymns for the Christian Church and Home it is now used in their societies more than any other book.

18. Of subsequent collections the most notable are the Hymns of Experience and Hope, Manchester, 1874, a small but choice selection edited by Revs. F. E. Millson and S. Farrington; Hymns, Chants and Anthems for Public Worship, edited by John Page Hopps, Leicester, 1877, now used in several congregations; and the Bedford Chapel Christian Hymns, London, 1881, edited for his congregation by Rev. Stopford A. Brooke, on his leaving the Church of England.

19. From the above account of Unitarian hymn-books it will be seen that with one exception their material has been largely drawn from writers belonging to other branches of the Christian Church, and that the work of the editors has been more that of selection and adaptation from common sources than a collecting of new material. There are however a considerable number of original writers among Unitarians in England as well as America, some of whom are well known beyond the borders of their own immediate circle.

20. In the old Arian days there were several liberal ministers whose hymns occur repeatedly in the earlier collections and less uniformly in the modern books, who stand naturally in the line of development which has resulted in modern Unitarianism. Such were Henry Grove, Thomas Scott, Roger Flexman, John Breckell, and somewhat later, Benj. Williams, Henry Moore, and the editors Kippis, Jarvis, Walker and Knifield. Among Unitarian hymn-writers in the latter part of last century the first place must be given to Mrs. Barbauld, with whom are naturally associated the Norwich group of the Taylors and Sir J. E. Smith, William Roscoe of Liverpool, and his gifted children. Other contemporaries, passing gradually on to a new generation, were Dr. Estlin, Fendlebury Houghton, Edmund Butcher, William Lamport, John Rowe, George Dyer, Helen Maria Williams, and in Ireland Dr. Drennan and William H. Drummond. Of those born later in the last century were John G. Robberds, Sir John Bowring, W. J. Fox, J. C. Wallace, Jacob Brettell, Hugh Hutton, and in Ireland David Whyte and A. G. Malcolm. Belonging entirely to the present century are the Martineaus, Sarah Adams, John Johns, Dr. Wreford, William Gaskell, Samuel Greg, Thomas Hincks, John Pogo Hopps, and others.

Of the chief of these further notice will be found elsewhere in this Dictionary. In the alphabetical list given below brief notes are added concerning the rest.

[Abbreviations:—K. = Kippis. M. 1 = Martineau's Hymns for the Christian Church and Home. M. 2 = Martineau's Hymns of Praise and Prayer. H. = J. P. Hopps's Coll., 1877. B. = Belfast Coll., 1886.]

In 1796 it was included in the revised Paris Brev. for the Feast of St. John at the Latin Gate. It was repeated in later French Brevs., and also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesies, 1888 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. What frenzy doth the city move! By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk. 1862-55.
2. Through Rome's infuriate city. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "F. R."

Urbs beata Hierusalem, diota pacis visio. [The Dedication of a Church.] This "rugged but fine old hymn," as Archbishop Trench calls it, is probably of the 6th or 7th cent., and is based on 1 Peter ii. 5, Rev. xxi., and Eph. ii. 20. It is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum, viz.: in one of the Early English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 119), and in two of the Early Spanish Church (Add. 30848, f. 465; Add. 30851, f. 155b). Also in the 84. Gall ms., No. 387, of the 11th cent. In the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 157, it is printed from the Vesp. D. xii. G. M. Dreves, in his Hymnarius Moirastensis, 1888, p. 73, prints it from a ms. of the 10th cent. It is also in Daniel, i. No. 219; Mone, No. 251; Wackernagel, i. No. 124; F. A. Marrot's Lat. Hys., 1875, p. 208, &c. As it has generally been printed from comparatively recent mss. it is here given from the three 11th cent. mss. noted above, viz. (a) Vesp. D. xii., (b) Add. 30848, (c) Add. 30851.

- (1) "Urbs beata Hierusalem, diota pacis visio, Quas construitur in coelo vivis ex lapidibus, Et angelis ornata ut sponsata comite.
- (2) "Nova veniens a coelo nuptialis thalamo, Præparata ut sponsata copuletur domino, Pietate et mari ejus ex auro purissimo.
- (3) "Porta nitent margaritis aditis patentibus, Et virtute meritorum illuc introductur Omnis qui pro Christi nomine hoc in mundo premitur.
- (4) "Tonsionibus, pressuris expolitis lapides, Sulsque apianis locis per manus artificis, Disponuntur permanenti sacris aedificis.
- (5) "Angularis fundamentum lapis Christus missus est Qui compage parietis in utroque necitur, Quam sicut sancta suscepit, in quo credens permanet.
- (6) "Omnia illa Deo sacra et dilecta civitas Plena modulis in laude et canore subilo, Trinum Deum unicumque cum favore predicat.
- (7) "Ecce in templo, summe Deus, exortatus adventi, Et clementi bonitate precum vota suscipere, Largam benedictionem hic infunde jugiter.
- (8) "Hic promereantur omnes petita accipere, Et adepti possidere cum sanctis permittit, Paradisum introire, transire in requiem.
- (9) "Gloria et honor Deo usquequo altissimo, Una Patri, Filioque, inclyto Paraclyto, Cui laus est et potestas, per æterna sæcula."

The principal variations in these three mss. are:—

- i. l. 3, "Et angelico ornata," b. c. i. l. 3, "ut sponsa comitur" c. ii. l. 3, "fortes atque mari ejus," b. c. ii. l. 2 "ille," b. c. iii. l. 3, "pro Christi nomen," b. c. iv. l. 2, "Suis copulantur locis," b. c. vi. l. 3, "unumquoque," c. vii. l. 1, "Deus sumus," b. c. viii. l. 1, "acquirere," a. ix. l. 1, "Deo, virtus et imperium," b. ix. l. 2, "Una Patri inolytoque Filio Paraclyto," b. In b. and c. st. vi. precedes st. v. In c. there is no doxology. In the Mosses MS there is an additional st. inserted before st. vii. and another inserted after st. viii. These are not found elsewhere, and clearly form no part of the original hymn. Otherwise the Mosses text is practically the same as the above, except in the doxology.

A discussion has arisen as to the antiquity of st. vii., viii., the sum of which is this:—

Daniel, No. 219, suggests that st. vii., viii. are a later addition meant to adapt a hymn on the Heavenly Jerusalem for use on a Dedication Festival. But there does not seem to be any foundation for this idea, since these stanzas are found in the oldest mss.; and according to his own showing there are hymns for the dedication of a Church probably as old as this (see Christe quatorum, p. 338, li.). He adds the statement that Martens (de Antiq. Ecclæ. Disciplina, p. 431), says that in a Pontifical of the 10th cent. of the diocese of Poitiers this hymn is directed to be sung at the Benediction of the Font on Holy Saturday. For this purpose Daniel suggests that st. vii., viii. are inappropriate: but how any one examining these stanzas can say so puzzles us to see. Trench (Sacred Latin Poetry, ed. 1864, p. 313), says: "The hymn coheres intimately in all its parts, and in ceasing to be a hymn in Dedicatione Ecclesiae it would lose its chief beauty. It is most truly a hymn 'of degrees' ascending from things earthly to things heavenly, and making the first to be interpreters of the last. The prevailing intention in the building and the dedication of a church, with the rites thereto appertaining, was to carry up man's thoughts from that Temple built with hands, which they saw, to that other built of living stones in heaven, of which this was but a weak shadow (Durandus, Rationale, l. 1) . . . This poem witnesses for its own true inspiration, in the fact that it has proved the source of manifold inspiration in circles beyond its own."

Dr. Neale's opinion on this matter is set forth in his Mediæval Hys., 1861, p. 28.

"Daniel imagines these stanzas to be a later addition, when the hymn, originally general, was adapted to the Dedication of a Church. Mr. Trench, on the contrary, will have the whole poem to be of one date: and alleges, very truly, that this mixture of the earthly and heavenly temple is usual in hymns and sequences on a similar subject. Nevertheless, I think that Daniel is right. 1. Because there is a clear difference in the style and language of the two last and seven first stanzas. 2. Because the transition from one part to the other is so unusually abrupt. 3. Because, at the end of the sixth stanza, there is a quasi-doxology as if to point out that the hymn originally concluded there."

This hymn passed into many mediæval Breviaries, always for the Dedication of a Church, and sometimes given as a whole, but often divided into two parts, with st. v.-viii., as a separate hymn, beginning Angularis fundamentum. So in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Paris of 1643 and 1736 (in both cases beginning Urbs Jerusalem beata), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and others. Occasionally st. vii., viii. are given separately as Hos in templo, sumus Deus.

2. In the revised Roman Brev., 1632, it is recast, very much to its disadvantage, as follows:—

- (1) "Coelestis urbs Jerusalem, Beata pacis visio, Quas celsa de viventibus Saxia ad ætra tolleris, Sponsaque ritu cingaris Mille angelorum millibus.
- (2) "O sorte nupta prospera, Dotata Patris gloria,
Respera Sponsi gratia, Regina formosissima,
Christo jugata principi Coeli ornatu civitas.
- (3) "Ilic margaritis emicant, Patentque cunctis oetia:
Virtute namque prævia Mortalis illic ducitur, Amore Christi percipis Tormenta qualesque sustinet.
- (4) "Scalprî salubris ictibus, Et tunione plurima,
Fabri polita melleo Hanc saxa molem contruntur, Aptisque juncta nexibus Locantur in fastigio.
- (5) "Alto ex Olympi vertice Summi Parentis Filios,
Cen montis desecus lapis Terras in limas decidens, Domus supernae, et infimæ Utramque junxit angulum.
- (6) "Sed illa sedes coelitem Semper resultat laudibus, Deumque trinum et unicum Jugi canore prædicat:
Illi canentes jungimur Altæe Sionis ænili.
- (7) "Hæc templa, Rex coelestium, Imple benigno lumine;
Hæc o rogatus adveni, Plebisque vota suscipe,
Et nostra corda Jugiter Perfunde coeli gratiâ.
- (8) "Ilic impetrent fidelium Vocas precantum supplicum
Domus beatae munera, Partiquis deus gaudant:
Donec soluti corpore Sedes beatas impiant.
- (9) "Decem Parenti debitum Sit nequequam altissimo, Natoque Patri onco, Et inclyto Paracletio,
Cui laus, potentas, gloria, Aeterna sit per sæcula."

This form is in Daniel, i. No. 219, Card. Newman's Hymn Ecclesiae, 1888 and 1865, &c. Both in the Hymni Breviarii Romani, Rome, 1629 (p. 87), and in the Hymni Breviarii of 1632 the doxology is printed at the end of each part.

3. The Paris Breviary text of 1643 and 1736 differs but slightly from the original as above. The 1736 text begins thus:—

"Urbs Jerusalem beata Dicta pacis visio,
Quae constructur in coelis Vivis ex lapidibus,
Et ovantum coronata Angelorum agmina!"

This text is given in full in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1857, Nos. 105, 106.

4. Another form of the text is given in the Breviaryum Metropolitanæ ac primatialis ecclesiae Senonensis . . . Senonici MDCCXXXV. Pars Hiemalis, p. lxxxviii. as follows:—

"Urbs beata, vera pacis visio, Jerusalem.
Quanta surgit! celes æmix Conditur viventibus:
Quae polivit, hæc coepit Sedibus suis Deus.

"Singulis ex margaritis Singulas portas nitent:
Murus omnis fulget auro, Fulget unioibus:
Angularis petra Christus Fundat urbis moenia.

"Ejus est sol cæcus Agnus, Ejus est templum Deus:
Accumulans hic Beati, Puriores Spiritus,
Laudis jugi munus unum Terque sanctum conieunt.

"Undequaque sunt aperta Civitatis oetia:
Quisquis ambit hoc vœare, Inscribit inœnibus,
Ante darts hic probari Debit inobtusus.

"Sit perennis laus Parenti, Sit perennis Filio:
Laudis tibi, qui nectis æmix, Sit perennis, Spiritus:
Christi cuius nos laungens, Viva templa consecrat."

This is the text to which Dr. Neale refers in his Mediæval Hys., 1851 and 1867, as:

"There is in the Paris Breviary, a refaçonnement of this hymn; very inferior, it is true, to the original, but much superior to the Roman reform."

It is however an error to call this the Paris Brev. text, as it is neither in the Paris Brev. of 1643, 1736, nor 1778. This form has been ascribed to Sebastian Boenault (p. 126, ii.), many of whose hymns are included in the Sene Brev. of 1728. [J. M.]

The translations of the various forms of this hymn are:—

i. Original Text: (i.) Urbs beata Hierusalem; (ii.) Angularis fundamentum.

L. (a.) Blessed city, heavenly Salem, Vision dear of peace and love, &c. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is made the sure Foundation. Pt. ii. By J. M. Neale. This was given as one hymn in Mediæval Hys., 1851, but in the H. Noted, 1852, it was revised and divided into two parts as above (Nos. 43, 44). The tr. as thus divided was given in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and in H. A. & M., 1861, with alterations in each case. Dr. Neale's comment on some of these alterations in the 3rd ed. of his Mediæval Hys., 1867, p. 22, is:—

"This hymn, divided as in the Breviary, after the fourth verse, was inserted, with some corrections, in the Hymnal Noted. Thence, with a good many alterations, it was copied in the Sarum Hymnal [Salisbury H. Bk., 1857]; one of these changes seems true and happy: v. 27—

Who, the two walls underlying,
Bound in each, binds both in one.

In Hymns Ancient and Modern it is very slightly altered: and some of the changes can hardly be thought improvements, e.g., 'Thither faithful souls do soar.' [Neale 'Thither faithful souls may soar']. It is curious to observe how both one and the other soften the second line of the second verse: [Neale 'Ready for the nuptial bed'] the Sarum has:—

'Grace and glory round her shed.'
Hymns Ancient and Modern (much better)—
'Bridal glory round her shed.'

The second part of the translation, 'Christ is made the sure Foundation,' has been adopted as a dedication hymn with so much general favour, that it would be unthankful not to mention the fact."

Amongst these collections which include both parts of this tr. as in the H. Noted, but giving in almost every instance variations, chiefly from H. A. & M., are Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861; Kennedy, 1863; People's H., 1867; Sarum, 1868;

the Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1882, and several others in G. Britain and America. There are also a few collections which take only Pt. i., and others, greater in number, Pt. ii. There are centos also from both parts in C. U., beginning with the opening line of Pt. i., as in the Parisian H. Bk., 1863-75; the Hy. Comp., and others. The position taken by Dr. Neale's tr. of this hymn is thus prominent and important. In popularity and extensiveness of use it is unapproached by any other.

2. (a.) Happy city, holy Salem. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ, the key-stone of the corner. Pt. ii. By W. J. Blew, in his Ch. Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, H. Seasons, 1, 2, and Rice's Sol. from the same, 1870, Nos 114, 115.

3. (a.) A blessed city is Jerusalem, Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is laid the sure Foundation. Christ is the tried [And the precious], &c. Pt. ii.

These renderings in the English Hymnal, 1856 and 1861, are by the editor, J. A. Johnston, based upon Dr. Neale, as above.

4. (a.) Blessed City, Heavenly Salem, Peaceful vision, &c. Pt. i.

(b.) Deeply laid a sure Foundation. Pt. ii.

By Archbishop Benson, tr. at Rugby, and used at the Dedication of Wellington College Chapel, July 16, 1863. It had previously appeared in the Wellington College H. Bk., 1860. It is also given in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871.

5. (a.) Blessed Salem, long expected. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is laid the sure Foundation, Christ the Head, &c. Pt. ii.

By W. Mercer, in the Oxford ed. of his Church Psalter and H. Bk., 1864.

6. (a.) Blessed City, Heavenly Salem, Vision fair of peace and rest. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is laid the sure Foundation, Corner-stone true, &c. Pt. ii.

By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868 and 1871.

7. Built on Christ, the firm Foundation. Pt. ii. Anon. in the Ohio Evang. Lutheran Hym., 1880.

Other tra. are:—

1. Jerusalem O citie blest, That of peace, &c. Primer. 1599.

2. Jerusalem, that place divine, The vision, &c. Primer. 1613.

3. God hath laid the sure Foundation, Pt. ii. A. T. Russell. 1851.

4. Blessed City, holy Salem, Vision fair, &c. J. D. Chambers. 1857. In full.

5. (a.) O Jerusalem, the blest'd. Pt. i. (b.) Christ the Corner-stone is made, Pt. ii. J. W. Hewitt. 1859.

6. Vision's peaceful consummation. H. Kynaston. 1862.

7. Blessed City, holy Salem, Home of peace, &c. H. R. B., in Lyra Mystica. 1855. In part only.

8. Hail Jerusalem the blessed, peaceful city, vision dear. D. T. Morgan. 1871 and 1880. In full.

ii. The Roman Breviary Text: (i.) Cœlestis urbs Jerusalem; (ii.) Alto ex Olympi vertice.

1. (a.) City of heaven, Jerusalem. Pt. i.

(b.) From loftiest peak of heavenly light. Pt. ii.

By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 133. In 1850 pt. i. was given in Stretton's Church Hys. In Johnston's English Hym., 1856, both parts are altered as, (1) "Celestial seat, Jerusalem," (2) "Christ for the Corner-stone is giv'n."

2. (a.) Jerusalem, thou city blest. Pt. i.

(b.) From highest heaven, the Father's Son. Pt. ii.

By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849,

p. 225, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 119. This tr. passed into Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and others.

3. Thou heavenly, new Jerusalem. Pt. i. By W. J. Irons, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 41. This was repeated in Dr. Irons's Hymns, 1866, slightly altered in his Ps. & Hymns, 1873-75, and in several other collections.

4. City of peace, Jerusalem. Pt. i. Anon. in the Hym. for the Use of St. John the Evangelist, Aberdeen, 1870.

Other tra. are:—

1. Jerusalem, Celestial place. Primer. 1666.

2. (a.) Jerusalem whose Heavenly Man (Pt. i.). Primer. 1706.

3. (b.) From high Olympus Top the Son (Pt. ii.). Primer. 1706.

4. Jerusalem, whose Name contains. Evening Office. 1746.

5. (a.) City of heaven, Jerusalem (Pt. i.). A. J. B. Hope. 1844. In part only.

6. Promised home of peace and love (Pt. i.). R. Campbell. 1860.

7. (a.) Jerusalem, thou city grand (Pt. i.). By T. J. Potter, in the Catholic Psalmist, 1856.

8. (a.) Celestial City, Salem blest (Pt. i.). (b.) From lofty summit of high heaven (Pt. ii.). J. Wallace. 1874.

iii. The Paris Breviary Text, 1736: (i.) Urbs Jerusalem beata; (ii.) Angularis fundamentum.

1. (a.) The holy Jerusalem. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is set the Corner-stone. Pt. ii.

By I. Williams. Of these Pt. i. was given in the British Magazine, Aug. 1833, and Pt. ii. in the same, July 1837 (vol. xii, p. 80), and both parts were included in Williams's Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 333.

2. (a.) O City of our God. Pt. i.

(b.) Christ is our Corner-stone, On Him alone we build. Pt. ii.

By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 119. Pt. i. is very rarely used, but Pt. ii. is the most popular of any tr. of that portion of the hymn, and is in very extensive use in G. Britain and America. It sometimes begins, "O Christ, our Corner-Stone." The hymn "Here, Gracious God, do Thou," in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873, is from this tr., beginning with st. iii.

3. O heavenly Queen, high Salem. Pt. i. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, H. Seasons, 53, and again in Rice's Sol. from the same, 1870, No. 126.

iv. The Sans Breviary Text, 1726: Urbs beata, vera pacis.

A tr. of this text, by A. R. Thompson, is given in Duffield's Latin Hymn-writers, 1889, as, "Blessed city vision true." [J. J.]

Ut jucundas cervus undas, aestuans desiderat. Bernard of Cluny (?). [B. V. M.] This is the opening of a poem, or rather cycle of poems or hymns, known as the Marials. Up to 1600 it generally passed under the name of Bernard or of St. Bernard, though it was also ascribed to St. Thomas of Aquino (d. 1274); to Hildebert, archbishop of Tours (d. 1134), and to others. After 1600 it (or rather a cento from it beginning "Omni die die Marine") passed current under the name of St. Casimir of Poland (d. 1484). It has recently been ascribed to St. Anselm of Aosta, who, in 1063, was appointed Prior, and, in 1078, Abbot of Bec in Normandy; became Archbishop of Canterbury in 1093; and d. April 12, 1109. The ascription to St. Anselm has been upheld by Father Ragey of the Mariist Order, who in 1884 pub. an ed. of the full text as Sacra Anselmi Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi Mariale, &c. (London, Burns & Oates), with a preface and introduction dated April 21, 1888. This ed. is out of print, but Father Ragey kindly presented the present writer with a copy, and also with copies of his articles on the Mariale in the Annales de Philosophie Chrétienne (Paris), May and June 1888, and in the Controverses de Contemporain (Lyons), Nov. 1887. There, in the Revue des Questions Historiques (Paris), Oct. 1886 and July 1887, and in the works referred to in these articles, the subject may be studied in detail. Here we can give only a brief outline of the subject, dealing (i.) with the MSS., (ii.) with the Authorship, and (iii.) with the Centos and Translations.

(i.) MSS. The Mariale exists in at least five mss. not later than 1200. Two of these are in the British Museum, viz., the Add. 21927, and the Hevl. 2882.

The former of these (a Psalter apparently written for a Benedictine monastery in the province of York) contains only a portion of the text, beginning at l. 465 with the words "Omnis die dic Mariae," and is entitled "Laud et oratio de sca Maria." This ms. has sometimes been assigned to the end of the 11th cent., but the British Museum authorities, on being requested by the present writer to re-examine it, agree in considering that it is not earlier than 1175. The Harleian MS. (a complete and excellent one, apparently written in England), is dated in the Catalogue as of the 12th cent., but the similarly elicited opinion of the British Museum authorities is that it is not earlier than 1200.

The other three mss. are in the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris, viz., Lat. 2445 A., Lat. 16522, and Lat. 16563.

M. Leopold Delisle, the Principal Librarian, has kindly re-examined these, and has come to the conclusion that none of them is as early as 1149. The 2445 A. is the earliest, and may possibly date soon after 1150.

The Mariale is also found in a considerable variety of mss. of later date, in the Brit. Mus. and in various French and German libraries, but these need not here be mentioned in detail. The verse form, a variety of the trochaic catalectic tetrameter, is not earlier than about 1050.

(ii.) Authorship.—These facts, and the other evidences adduced in the works noted above, clearly point to the conclusion that the poem was written, either in France or in England, not earlier than 1050 and not later than 1150. The possible authors are thus reduced to four, viz.: St. Anselm of Canterbury, St. Bernard of Clairvaux, Bernard of Cluny, and Hildebort of Tournai. St. Thomas of Aquino (to whom it is ascribed in a 14th cent. ms., cited by Moss, ii. p. 258) was only born in 1225.

(a) Hildebort. For Hildebort there is only the ascription in a miscellaneous ms. volume of the 13th or 14th cent., formerly belonging to the monastery of St. James at Liège, and now in the Darmstadt Library (No. 3777). The text of this ms., which contains nearly the whole of the Mariale, is printed by F. W. E. Roth, in his Lat. Hymnen, 1837, No. 203. The Mariale is not contained in the Benedictine ed. of Hildebort's Opera (Paris, 1708), and M. Hauréan, who has recently interested himself in the study of Hildebort, ascribes it not to him, but to Bernard of Cluny.

(b) St. Bernard of Clairvaux. The ascription to St. Bernard also rests on a very slight foundation. The Bernard to whom the early ms. ascribed the Mariale was clearly not the abbot of Clairvaux, but the monk of Cluny. (See M. Hauréan's articles in the Journal des Savants for 1882, reprinted as the Poèmes Latins attribués à Saint Bernard, Paris, 1890.)

(c) St. Anselm of Canterbury. The principal specific reasons (beyond the general contention that it harmonises in sentiment and expression with St. Anselm's character, and with his works), which led Ragey to think that it was by him are:—

(1) The fact of its being in very early mss. But, as shown above, no ms. of it is as early as 1146, and consequently it cannot be adjudged from Bernard of Cluny on that ground. (2) The fervour of its devotion to the B. V. M. But St. Anselm was not alone in his devotion to her. (3) The frequent resemblances to passages in the works undoubtedly by St. Anselm. In the first ed. of the Mariale these parallel passages are printed at the foot of the pages containing the corresponding portions of the text. But the parallels are not very close, and even if they were closer they might be accounted for otherwise, for it is tolerably certain that Bernard had access, in the library at Cluny, to at least a fairly complete set of the works of so well-known an ecclesiastic and theologian as St. Anselm. (4) The fact that in the Harl. MS. 5882 it occurs in a section which otherwise contains nothing but pieces which are undoubtedly by St. Anselm. This is not a very conclusive argument, especially as the other pieces are all in prose. (5) Certain allusions which Ragey thinks were meant to refer to contemporary events in England, under the rule of William Rufus (1078-1100). The allusions are however not distinct enough to found an argument upon.

To the present writer the great difficulties in the way of ascribing the Mariale to St. Anselm are firstly that F. Ragey relies too much on subjective evidence, and secondly that the other poems ascribed to him are of such small importance, and nowhere show any evidence of poetical talent or of the power to compose such a long poem in so difficult a metre.

The Mariale had indeed been ascribed to St. Anselm much earlier than by Father Ragey, viz., in a ms. of about the end of the 13th cent., now in the Bibl. Nat. at Paris (Lat. 16439, f. 343), where it is entitled "Meditationes Anselmi de beata Virgine." But the mere fact of its appearance with that title in this solitary, and not very ancient, ms., has not convinced M. Hauréan (1890, p. 87) that it is really by St. Anselm, nor is the present writer inclined to regard it as conclusive evidence of his authorship.

(d) Bernard of Cluny. The earliest ms. of the poem now known is the Lat. 2445 A. at Paris, written circa 1150. Here it is entitled "Invocatio divina Sapientiae facta a Bernardo monacho perpetuae virginis." The epithet "monachus" is evidently meant to point to Bernard of Cluny, for long before 1150 St. Bernard, from a simple monk, had become Abbot of Clairvaux. The ascription to Bernard is found in various other of the early mss. As time went on and the fame of St. Bernard of Clairvaux increased, while the name of Bernard of Cluny was forgotten, we find the mss. ascribe the Mariale distinctly to St. Bernard. So in two mss. of the 14th cent., written in France, and now in the Brit. Mus. (Reg. 7 A. vi., and Reg. 8 B. 1), the author is styled "Bernardus doctor," and in a ms. of the 15th cent., now also in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 30358, f. 363b), the poems are styled "Orationes sancti Bernardi devoti doctoris," and appointed for the Octave of the Assumption of the B. V. M.

To show the structure of the poem we print here the opening of its best-known part:—

"Omnis die, dic Mariae, mea, laudes, animae;
Ejus festa, ejus gesta cunctis splendidiſsima.
Contemplare, et mirare ejus caliditatem;
De felicibus Genitricem, dic Beatae Virginis."

On comparing this with the De contemptis mundi (pp. 137, 48, and 533, ll.), which is the undoubted work of Bernard of Cluny, we see in both an equal mastery of a difficult and somewhat similar metre. The poet who could write the one was certainly capable of writing the other. Whatever may be the theological prepossessions of the critic it is altogether unfair to deny that the De contemptis and the Mariale are both the work of a first-rate poet, and it is idle to depreciate the De contemptis in order to exalt the Mariale. The De contemptis indeed contains much that might well have been spared, but the first part, for hundreds of lines, has in its way nothing to equal it in beauty in the whole range of Latin sacred poetry. If the De contemptis may be accused of want of progress and of eddying round its subject, then this is precisely what may justly be said of the Mariale.

Therefore, on the grounds of the early ascription to Bernard of Cluny, of the fact that no mss. can be found which are sufficiently early to disprove the ascription to him, and of his talents as a poet and master of Latin verse, we incline to regard the Mariale as his. St. Anselm was indeed a distinguished theologian and ecclesiastic, but we have really no reason to regard him as a poet of any merit.

(iii.) Centos and Translations. The complete text of the poem is, in Raguey's edition, arranged in 15 parts, viz. a Prooemium, a Praevia Meditatio, and 13 Hymns. It is not necessary however to print the first lines of these as Raguey's 2nd ed. (Tournay: Desobée, Lefebvre & Co., 1885) is easily accessible, as well as cheap, and very prettily printed. Here we give only the beginnings of the different forms or centos which we have noticed, adding the page references to Raguey's 1885 ed. These forms and centos are:—

- i. Jesse proles, pelle moles. p. 104.
- ii. Jesu Christe, per quem iste. p. 123.
- iii. Jesu Verbum, qui superbum. p. 170.
- iv. Lingua mea, die trophaea. p. 14.
- v. Lux sanctorum, spes lapsorum. p. 71.
- vi. O felicem genitricem. p. 83.
- vii. O Maria, vitae via. p. 107.
- viii. Omni die, die Mariae. p. 16.
- ix. Fulchra tota, sine nota. p. 28.
- x. Splendor Patris, factor Matris. p. 44.
- xi. Ut jucundas cervus undas. p. 3.

Of these Nos. i., ii., iii., v., vii., x. are given by Mone (Nos. 566-571) from various mss. of the 14th and 15th cent., and seem to have been meant for use at private devotions. The other forms may be here noted somewhat more fully, viz.:—

iv. Lingua mea, die trophaea virginis purpureae. A cento beginning thus was tr. as:—

O my tongue, the praise and honours. By T. I. Ball for the 1863 Appx. to the H. Notes, No. 205. This is repeated in the Officio H. Bk., 1839. In the St. Margaret's Hyl. (East Grinstead), 1875, it is in two parts, the second beginning "O thou ever pure, yet fruitful,"

vi. O felicem genitricem, ejus sacra viscera. This is the only portion of the poem which seems to have come into public use in Pre-Reformation times. It is included in various Missa's of the 15th and 16th cent., such as the Lübeck, a. 1480; the Trier, c. 1490; the Prag of 1507; the Naumburg of 1517, and others. Also in Wackernagel, i. p. 192; Daniel, ii., p. 205; Mohren, No. 315, &c. It is tr. as:—

Blessed Mother o'er all other. By A. D. Wackerbarth, in his Lyra Ecclesiastica, 1842, p. 27.

viii. Omni die, die Mariae, mea, laudes, anima. The popular form of this is the cento made from the poem by St. Casimir of Poland (b. 1458, d. 1484). A ms. copy of this arrangement is said to have been found in his grave when that was opened in 1604; and in the 17th cent., and indeed till recently, he was generally thought to be its author. It is given in his life in the Bollandist Acta Sanctorum (1668), for March 4; in the Parnassus Marianus, Douay, 1624, p. 364; in J. M. Horst's Paradisus animae Christianae, Cologne, 1630, p. 500 (1644, p. 462); in Daniel, ii. p. 372, &c. Various tr. of it are included in German Roman Catholic hymn-books from 1613 on, it was tr. into French at least as early as 1630, and there are also tr. in Italian, Spanish, Polish, Hungarian, &c. It has also been tr. into English as:—

1. Each day, my soul, Tell Mary's praise. By Canon F. Onkeley, in his tr. of Horst's Paradisus, 1850, p. 593, and divided, as in Horst, into six decades.

2. Daily, daily, sing to Mary, Sing, my soul, her praises due. This is in the Oratory Hys., 1854, and the Catholic Psalmist, 1858, p. 141. It is repeated in the Catholic Hyl., 1860, as the first part of No. 63; and, in almost the same text, in the Crown of Jesus H. Bk., 1862, &c.

3. Sing, sing each day, A thankful lay. By Cardinal Wiseman, in his Hymn of St. Casimir, London, 1859.

ix. Fulchra tota, sine nota conjunctumque maculae. This is really part of the cento made by St. Casimir. It is tr. as:—

Holy Queen! we bend before thee, Queen of purity divine. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, 1858, p. 312, and Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 175; repeated in the Hys. for the Year, 1867, and the Parochial H. Bk., 1880. In the Catholic Hyl., 1860, No. 63, pt. ii., it begins "Holy Mary, we implore thee By thy purity divine," and this form is repeated in the Crown of Jesus H. Bk., 1862.

xi. Ut jucundas cervus undas, secutus desiderat. This is found also in Daniel, v. p. 409, and in Trench's Soc. Latin Poetry, ed. 1864, p. 237. It is tr. as:—

The thirsty hart pants with desire. By D. T. Morgan, in his Hys. of the Latin Church, 1871, p. 94.

These various forms and centos testify to the popularity which the poem has enjoyed in Roman Catholic circles. It is in parts very beautiful; but is, as a whole, too intensely Marian to lend itself for use in the Churches of the Reformation, unless with such adaptation as would almost destroy its identity.

Ut queant laxis resonare fibris. Paul the Deacon. [St. John the Baptist's Day.] This hymn by Paul the Deacon, son of Warfried, is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 54; Vesp. D. xii. f. 81 b; Add. 30848 f. 165); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 102, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. lii. 32 f. 30 b). Also in the St. Gall ms. No. 387, of the 11th cent.; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 260), &c. Among the Bern mss. it is found in No. 365 of the 8th cent.; No. 303 circa 900; and No. 455 of the 10th cent. Ernest Dümmler, in the Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, Berlin, 1881, vol. i. p. 83, gives it in the Appendix "Carminum Dubiorum" of Paul the Deacon, citing it as in a Vatican ms. of the 10th cent., and many others. It is in the Roman, Sacrum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries. In the Sacrum use part i. was assigned to Lauds, pt. ii. Antea deserit teneris sub casis to Matina, pt. iii., O nimis felix, meritisque celat laudes. Stanza i. has often been quoted by writers on music (from Guido of Arezzo in the 11th cent. onwards) as indicating the names of the musical notes:—

"Ut queant laxis Resonare fibris
Mira gestorum Famuli incorum Solve polluti Labii restum, Sancte Johannes."

The printed text is also in Daniel i. No. 183, with readings at iv. pp. 163, 370, citing the Bern ms. No. 455, &c.; in Wackernagel, i. No. 127; Büssler, No. 64; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Motaciensis, 1883 p. 50, from a 10th cent. ms.; and in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1863. [J. M.]

The three parts of this hymn have been tr. into English as follows:—

- i. Ut queant laxis roseare floris.
1. O that, once more, to sinful men descending. By T. L. Ball, in the 1863 Appendix to the H. Noted. In the Office H. Book, 1889, it is given as "O that to sinners once again descending."
2. Greatest of prophets, messenger appointed. By R. F. Littledale, in the 1860 Appendix to the H. Noted, in the Day Hours of the Church of England, 1864, and again in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "B."
3. O heavenly Father, cleanse our lips. By W. Cooke, in the Hymnary, 1872, with the signature "A. C. C." and again in Thring's Coll., 1882.

4. O for thy spirit, holy John, to chasten. Anonymous in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882. It is based upon W. J. Blew's tr. as below.

- Other trs. are:—
1. That thy rare doings, O S. John we pray thee. Primer. 1669.
 2. That we thy servants may with joy declare. Primer. 1619.
 3. That we with deep-tun'd strings may sound. Primer. 1688.
 4. O sylvan Prophet, whose eternal Fame. Primer. 1706 and 1762.
 5. That we with tuneful Notes may sound thy Life. Evening Office. 1780.
 6. O for thy spirit, holy John, once more. W. J. Copeland. 1848.
 7. Unloose, great Baptist, our sin-fetter'd lips. E. Caswall. 1849.
 8. O for thy spirit, holy John, to chasten. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.
 9. That with glad voices, we thy matchless virtues. T. J. Potter in Catholic Protestant. 1858.
 10. In flowing measures worthy to sing. J. D. Chambers. 1866.
 11. That we may worthy be in tuneful strain. J. Wallace. 1874.

ii. Astra deserti tenoris ab anxia.
1. In caves of the lone wilderness thy youth. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 156; his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 85, and a few Roman Catholic hymn-books for Missions and Schools.

2. Thou, young in years, in desert caverns hidest. By T. L. Ball, in the 1863 Appendix to the H. Noted. In the Office Hy. Book, 1889, it is greatly altered as, "Thou, in the wilds, thy tender years art hiding."

3. Thou in thy childhood to the desert caverns. Anon. in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882.

- Other trs. are:—
1. From noisy crowds your early years recess. Primer. 1794.
 2. In tenderest years withdrawn from haunts of men. W. J. Copeland. 1848.
 3. In the lone desert, to the caves and covert. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.
 4. Thou in the desert caves thy tender youth. J. D. Chambers. 1866.
 5. Thy childhood's home the desert was. J. Wallace. 1874.

iii. O nimis felix meritique calat.
1. O blessed saint, of snow-white purity. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 158, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 86. It is given in a few collections. In Hys. for the Year, 1867, it begins, "O Saint of snow-white purity."

2. O blessed saint of high renown and honour. By R. F. Littledale, in the Day Hours of the Church of England, 1864, and the People's H., 1867, where it is signed "B."

3. O more than blessed, merit high attaining.

Anon. in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882. Altered in the Office H. Book, 1889, to "O Saint most blessed, merit high attaining."

- Other trs. are:—
1. Hall Prince of Prophets, Prince of Martyrs, hall. Primer. 1706.
 2. O, all too blest, and of transcendent worth. W. J. Copeland. 1848.
 3. Baptist thrice blessed, John august and holy. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.
 4. Most blest, most excellent in holiness. J. D. Chambers. 1866.
 5. Thrice happy, thou exalted saint. J. Wallace. 1874. [J. J.]

v. In the New Golden Shower, N. Y., 1870, i.e. Mrs. Van Alstyne.

Vain are the hopes the sons of men. I. Watts. [Justification by Faith.] Pub. in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 94, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Justification by Faith, not by Works; or, The Law condemns, Grace justifies, Rom. iii. 19-22." In the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, it was given unaltered; in that of 1751 it was slightly changed; and in the authorised issue of the Trs. and Paraphs., 1781, No. xli., st. i., ii. were rewritten, but began with the original first line as above; at. iii. was taken from the Draft of 1751; and st. iv. unaltered from Watts. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ß.) these alterations are attributed to him. The use of the 1781 form of the text is far more extensive than that of the original. [J. J.]

Van Alstyne, Frances Jane, née Crosby, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was b. at South East, Putnam County, New York, March 24, 1823. When six weeks old she lost her sight. About 1835 she entered the New York City Institution for the Blind. On completing her training she became a teacher therein from 1847 to 1858. In 1858 she was married to Alexander Van Alstyne, a musician, who was also blind. Her first poem was pub. in 1831; and her first volumes of verse as A Blind Girl, and Other Poems, 1844; Monterey, and Other Poems, 1849; and A Wreath of Columbia's Flowers, 1858. Her first hymn was "We are going, we are going" (Death and Burial), which was written for Mr. Bradbury and pub. in the Golden Censer, 1864. From 1853 to 1858 she wrote 20 songs, which were set to music by G. F. Root. Her songs and hymns number some 2,000 or more, and have been published mainly in several of the popular American Sunday school collections, and often under a nom de plume. About 60 have come into C. U. in G. Britain. The majority of these are taken from the following American collections:—

- i. From The Shining Star, 1861.
 1. Softly on the breath of evening. Evening.
- ii. From Fresh Laurels, 1867.
 2. Beautiful Mansions, home of the blest. Evening.
 3. Jesus the Water of Life has given. The Water of Life.
 4. Light and Comfort of my soul. In Affliction.

5. There's a cry from Macedonia. Missions.
 6. We are marching on with shield and banner bright. S. S. Anniversary.
 iii. From Musical Leaves, 1868.
 7. O what are you going to do, brother? Youth for God.
 iv. From Sabbath Carols, 1868.
 8. Dark is the night, and cold the wind is blowing. Affliction anticipated.
 9. Lord, at Thy mercy seat, Humbly I fall. Lent.
 v. From Silver Spray, 1868.
 10. If I come to Jesus, He will make me glad. Peace in Jesus.
 11. 'Twill not be long—our journey here. Heaven anticipated.
 vi. From Notes of Joy, 1869.
 12. Little beams of rosy light. The Divine Father.
 13. Press on! press on! a glorious throng. Pressing towards the Prize.
 vii. From Bright Jewels, 1869.
 14. Christ the Lord is risen to-day, He is risen indeed. Easter.
 15. Holy, holy, holy is the Lord! Sing O ye people, &c. Holiness of God.
 16. Jesus, keep me near the Cross. Near the Cross of Christ.
 17. Saviour, bless a little child. A Child's Prayer. Written Feb. 6, 1869.
 viii. From Songs of Devotion, 1870.
 18. Pass me not, O gentle Saviour. Lent. Written in 1866.
 19. Rescue the perishing, care for the dying. Home Missions.
 ix. From Pure Gold, 1871.
 20. Great is Jehovah. King of kings. Greatness of God.
 21. I would be Thy little lamb. The Good Shepherd.
 22. Lead me to Jesus, lead me to Jesus. Desiring Jesus.
 23. To the work, to the work, we are servants of God. Home Missions.
 24. Why labour for treasures that rust and decay? The Priceless Crown.
 x. From the Royal Diadem, 1873.
 25. I am Jesus' little friend. For Infant Schools.
 26. Jesus I love Thee. Loving Jesus.
 27. Mourner, whereoe'er thou art. To the Sorrowing and Penitent. Written Oct. 3, 1871.
 28. Never be faint or weary. Joy in Jesus.
 29. Only a step to Jesus. Invitation.
 xi. From Winnowed Hymns, 1873-4.
 30. Loving Saviour, hear my cry. Lent.
 xii. From Echoes of Zion, 1874.
 31. Say, where is thy refuge, my brother? Home Missions.
 xiii. From Songs of Grace and Glory, 1874.
 32. Thou my everlasting Portion. Christ the Portion of His People.
 xiv. From Brightest and Best, 1875.
 33. All the way my Saviour leads me. Jesus the Guide.
 34. I am Thine, O Lord: I have heard Thy voice. Holiness desired.
 35. O come to the Saviour, believe in His name. Invitation. Written, Sep. 7, 1874.
 36. O how sweet when we mingle. Communion of Saints. Written in 1866.
 37. O my Saviour, hear me. Prayer to Jesus for blessing and love.
 38. Only Jesus feels and knows. Jesus the Divine Friend.
 39. Rejoice Thy work, O Lord. Home Missions.
 40. Saviour, more than life to me. Jesus All and in All.
 41. To God be the glory, great things He hath done. Praise for Redemption.
 xv. From Catechry Songs, 1875.
 42. Come, O come with thy broken heart. Invitation.
 xvi. From Gospel Music, 1876.
 43. Here from the world we turn. Divine Worship.
 44. When Jesus comes to reward His servants. Watching.

- xvii. From Welcome Tidings, 1877.
 45. O hear my cry, be gracious now to me. For Pardon and Peace.
 xviii. From The Fountain of Song, 1877.
 46. Lord, my trust I repose on Thee. Trusting in Jesus.
 xix. From Good as Gold, 1880.
 47. In Thy cleft, O Rock of Ages. Safety in Jesus.
 48. Sound the alarm! let the watchman cry. Home Missions.
 49. Tenderly He leads us. Christ the Leader.
 50. 'Tis the blessed hour of prayer. The hour of Prayer.

In addition to these hymns, all of which are in C. U. in G. Britain (mainly through I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, the Methodist S. S. H. Bk., the Silver Street Sunday School's Companion, and other collections for Sunday schools), there are also "A blessing for you, will you take it?" (Pardon through Jesus); "My song shall be of Jesus" (Praise of Jesus); "Now, just a word for Jesus" (Home Missions); "Onward, upward, Christian soldier" (Pressing Heavenward); "Sinner, how thy heart is troubled" (Invitation); "Tis a goodly, pleasant land" (Heaven anticipated); and "When the dewy light was fading" (Death anticipated). All of these are in I. D. Sankey's Sac. Songs & Solos. Mrs. Van Alstyne's most popular composition is "Safe in the arms of Jesus" (Safety in Jesus). This was written in 1868, at the request of Mr. W. H. Doane, to his well-known melody with which it is inseparably associated, and pub. in Bright Jewels, 1869. Mrs. Van Alstyne's hymns have sometimes been published anonymously; but the greater part are signed by a bewildering number of initials, and none de plume, including:—

A.; C.; D. H. W.; F.; F. A. N.; F. C.; F. J. C.; F. J. V. J.; J. C. F.; V.; V. A.; Ellis Dale; F. Crosby; F. J. Crosby; Punnie; Fannie Crosby; Fanny; Fanny Crosby; Fanny Van Alstyne; Jenny V.; Mrs. Jennie Glenn; Mrs. Kate Grinley; Miss V.; Miss Viola V. A.; Mrs. V.; Viola. (List kindly supplied by Mr. H. T. Main, of New York.)

The combined sales of the volumes of songs and hymns named above have amounted in English-speaking countries to millions of copies. Notwithstanding the immense circulation thus given to Mrs. Van Alstyne's hymns, they are, with few exceptions, very weak and poor, their simplicity and earnestness being their redeeming features. Their popularity is largely due to the melodies to which they are wedded.

Since the above was in type we have found that the following are also in C. U. in G. Britain:—

51. Suppose the little cowslip. Value of Little Things.
 52. Sweet hour of prayer. The Hour of Prayer. These are in Bradbury's Golden Chain, 1861.
 53. Never lose the golden rule. Love to our Neighbours. In Bradbury's Golden Censer, 1864.
 54. I will not be afraid at night. Trust in God. In Bradbury's Fresh Laurels, 1867.
 55. Praise Him, praise Him, Jesus our, &c. Praise of Jesus. In Biglow & Main's Bright Jewels, 1869.
 56. More like Jesus would I be. More like Jesus. In Perkins & Taylor's Songs of Salvation, 1870.
 57. Behold me standing at the door. Christ at the Door. In Biglow & Main's Christian Songs, 1872.
 58. If I come to Jesus. Jesus the Children's Guide.
 59. Jesus, Lord, I come to Thee. Trust in Jesus.
 60. Let me learn of Jesus. Jesus the Children's Friend.
 61. Singing for Jesus, O singing for Jesus. Singing for Jesus.

62. There is a Name divinely sweet. Holy Name of Jesus.

Of these hymns Nos. 58-62 we have not been able to trace. [J. J.]

VARIOUS. It was originally intended that additions to and corrections of articles in this Dictionary should come under this heading. The expansion of the work far beyond its original limits, the accumulation of hymns and hymnological works of great value, the discovery of mss. and books heretofore unknown to the hymnologist, the passing away of a large number of hymnwriters since the printing of this Dictionary was begun in 1880, and the late arrival of some important articles, have however necessitated an Appendix, which will be found at p. 1897. In every case where the reader is referred to Various in this Dictionary the information will be found in that Appendix. [J. J.]

Vater unser, der du bist. [Lord's Prayer.] In an Erfurt G. B. of 1527, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 545, in 9 st. of 4 l., and Kircheyson. Tr. as "O our Father celestial," by By. Coverdale, 1539 (Romans, 1846, p. 549). [J. M.]

Vater unser im Himmelreich. [M. Luther. The Lord's Prayer.] This was included in V. Schumann's Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, 1539, in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled "The Lord's Prayer briefly expounded and turned into metre" (apparently first as a broadsheet with the same title, in 1539; see Wackernagel's Bibliographie, 1856, p. 156); and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 24. Also in Schirek's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 52; and in the Uav. L. S., 1851, No. 572. It is a beautiful rendering, and has been by some regarded as Luther's finest hymn. Each of the first eight stanzas amplifies one of the clauses of the Lord's Prayer (omitting the doxology), and the ninth is on the Amen. O. von Winterfeld, in his ed. of Luther's Deutsche Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, 1840, gives a facsimile of what he believed to be the autograph original draft of this hymn. Tr. as:—

1. Our Father in the heav'n above. A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 121 in the Dunston Hospital H. Bk., 1843, repeated as No. 4, in the Appx. to his own Ps. & Hymns, 1851, and omitting st. ix., in Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861.

2. Our Father dear, which art in heaven. In full, by R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 61, repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880.

3. Our Father, Thou in heaven above. A full and good fr. by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 114. Repeated in the Evang. Hym., N. Y., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon in his Hym. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 64.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Our Father God omnipotent." In the Guide and Guide's Ballades, ed. 1668, folio 7 (1869, p. 10). (2) "Our Father Which in Heaven art, And mak'st." By Dr. R. Cox, in the 1686 and 1690-61, Psalms of David. Reprinted in the Scottish Psalter of 1683, and added in 1595 to the Scottish Psalter of 1684-65. (3) "Our Father! Who from Heav'n above." By J. C. Jacobi, 1723, p. 55 (1723, p. 197). Repeated as No. 155 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (4) "Our Father in the heavenly realm." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 46. Vaughan, Charles John, D.D., s. of Mr. Vaughan, Vicar of St. Martin's, Leicester, was b. in 1817, and educated at Rugby, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1838 as Senior Classic. He was for sometime Fellow of his College, and successively Vicar of St. Martin's, Leicester; Head Master of Harrow; Vicar of Doncaster; Master of the Temple; and Dean of Llandaff (1879). He has also been Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen, and Chancellor of York Cathedral. In 1882 he was appointed Deputy Clerk of the Closet. Although so widely known as a Scholar, Theologian, and Preacher, his hymn-writing is very limited. Practically he is known by one hymn only: "Lord, Whose temple once did glisten" (Laying Foundation Stone of a Church), which was written at Cambridge about 1837, to the tune "The German Emperor" (H. A. & M., 1875, No. 292, 1st tune), and was used at the laying of the Foundation stone of Trinity Church, Chesterfield. It was pub. in Alford's Ps. & Hym., 1844, No. 115, in 4 st. of 8 l., and was given for "The Consecration of a Church." It is in several modern collections. [J. J.]

Vaughan, Henry, M.D., commonly called "The Silurist," was one of twin-brothers born of a titled family at Newton, Llansantffraid, in 1621. After studying under the Rev. Matthew Herbert, Rector of Mangatock, he proceeded to Jesus College, Oxford, in 1638; but through the national troubles of those days, his studies, in common with those of his brother, were interrupted, and they had to leave the University. Subsequently he entered the medical profession, and practised at Brecon and at Newton. He d. April 23, 1695. His published works include, Poems with the Tenth Satire of Juvenal Englished, 1646; Olor Iscanus, 1651; The Mount of Olives, 1652, &c. As a religious poet he followed very closely the peculiarities of George Herbert, of whose writings he was a great admirer. His best and most devotional poems were written during a severe affliction, and were pub. in his Silva Scintillans. After being almost forgotten for more than 200 years, his quaint, thoughtful, devotional, and, in many instances, beautiful poems, are receiving attention at the hands of hymnal compilers and others. The title of the work in which these pieces appeared is:—

Silva Scintillans: or Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations. By Henry Vaughan, Silurist. London. Printed by J. W. for H. Blunden, at ye Castle in Cornhill, 1658. This contains 110 pages. This was reprinted as Silva Scintillans: or Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations. The Second Edition, in two books; by Henry Vaughan, Silurist. London. Printed for Henry Crips, and Lodowick Lloyd, next to the Castle in Cornhill, and in Popes-Head Alley, 1655. The Rev. H. F. Lyte republished this work as The Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations of Henry Vaughan, with Memoir. London, Pickering, 1847. It is also reprinted in Grosart's Fuller Worthies, 1868.

From the Silva Scintillans several pieces have been taken as hymns for public worship. In addition to those annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators), the following, all from the 1st ed. of 1650, are in C. U.:—

1. As travellers when the twilight's come. Life a Pilgrimage.

2. Bright shadows of true rest! some shoots of bliss. Sundays. Sometimes as "Types of eternal rest, fair buds of bliss."

3. Joy of my life, while left me here. Guiding Stars.

4. King of mercy, King of love. God our King.

5. Lord, with what courage and delight. Cheerfulness.

6. My God and King, to Thee I bow my knee. Lent.

7. Since in a land not barren still. Love and Discipline.

8. Up to these bright and glad some hills. Ps. cxvii.

9. What needs a conscience, clear and bright? Conscience.

10. When one loud blast shall rend the deep. Advent Judgment.

11. Zion's true glorious God! on Thee. Praise.

Of Vaughan's hymns the most widely used are:—"Bright Queen of heaven," "My soul, there is a country," and "Up to these bright and glad some hills." [J. J.]

Vaughan, Rowland, was a member of an ancient Welsh family in Merionethshire. He received his University education at Jesus College, Oxford. His name stands pre-eminent among the contemporary gentry of Wales, for devoting his talents to the improvement of his poorer countrymen. He translated several excellent works; and besides being a good prose writer, he was also a good poet. His fr. of the Veni Creator Spiritus, "Tyr'd Yebryd Glan," and his Galarnad Pechadus are still in great favour in Wales. His mansion at Caergai was burnt to the ground by the Republican forces from Montgomeryshire, and part of his estates confiscated. His attachment to the King's cause brought upon him great sufferings. [W. G. T.]

Venez Jésus, mon salutaire. Antoinette Bourignon. [Renouncing all for Christ.] This hymn was written, circa 1640, and expressed her determination to live for Christ alone, a resolution which she came to whilst suffering from her father's anger because she refused to marry a man whom he had chosen for her. It is given in her Works, Amsterdam, 1686, in 5 st. of 8 l. Tr. as:—

Come Saviour, Jesus, from above. Dr. Osborn, in The Poetical Works of John and Charles Wesley, 1808-72, vol. i. p. 110, says in a note to this tr., which is given there from the Wesley Hymns and Sac. Poems, 1739, p. 123, in 10 st. of 4 l.

"This, and the 'Farewell to the World,' p. 17, were probably furnished to the compilers by Mr. Byrom, of Manchester (see 'Byrom and the Wesleys,' by the Rev. Dr. Hoole [1864], pp. 17, 21), and translated by him from the French of Madam de Bourignon. The copy of 'A Hymn to Jesus,' which is found in his 'Miscellaneous Poems' (Manchester, 1773), vol. ii. p. 211, differs from that given above only in the title ('Renouncing all for Christ'), and in such verbal alterations as the superior taste and judgment of the Wesleys would dictate. The 9th and 10th verses, in both Byrom's and Wesley's copies are tinged with that mysticism to which the preface [to the Hymns and Sac. Poems, 1739] refers; and Wesley has improved on himself as well as on Byrom in the last edition of v. 9 (that in the Large Hymn-Book, 1780), where, instead of 'Nor heaven nor earth,' we read 'Nothing on earth.'"

The references to Byrom and the Wesleys are these:—

(1) p. 27. Under date, "Manchester, March 2nd, 1738," Byrom writes to C. Wesley, and in his letter says:—"As your brother [J. Wesley] has brought so many hymns translated from the French, you will have a sufficient number, and no occasion to increase them by the small addition of Mademoiselle Bourignon's two little pieces. I desire you to favour my present weakness, if I judge wrong, and not to publish them."

(2) p. 27. Under date of "April 26th, 1739," Byrom writes to his son:—"They [J. & C. Wesley] have both together printed a book of hymns [the Hymns and Sac. Poems, 1739], amongst which they have inserted two of Madam Bourignon's, one of which they call 'A Farewell to the World,' translated from the French; and the other, 'Renouncing all for Christ,' translated from the French. They have introduced them by a preface against what they call Mystic writers (not naming any particular author), for whom they say that they had once a great veneration, but think themselves obliged very solemnly to acknowledge their error, and to guard others against the like, which they do by certain reasons that I do not see the reason of."

We regard these facts and quotations as good evidence in support of Byrom's authorship, notwithstanding that his Poems were pub. not by himself but by another ten years after his death.

In 1780 J. Wesley included his amended version in 8 st. of 4 l. in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 276. Since then it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America in various forms varying from 4 to 8 stanzas, and all from J. Wesley's text. [J. J.]

Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentis tuorum visita. [Whitewashed.] In annotating this great hymn we shall deal (i.) with the MSS. and the various forms of the Text; (ii.) with its Authorship and Date; and lastly (iii.) with the differences found in its Use.

i. MSS. and Text. From the 12th cent. onwards ms. of this hymn are innumerable, as it is commonly found in the Hymnals, Breviaries, &c., of almost all churches of the West. Before the 12th cent. copies are much less plentiful. In order to determine the text, seven ms., all assigned to the 11th cent., have been collated as follows:—

Three now in the British Museum, viz., Jel. A., vi. f. 53 (Hymnal), Vesp. D., xii. f. 77 (Hymnal), Add. 20848, f. 169 (Mozarabic Breviary); one at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, No. 321, page 221 (Psalter with hymns); one in the Bodleian, Liturg. Misc. 320, f. 32 (Hymnal); one at Durham, B. lib. 32, f. 27 (Hymnal); and one in the Vatican at Rome, Palat. 30, (Psalter with hymns).

Among other ancient ms. it is found in two Rheinau ms., now in the Kantonal-Bibliothek at Zürich, viz. No. 111, f. 172b, of the 10th cent., and No. 81, f. 149, of the 11th cent., in the latter assigned to Vespers; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, No. 387, page 215 (the earliest St. Gall ms. in which the Librarian, Herr Litenson, has been able to find it); in a ms. of the 12th cent. in the Brit. Mus., Arnold, 1857, 167b (Psalter with Hymns), &c.

In other early ms. its existence and use are recognised, but only the first words of the hymn are given. Four such ms., all of the 11th cent., may be mentioned, viz.:—

Three in the British Museum, Harl. 2961, f. 102b (Collectarium and Hymnal), Titus D. xxvii. f. 76 (Book of Offices, &c., circa 1018), Add. 20850, f. 137b (Mozarabic Antiphony); and one in the Bodleian, Liturg. Misc., 320, f. (Pontifical).

From these sources the text is derived thus:—

(a) The Original Text and the Doxologies. The text of the seven ms. cited above is as follows:

i.	iii.
"Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentis tuorum visita, Imple superna gratia Quae Tu creasti pectora.	"Tu significans munera, Dexterae Dei Tu dignus, Tu rite promissae Patris, Sermonis ditae guttura.
ii.	iv.
"Qui Paraclitus diceris, Donum Dei altissimi, Fons vivus, ignis, charitas, Et spiritalis unctio.	"Accende lumen sensibus, Infunde sanctorum cordibus, Infirma nostri corporis Virtute firmas perpeti.

v. "Hostem repelles longius, Facemque domus protin- nus, Doctore sic Te praevio Visemus omne noxiom.	vi. "Per Te sciamus, da, Patrem, Noscamus atque Filium, Te utriusque Spiritum Credamus omni tem- pore."
---	--

These six stanzas clearly form the original text, and in some of the mss. cited (e.g. Add. 30848, and Palat. 30), in the Add. 18301, f. 128b (a Collectarium and Hymnal of the 12th cent.), and in some of the early printed Breviaries, e.g. the Augsburg Brev. of 1493, Basel Brev. of 1498, &c., &c., nothing more is added. Many mss. indeed contain a doxology, the most usual being:—

"Sit laus Patri cum Filio, Sancto simul Paraclito,
Nobisque mittat Filius
Charisma Sancti Spiritus."

The extraneous character of the doxology is however betrayed by the quantity of the penultimate of Paraclitus, and by the great variety of such doxologies, almost every church having its own special one. The doxology in the Durham Hymnal is:—

"Sit laus Patri cum Genito, Amborum et Paraclito,
Proles ut hunc promiserat,
Nobis modoque tribuat."

In the Roman Brev. of 1570 and 1632 the doxology reads:—

"Deo Patri sit gloria,
Et Filio, Qui a sanctis
Surreat, ac Paraclito,
In sempiterna (saeculorum) saecula."

But whatever the form was it was, as a rule, merely a general doxology common to all the Pentecostal hymns, as indeed is often indicated by a rubric such as "Sic terminantur Hymni usque ad Vesperas Sabbatissequentis" (Brev. Rom.). In the Arsenal MS. 155, only the words "Sit laus Patri," are added; and in the Vesp. D., xii., "Deo Patri sit gloria."

The variations in the six stanzas of the text proper are few and of small importance, viz. in st. iii. ll. 3, 4, some mss. give "promissum" and "ditans," and in st. iv. l. 4, some mss. read "perpetim." In the Roman Brev. of 1632 the variations introduced are:—

- ii. l. 1. Qui dicis Paraclitus.
- ii. l. 2. Almissis donum Dei.
- iii. l. 2. Dignus Paternae dexteræ.
- vi. l. 3. Reges utriusque Spiritum.

These variations however rest on no MS. authority, but are merely due to the tasteless revision of the Breviary hymns made in 1628–31, under Urban VIII., and are simply somewhat clumsy attempts to improve the rhythm and scansion. That in st. ii. l. 1, is especially to be regretted, as it destroys one of the most characteristic features of the hymn, viz. the way in which it preserves the correct quantity of the penultimate of Paraclitus, contrary to the general practice in Latin.

(8) Additions to the Original Text. In some mss. an additional stanza is given between st. v. and vi. as follows:—

"De gaudiorum praemia,
De gratiarum munera,
Dissolve illis vincula,
Astringe pacis foedera."

This is contained e.g. in two mss. in the Bodleian (Laud Misc., 468 f. 4, of the 12th cent., and Liturg. Misc., 370, f. 117, circa 1340), and in some of the early printed books, e.g.

the Basel Brev. of 1493. But it is wanting in the earliest mss. (e.g. it is not in the Durham Hymnal; Vesp. D., xii.; Jul. A., vi.; Liturg. Misc., 320; Palat. 30; C. C. C., 391), and the true ending of the hymn is st. vi., which forms the real doxology, no other being needed.

Another extraneous stanza is sometimes inserted after st. vi., viz.:—

"Dudum sacrata pectora,
Tua replenti gratia,
Dimitte nunc peccamina,
Et da quietis tempora."

This is found in the Durham Hymnal, but it has no business in the text, and really belongs to the "Beata nobis gaudia" (p. 190, l.). In the Sarum Brev. it is attached, along with the doxology, "Sit laus Patri cum Filio," to other Pentecostal hymns.

There is thus no doubt that the hymn should really consist of the 24 lines printed together as above, ending with the stanza "Per Te sciamus, da, Patrem." We may add that in a ms. circa 1100, in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 18302, f. 24), a rubric regarding the "Veni Creator Spiritus" is followed by a hymn in four st., viz.:—

- I. Te nunc Deus plasmam.
- II. Dudum sacrata pectora.
- III. Hic, Christe, nunc Paraclitus.
- IV. Sit laus Patri cum Filio.

Of these st. ii., iv. are noted above, st. i. is from the "Beata nobis gaudia," and st. iii. is given in the Durham Hymnal as part of the "Jam Christus astra ascenderat" (p. 176, i.).

ii. Authorship and Date. It is curious how very little is known of the authorship of this hymn, which has taken deeper hold of the Western Church than any other mediæval hymn, the Te Deum alone excepted. The real author is as yet unknown, but it has been ascribed (a) to the Emperor Charles the Great (Charlemagne), (b) to St. Ambrose, (c) to Gregory the Great, and to (d) Habacuc Maurus. We may discuss these in this order.

(a) Charlemagne. The best known and most widely accepted opinion is that which ascribes it to the Emperor Charles the Great. Even Dom Guéranger (Institutions Liturgiques, 2nd ed., vol. 1, p. 129, Paris, 1878) repeats it without qualification. This is however a legend, and falls to pieces at once when traced to its source. The original authority is Ekkehard v., Monk of St. Gall, in his Vita Sancti Notkeri, written circa 1220. There, in chapter xviii., Ekkehard says:—

"It is told of the blessed man [Notker] that one day when he went through the dormitory he listened, for there was hard by a mill, whose wheel was revolving slowly for lack of water, and groaning, gave out sounds something like words. And the man of God, hearing this, straightway was in the spirit, and pronounced that most beautiful hymn, and gave utterance to the honey-sweet melody from the same kind Spirit which possessed him: I mean the Sequence on the Holy Spirit 'Sancti Spiritus adit nobis gratia' (p. 268, l.). And when he had completed it he sent it as a present to the Emperor Charles the Great, who was then probably staying at Aachen. And the same Christian Emperor sent back to him by the messenger that with which the name Spirit had inspired him, viz., the hymn 'Veni, Creator Spiritus.'"

Here we have the original story which has spread so widely, and has been so generally accepted. The words in Italian above are really found in Ekkehard's autograph ms. at St. Gall (No. 556, p. 343), but are a manifest blunder for Charles the Great (Charlemagne) died in 814, and Notker was born about 26 years after, circa 840. The Charles to whom the St. Gall tradition really referred was probably Charles the Fat, and such an interchange of courtesies is not at all unlikely to have taken place between Notker and that Emperor. Charles the Fat paid Notker special attention during his visit to St. Gall in 883, and the incident which Ekkehard relates may well have taken place soon after. That the hymn was actually composed by Charles the Fat does not seem probable. If however this tradition has any foundation of fact it implies that the hymn was at that time newly composed, or at least had lately come into the Emperor's hand. This suggests that it was written in the last quarter of the 9th cent., and by a person who was in some way connected with the court of the Emperor of Germany.

(6) St. Ambrose. Like most other important Latin hymnists also, has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, e.g. by Gawest. It appears as his in some early printed books, e.g. in the Preclarium Christianum, Leipzig, 1575, and is included in some of the earlier editions of his works, e.g. Paris, 1614. It is not however claimed for him by the Benedictine editors of his works, nor by Biraghi in his Juni sinceri e Germai di Sant' Ambrogio, 1862, and there is really no evidence whatever of his authorship. It is true that it bears traces of his influence. The lines:—

"Accende lumen sensibus, Infunde amorem cordibus," recall the words "Infunde lumen cordibus" of the very ancient hymn "O lux beata Trinitas" (p. 648, ii.), which is probably his work; while ll. 3, 4 of vs. iv. are borrowed directly from the "Veni Redemptor gentium" (p. 1211, ii.), which is certainly his. But the mere fact that it borrows two lines from a well-known hymn of his is no evidence whatever that as a whole it is his work. The hymns of St. Ambrose soon became the common property of the Church, and later writers had no scruples about making free use of them in their own compositions. The "Veni Creator" is ascribed to St. Ambrose by no ancient writer, and the ascription to him may be set aside without hesitation.

(7) Gregory the Great. Mone, l. p. 242 (followed by Koch, l. p. 74), ascribes it to Gregory the Great, on the following grounds:—(1) Its correspondence with his known hymns and his other works. (2) Its classical metre, with occasional rhymes. (3) The correct quantity of the penultimate of Paraditatur, as showing a knowledge of Greek. These arguments have a certain value, and Gregory is in himself not an unlikely person to have written the hymn. But had it been the work of a writer of such repute as Gregory in the 6th cent. we might fairly have expected to come across some early notices of it. It is however attributed to him by no early writer, and is wanting in the earliest hymnals which we possess, and is not alluded to by Bede (d. 735) in his "De arte metrica," where many early hymns are mentioned. It is quite precarious to assign it, on purely subjective grounds, and in the absence of any external testimony, to so early and so celebrated a writer as Gregory.

(8) Rhabanus Maurus, sometime Archbishop of Mainz (b. circa 776, d. 856). Christopher Brower, a learned Jesuit, included the "Veni Creator" in his edition of Rhabanus's Poemata, Mainz, 1617, p. 74. But he was evidently not at all certain that it was really by Rhabanus, and does not print the text in full. He gives no definite information regarding the ms. which he used, and it does not seem to have been of any great antiquity. Some of the hymns in this ms. are certainly not by Rhabanus, and his claim to the rest is very shadowy. There are contained 29 hymns, but of these Professor E. L. Dümmler, in his critical edition of the Carmina of Rhabanus (Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, vol. II, Berlin, 1884), has only seen reason enough to accept two, both of which he gives among the pieces "incertae originis" and he did not find sufficient ground to include the "Veni Creator" even among the poems doubtfully ascribed to Rhabanus. It is indeed true that in Rhabanus's prose work De Universis, Bk. I, chapter III. (Migne's PP. Lat. cxi. cols. 23-26) there are some phrases which resemble portions of this hymn; but Mone, l. p. 251, and Abp. Trench, in his Sac. Lat. Poetry (ed. 1864, pp. 178, 185) give quite as close parallels from the writings of St. Augustine and others.

Here we are compelled to leave the question. The evidence is too scanty to draw a positive conclusion. The hymn is clearly not the work of St. Ambrose nor of Charles the Great. Nor is there sufficient evidence to allow us to ascribe it either to Gregory the Great, to Rhabanus Maurus, or to any of the ecclesiastics connected with the court of Charles the Fat. The references to the hymn do not help us much in determining the authorship, as the following facts will show.

The earliest definite allusion to it (apart from the statement of Ekkehard) is that it was used at a Synod at Rheims in 1049 (see C. J. Hefele's Conciliengeschichte, vol. iv. 2nd ed., 1879, p. 729). Daniel, l. p. 313 (ed. 1856, p. 206) indeed says that it had been used at the "Delation of St. Marcellus" in 899, and to prove this gives a quotation which he professes to derive from the Annales Ord. S. Benedicti, ed. Mabillon, tom. vi. p. 532. But his date and his reference are equally at fault. The quotation is really from the Acta Sanctorum Ordinis S. Benedicti, ed. D'Achery and Mabillon, Saec. iv. pt. II. (vol. vi.) p. 513. Paris, 1880, and forms part of the account of the reception of the relics of St. Marcellus (Marcul) at Perone (Peronne on the Somme), not in 899, but in 1162. Nor has the hymn yet been found in any ms. earlier than the latter part of the 10th cent. Mone, l. p. 242, indeed speaks of it as being found in ms. earlier than Charles (who d. 814), but the earliest ms. which he used is of the 14th cent., and his statement is probably the result of a mistaken inference from Thomasius. It is true that Thomasius frequently cites Vatican ms. of the 8th cent., and it is also true that he includes the "Veni Creator" in his Hymnarius. But in this case it is not allowable to put two and two together, for Thomasius, ff. 375, does not cite any of these early ms. as giving the text of the "Veni Creator." The closing lines:—

"Te utriusque Spiritum

have been thought to imply that the hymn was written after the Council of Aachen (Aquisgranum or Aix-la-Chapelle) in 809, when the doctrine of the Double Procession was definitely promulgated. The hymn however does not emphasize the doctrine in any way, and similar language was used in the Western Church from a very early period.

iii. Use. In mediaeval times the singing of this hymn was generally marked with special dignity, by the ringing of bells, the use of incense, of lights, of the best vestments, &c. Its use in the Hour Services at Pentecost can be traced back, with tolerable certainty, to the 10th cent.* The earlier ms. for the most part allot it only to Vespers (so Jul. A., vi.; Vesp. D. xii.; the Durham Hymnal; Liturg. Misc., 320), and so late as the 14th cent. Radulf, Dean of Tongres, giving the "Veni Creator" for Vespers, says that at the lesser hours "more Romano" the hymn was never changed (Hittorp, Cologne, 1588, col. 1125). But some time before this date it had certainly been adopted in some churches at Tierce, for a St. Alban's Breviary of the 12th cent. (Brit. Mus. Reg. 2 A. xx.) gives it for this service and not for Vespers; and this was also the Barum use. Its use at Tierce (in accordance with Acts ii. 15) is said to have originated in the monastery of Cluny, being traced to St. Hugh, Abbot of Cluny (b. 1024, d. 1109) by an anonymous writer cited in the Bollandist Acta Sanctorum, for April 29 (see Annales Ordinis S. Benedicti, vol. v. p. 530). In two Mozarabic service-books of the 11th cent., now in the British Museum, viz. a Breviary (Add. 30848), and an Antiphony (Add. 30850), it is assigned to Lauds. It is also ordered for use at Lauds, as well as Vespers, in a German Breviary, circa 1100, now in the British Museum (Add. 18302); but otherwise its use at Lauds seems to be quite exceptional.

In the Ordination Services its use has not been traced earlier than the 11th cent. It is not found in the Pontifical of Egbert (circa 950, printed by the Surtees Society, vol. xxvii.,

* A clear indication that the hymn was only beginning to be known in the 10th cent. is furnished by G. M. Dreyes in his Hymnarius Moiriacensis, 1868, p. 93. He prints the text from a ms. of the 10th cent., but there it does not occur in the regular series of hymns, and had evidently only recently come into use at the Abbey (Benedictine) of Moiriac (department of Tarn et Garonne). This ms. seems to present several textual variations peculiar to itself.

1856), nor in numerous ancient services given by Martene and by Morinus; while in some MSS. the reference to it is added, by a later hand, in the margin. It is however in at least three Pontificals of the 11th cent., viz. one of Soissons given by Martene (Ordo vii. vol. ii. p. 396); that in the Bodleian MS. Liturg. Mss. 359; and Samson's Pontifical C. C. C., 146, f. 119, perhaps the earliest instance of its occurrence in a Pontifical. In the Sens Missal of 1529, f. clvii., it is given as part of the priest's preparation for celebrating Mass; and so in the Sarum Missal of 1497 (Burntialand reprint, 1861, ff. col. 577); while in the York and Hereford Missals it is ordered to be sung after the Lavabo (see W. Maskell's Ancient Liturgy, pp. 4, 92, 93). In modern Roman Service-books it is given in the Breviary, for Vespers and Tiers at Pentecost; and in the Pontifical for the Ordination of Priests, Consecration of Bishops, Laying the foundation stone of a Church, the Consecration of a Church, the "Ordo ad Synodum," and various other services.

It may be added that a full commentary on the theological bearings, and ritual uses of this hymn, will be found in the Abbé S. G. Pimout's Hymnes du Bréviaire Romain, vol. ii., pt. ii., Paris, 1884, pp. 125-143. [E. C. S. G.]

The "Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentis" has frequently been tr. into German. Through two of these versions it has passed into English as follows:—

1. Komm, Gott Schöpfer, heiliger Geist. This is a full and faithful version by M. Luther, 1st pub. in Eyn Eochirion, Erfurt, 1524. Thence in Wachernagel, iii. p. 14; also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 25, and in the Una. L. S. 1851, No. 172. Tr. as:—

1. Come, Thou Creator God. As an ode of 68 lines by Miss Fry, in her Hym. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 26. From this a cento, in 5 st. of 8 M., beginning "O Holy Spirit now," was included in Whittemore's Suppl. to All H. Bks., 1860, and the Moth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863.

2. Greater Spirit, Holy Devo. In full by R. Massie in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 35. Repeated in Reid's Fraise Bk., 1872, and the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Come God, Creator! Holy Ghost! Thy, &c." By J. Anderson, 1844, p. 21 (1847, p. 23). (2) "Greater Spirit! hear our prayer." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1855, p. 51. (3) "Come, God, Creator, Holy Ghost! And visit every." By Miss Marington, 1865, p. 18. (4) "Come, God, Creator, Holy Ghost, Visit." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 387, altered in his Exotic, 1876, p. 66. (5) "Come, God, Creator, Holy Ghost, And visit Thou." In Dr. Bacon's Hym. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 24, partly based on Mr. Massie's tr.

II. Es dir, Geist Schöpfer, sehen wir. This is a free version, in 8 st. of 4 l., by J. A. Schlegel, 1st pub. in the 2nd ed., 1772, of his Sammlung geistlicher Gesänge (1st ed. 1766), p. 99, entitled "On the Names and Gifts of the Holy Ghost. The old Ambrosian hymn, 'Veni Creator Spiritus,' newly translated. A Whitsuntide hymn." The form tr. is that in the Berlin G. B., 1821, No. 287, which is considerably altered and reduced to 5 st. The tr. is:—

To Thee, Greater Spirit, now we see. By J. Salisbury, tr. in 1877, and 1st pub. as No. 246 in the Bapt. Hym., 1879. [J. M.]

The trs. of the Veni Creator Spiritus direct from the Latin into English have been numerous and important. They include the following:—

1. Come Holy Ghost, eternal God. This tr. in C.M. in the Ordering of Priests in The Book of Common Prayer, was apparently printed in the Ordinal of 1549, and certainly in the 2nd book of Edward 6th, where it is given in 7 st. of 8 l. (Brit. Mus.). As it is too long to reproduce in full, we give the first and last stanzas only:—

(1) "Come holy ghost eternal god Proceeding from above,
Bothe frō the father and the soue, the God of peace and love.
Visite our mynde, and into vs thy heavenly grace inspire,
That in all truthe and Godlinese, we Maie have true desire.
* * * * *

(7) "Laude and praise be to the father, and to the sonne equal,
And to the holy Spirit also, one God coeternal,
And praye we that the onely Sonne, vouchsafe his Spirit to sende,
To al that do professe his name unto the worldes ende."

A tr. which seems to be a variation of this text (but regarded by some as an older tr.) is found in The whole Psalter, translated into English metre, &c., John Daye, London, M.D. (Brit. Mus., Lincoln Cathedral Library, &c.) [Psaltern, English, p. 917, § ix.] This is known as Archbishop Parker's Psalter, and was written by him whilst in exile, 1553-1558 (Abovivi Psalterium versum metrico lingua vulgari, Parker's Diary, 1557). The tr. seems to be the preceding rendered into more even feet. It is in 16 st. of 4 l., of which st. i., ii., and xv. and xvi. are as follows:

- (1) "Come holy Ghost: eternal God,
Which doest from God proceede.
The father sytt; and she the soune,
One God as we do reade.
(2) "Oh visite thou: our minde and harte,
Thy heavenly grace inspire:
That we in truth: and godlinesse,
May fet our whole desire."
* * * * *
(15) "Be laude to God: the father hys,
And God his sonne praye ys:
Be praye to God: the holy Spirit,
One God in Trinitie,
(16) "Pray we that Christ: the favour,
Vouchsafe his Spirit to send:
To all which true: professe his name,
Till all the world doth end."

The next form of this tr. is that in "The Ordering of Priests" in The Book of Common Prayer, and given therein in 1662. This is also in 16 st. of 4 l., of which st. i., ii., and xv. and xvi. read as in modern copies of the Prayer Book:—

- (1) "Come, Holy Ghost, eternal God,
Proceeding from above,
Both from the Father and the Son,
The God of peace and love;
(7) "Visit our minds, into our hearts
Thy heavenly grace inspire:
That truth and godliness we may Pursue with full desire."
* * * * *
(15) "To God the Father laud and praise,
And to His blessed Son,
And to the Holy Spirit of grace,
Co-equal Three in One.
(16) "And pray we, that our only Lord
Would please His Spirit to send
On all that shall profess His Name,
From hence to the world's end."

From this text two or three centos, all beginning with st. i., have been adopted by a few hymnal compilers.

In Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., 1854 and later eds. this tr. is divided into three parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. vii., "O Holy Ghost, into our minds Send down Thy heavenly light," and Pt. iii. with st. xii., "Of strife and of dissension." Pt. ii. is sometimes used as a separate hymn. W. J. Blew reads, "O Holy Ghost, into our souls."

2. Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire. By Bp. John Cosin. This is in his Collection of Private Devotions in the Practice of the Ancient Church, called the Hours of Prayer, &c., 1627. This book was modelled on the Primers which were extensively used during the reigns of Henry VII. and Elizabeth. It contains devotions and a hymn for each of the Canonical Hours, together with other devotions, hymns, and prayers (see Reprint by J. G. & F. Rivington, London, 1838). This tr. is appointed for the "Third Hour," and is given in 18 lines. It was also given in an unaltered form in "The Ordering of Priests" and "The Consecration of Bishops" in The Book of Common Prayer, 1662. This and the c. m. tr. above are the only metrical hymns which have been legally sanctioned in the Church of England by both Church and State. In the hymn books of the last century Bp. Cosin's tr. is rarely found; but in modern collections it is largely used, and in almost every instance in an unaltered form. In the Gospel Magazine for 1774, p. 449, it is given as a "Hymn to the Holy Spirit, modernized from the Office for Ordination." The opening lines are:—

"Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,
And warm with uncreated fire."

The signature "Minimus" is that of A. M. Toplady. This "modernized" form of the text has never come into use, and was excluded, even by Toplady himself, from his Ps. & Hys., 1776.

3. Creator Spirit, by Whose aid. By J. Dryden. This appeared in his Miscellaneous Poems, pt. iii., 1693, and the Primer of 1706 and 1732, in 7 st. of unequal length, numbering 39 lines in all. It is found in numerous collections, both of the past and the present centuries, but always in an altered and abbreviated form. One of the first to adapt it for congregational purposes was J. Wesley, who included it in his Ps. & Hys., 1741, in an abbreviated form. He was followed by G. Whitefield, 1753, A. M. Toplady, 1776, and others, until the adoption of the hymn became general. The variations which have been introduced into the text are so many and various that it is almost impossible to set them forth in an intelligible manner. The text of given hymnal which may be consulted should be compared with the original in the Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 209. In some American collections it begins "O Source of uncreated light."

4. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator come, And visit all the souls of Thine. By Tate and Brady in the Supplement to the New Version of the Psalms, &c., circa 1700 (3rd ed., 1702). See p. 301, i. This is in L.M. in 28 l. It is given in the Scottish Hym., 1870, as a tr. by Miss Winkworth, in error. It is also in J. Chandler's Hym. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 50.

5. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, Inspire the [these] souls of Thine. Tate and Brady. This is the c.m. version in the Supplement as above, circa 1700 (3rd ed., 1702). It also appears in J.

Chandler's Hym. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 91, with alterations in the last stanza only; and again in his Hym. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 50, and in each instance without any indication of its source. Hence it is usually attributed to Chandler, but in error.

6. Holy Spirit, gently come. By W. Hammond, in his Ps., Hys., and Spiritual Songs, &c., 1745, p. 205, in 5 st. of 8 l. This was given in an unaltered form in the 1864 ed. of Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., No. 284.

7. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, Come, visit Thou each willing breast. By Bp. R. Mant in his Ancient Hym., 1837, p. 62, in 7 st. of 4 l. (ed. 1871, p. 110). Its use is limited.

8. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come. The 2nd stanza of this tr. in the Irvingite Hym. for the Churches, 1864 and 1871, given as "Tr. by C., 1845," begins: "Thou, Who art named the Paraclete, The heavenly gift, &c." We have not found it elsewhere.

9. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come! The darkness of our minds blame. By F. W. Faber, in his Jesus and Mary, 1849, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hymns, 1862. In the New Metric Hymnal, 1875, it is given as "O come, Creator Spirit, come," from the 1871 ed. of Faber's Hymns, No. 40, and abridged to 5 st. of 4 l.

10. Come, O Creator Spirit blest! And in our souls take up Thy rest. By E. Caswall in his Lyra Catholica, 1848, p. 103, in 7 st. of 4 l., and in his Hymns, 1873, p. 58. It is given in several modern hymnals.

11. Come, O Creator Spirit! Visit this [these] soul of Thine. By E. Caswall. This tr. of a slightly different text from the above, which is from the Rom. Brev., also appeared in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 291, and in his Hymns, 1873, p. 133.

12. Creator, Spirit, Lord of grace. By R. Campbell, in his Hym. and Anthems, &c., 1850, p. 78, in 7 st. of 4 l. with ll. 1, 2, of st. v. from Dryden. This is found, slightly altered, in a few modern hymnals. It is also in O. Shipley's Annus Sacerdotis, 1884, p. 170.

13. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, And visit every faithful breast. By Jane E. Leeson in her Paraphrases & Hys., 1853, p. 81, in two parts. Pt. ii. beginning: "Come, Holy Ghost, with sacred fire."

14. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, Down from Thy heavenly throne. This is given in the Irvingite Hym. for the Churches, 1864 and 1876, as a "Tr. by J. E. L., 1852," i.e. Jane E. Leeson, as above, No. 13.

15. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, And in our souls serenely rest. In the Catholic Psalmist, 1858, p. 65, and probably by T. J. Potter.

16. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator blest, Vouchsafe within our souls to rest. This is given in H. A. & M., 1861, and again in 1875. In the index to the latter edition it is said to be by the "Rev. E. Caswall and the Compilers." The Compilers, however, were indebted to Bp. Mant and R. Campbell for one fourth of their cento.

17. Come, Holy Spirit, come, Inspire the souls of Thine. This tr. was given anonymously in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, No. 69. It is apparently Caswall's tr. in 7 st. (No. 11 above) rewritten in S.M. It is the only S.M. tr. of the Veni Creator with which we are acquainted. It was repeated in the Parish H. Bk., 1875.

18. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, From Thy bright heavenly throne. This appeared anonymously in the Hys. for the Year, 1867, and several later Roman Catholic collections.

Other trs. are:—

1. Come, holy ghost, o creator eternal. Primer (London), 1855.
2. Come, holy Ghoste that us hath made. Primer (Antwerp), 1699.
3. Creator, holy Ghost descend, Visite our minds. Primer (Mechlin), 1615 and 1619.

30. Creator, Holy Spirit! come. H. M. Macpitt. In The Juvenile Mtr. Mag. of the U. Presb. Church, Jan. 1869, and his Songs, &c., 1876.
31. O Spirit, O Creator, come. G. S. Hodges, 1876.
32. Creator Spirit, all divine. J. D. Ayikura, 1884.
33. O Holy Ghost, Creator, come. S. W. Duffield in Schaff's History of the Christian Church, vol. 17, 1888, p. 427, and Duffield's Latin Hymn-Writers, &c., 1889, p. 121.

We have also seen two or three additional references to American trs., but have been unable to verify them.

The great similarity which is found in the majority of these trs. suggests that many of the later translators were very much indebted to their predecessors for the terseness and vigour of their renderings. This suggestiveness is most apparent in the more striking passages of the hymn.

[J. J.]

Veni, jam veni, benignissime. [Whit-sunday] Mons. No. 183, gives this, in 28 lines, from a 12th cent. ms. at Mainz. It is almost identical with a portion of the Oratio viz. of St. Anselm of Canterbury, which is also found as No. ix. in the Mediaeval compilation known as the Meditationes of St.

Augustine (Venice, 1553, f. 11). The passage in St. Anselm is:—

"Veni jam, veni, benignissime dolentis anime consolator in opportunis istibus, et in tribulationibus adiutor. Veni, mundator scelorum, curator rubetum. Veni, fortitudo fragillium, relevator labentium; veni, lumen lumium doctor, superborum destructor. Veni, orphanorum plus pater, viduarum dulcis iudex. Veni, spes pauperum, refocillator deficientium. Veni, navigantium scelus, naufragantium portus. Veni, omnium vicentium singulare decus, mortentium unica salus. Veni Sanctissime Spiritus, veni et miscere mel," &c.

It is tr. as:—

1. Come Thou, O come, Sweetest and Kindest. By G. Monkrie, in his Hys. and Lyrics, 1867, p. 143; the People's H., 1867, No. 187; and the Hyemary, 1872.
2. Come, yes and quickly come. By S. W. Duffield, in his Latin Hymn Writers, &c., 1889. [J. M.]

Veni Redemptor gentium [omnium]. St. Ambrose. [Christmas.] This is one of the twelve hymns assigned to St. Ambrose by the Benedictine editors. It is plainly referred to as the work of St. Ambrose by St. Augustine (Sermo 572), and is definitely cited as his by Pope Celestine, at a Council held at Rome, 430; by Faustus, who in 455 became Bp. of Rhegium (Riez in France); in his Epistola ad Gratianum diaconum; by M. A. Cassiodorus (d. 575), in his commentary on the Psalms; and by other early writers. The text in 7 st. is in Daniel, i. No. 10, with further notes at iv. pp. 4, 353 (quoting at length the reference by St. Augustine, Pope Celestine, Faustus and Cassiodorus, and citing it as in a 9th cent. ms. at Bern); in Mons. No. 30, and others. Sometimes a stanza is prefixed, as follows:—

"Intende qui regis Israel,
Super cherubim qui sedes,
Appare Ephraem, coram excita
Potentiam tuam, et veni."

Celestine and Cassiodorus however cite the hymn as beginning "Veni Redemptor gentium"; and this stanza does not appear to be found in any ms. earlier than the 14th cent., and has obtained no currency save in the Claretian Breviaries. In any case these lines are not by St. Ambrose, for they are simply the Vulgate of Ps. lxxx., which begins: "Qui regis Israel intende; qui deducis velut ovem, Joseph. Qui sedes super cherubim, manifestare coram Ephraem, Benjamin et Manasse excita potentiam tuam, et veni, ut salvos facias nos."

The hymn is found in the Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Mozarabic of 1502, and other Breviaries; generally assigned to Christmas Eve or Christmas Day. But it is not in the Roman Breviary, and can hardly be said to be in use at the present day, a somewhat unfortunate ecclesiastical prudery having set aside this noble composition. It must however be confessed that a strictly literal English version is hardly desirable for modern congregational use. The imagery is partly borrowed from Ps. xix.

[W. A. S.]

Mons. No. 30, gives the "Veni Redemptor" text from a Reichenau ms. of the 9th cent., a Trier of the 8th or 9th, a Munich of the 10th cent., &c. (prefixing the st. "Intende qui regis" from mss. of the 14th cent. at Karlsruhe and Liechtenthal). Thomasius, ii. p. 371, cites it as in two Vatican mss. of the 8th cent. It is in five mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum, viz. in three of the early English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 32 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 23, and Harl. 2961, f. 226), and two of the early Spanish Church (Add. 30848, f. 24; Add. 30851, f. 120). Also in the Bern ms., No. 455, of the 16th cent., and in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p.

239). In the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 48, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 13). The text is also in Bæssler, No. 26; Wackernagel, l. No. 12; Hymn. Sarricæ, 1851, p. 71; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 87; Migne's PP. Lat. lxxxvi., col. 114; G. M. Drevos's Hymn. Notisiacensis, 1868, from a 10th cent. ms.; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1839 and 1863, and others.

This hymn has been rendered through the German into English, as follows:—

1. Wen komm der Heidenheilend. A full and faithful tr. by M. Luther, 1st pub. in Eyn Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524. Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 12, in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1834, p. 4, and the Unt. L. S., 1851, No. 17. Tr. as:—

Come, Thou Saviour of our race. Omitting st. iv., by W. M. Reynolds, as No. 776 in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850. Repeated omitting the tr. of st. viii. in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868.

Other tra. are:—

(1) "Now the Saviour comes indeed," by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 1. (2) "Saviour of the Nations, come," as No. 346 in pt. ii., 1743, of the Moravian E. Bk. (3) "Rejoice, our nature Christ assumes," by J. Gambold (?), as No. 1001 in the Suppl. of 1808 to the Moravian E. Bk., 1801 (1804, No. 35). (4) "Now the Saviour of the heathen," by Miss Fry, 1846, p. 1. (5) "Now comes the world's Redeemer," by J. Anderson, 1848, p. 1 (1847, p. 39). (6) "The time draws nigh, swift fly the years," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 38. (7) "Saviour of the heathen, know," by R. Kossitz, 1854, p. 1, repeated by Dr. Bacon, 1886, p. 18. (8) "Come, Saviour of nations wild," by Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Mag., 1867, p. 153, and his Brother, 1876, p. 33.

ii. Komm Heidenheilend, Liliogeld (sometimes altered to "Komm Himmelsfürst, komm Wunderheld"). See Campanus, J., p. 201, ii. [J. M.]

The tra. direct from the Latin into English are:—

1. Come, Thou Redeemer of the earth, Come testify. By J. M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 12. Included in the Hymnary, 1872, as "Hail, blest Redeemer of the earth," and others. In the Office H. Bk., 1889, it begins, "Come, blest Redeemer of the earth."

2. Redeemer of the nations, come, Pure offering, &c. By Elizabeth Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 97. The tr. in Mercer's Church Psalter & H. Bk., Oxford ed. 1864, No. 73, is by W. Mercer, based upon this tr. by Mrs. Charles. The first two lines and one or two others are taken verbatim.

3. Redeemer of the nations come, Appear from out, &c. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, with the signature "A. L. P."

4. O come, Redeemer of mankind, appear. By D. T. Morgan. This tr. was given in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875, and again in the translator's Hymns and Other Poetry of the Latin Ch., 1890.

Other tra. are:—

1. Come, Redeemer of the nations. Ep. J. Williams, 1845.

2. Come, Saviour of the earth. I. Williams, in his Thoughts in Past Years, 2nd ed., 1848.

3. Come, blest Redeemer of the earth. W. J. Copeland, 1849.

4. Come, Thou Redeemer of the earth, The Virgin's, &c. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

5. Redeemer of the nations, come, Appear, Thou Son, &c. J. D. Chambers, 1852 and 1867.

6. Come, high Redeemer, Spotless one. J. W. Hewitt, 1859.

7. Come, Saviour, come, to all the earth. H. Kynaston, 1862.

8. O Thou Redeemer of our race. Ray Palmer, in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

9. Redeemer of the world, do Thou draw near. D. T. Morgan, 1871.

10. Redeemer of the nations, come, Display Thy, &c. H. M. Macgill, 1876.

11. Redeemer of the nations, come, Show them a Virgin, &c. R. Thornton, in the S. P. C. K. Father's for English Readers, St. Ambrose, 1879.

The "Intende qui regis Israel" form of the text has also been tr. by W. J. Blew, in his Church Hymns and Tune Bk., 1852-55, as "Shepherd of Israel, Hear Thou our hymn." [J. J.]

Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte coelitus. Innocent III. (?) [Whitmanide.] In annotating this beautiful Sequence we shall deal i. with its Motifs, ii. with the MS. in which it is contained, iii. with its Authorship, and iv. with the Variations in its Use.

i. Motifs. The opinion of critics is unanimous in regarding this Sequence as one of the masterpieces of Latin sacred poetry. We need only quote two notices of it. Clichtovæus (Etymodatorium, Paris, 1516, f. 171), says of it:—

"Nor indeed, in my opinion, can this piece be sufficiently praised; for it is above all praise, whether by reason of its wonderful sweetness along with a most clear and flowing style, or by reason of its agreeable brevity along with wealth and profusion of ideas, especially as almost every line expresses one idea, or finally by reason of the elegant grace of its structure, in which things contrasted are set over against each other, and most aptly linked together. And I well believe that the author (whoever he was), when he composed this piece, had his soul transfused by a certain heavenly sweetness, by which, the Holy Spirit being its author, he entered so much sweetness in so few words."

And Archbishop Trench, in his Sac. Lat. Poetry (ed. 1864, p. 195) speaks of it as:—

"The loveliest . . . of all the hymns in the whole circle of Latin sacred poetry," adding that it "could only have been composed by one who had been acquainted with many sorrows, and also with many consolations."

In Mediaeval times it was often called the Golden Sequence. It is not indeed distinguished by great and absolute originality of idea, for in its leading thoughts it was clearly influenced by earlier pieces, such as the "Sancti Spiritus adit" (p. 62, l.), the "Qui procedis" (p. 94, l.), the "O ignis Spiritus Paracliti" (p. 87, l.), the "Veni Creator" (p. 126, l.), and the "Veni Sancte Spiritus: Reple" (pp. 61, l., and 116, l.). But it combines a stately grace, a perfect rhythmic melody, and a faculty of saying just the right thing in just the fitting words, in such a measure as to disarm criticism, and at once to defy comparison with any other hymn in any other language, and to make it almost impossible to present an adequate translation. It is in five stanzas, each consisting of six lines of seven-syllable trochaic verse (trochaic dimeter catalectic). The first stanza may be quoted to show its structure:—

"Veni Sancte Spiritus,
Et emitte coelitus,
Luce tuæ radium.
Veni, Pater pauperum,
Veni, dator inebrium,
Veni, lumen cordium."

This verse form has not yet been traced earlier than about 1150; and is never found in the earlier, or Notherian, type of Sequence, but is always associated with the Sequences of the second period (See e.g. p. 647, l., and E.

Barisch's Lat. Sequenzen, 1868, pp. 213, 285). Every third line, we may add, ends in ium, and rhymes with every other third line throughout the Sequence. In the hands of any but a first-rate writer such a verse-scheme would certainly have produced a sense of coldness and artificiality, but here "art conceals art," and the glow of devotion so transfixes and transfigures all that one is content to admire the beauty and hardly thinks of the skill.

ii. MSS. The ms. also show that this Sequence does not date from the earliest period of Sequence-writing. It is indeed found in four ms. at St. Gall, which, for the most part, date from the 11th cent. (Nos. 376, p. 434; 378, p. 232; 380, p. 28; 382, p. 250); but Herr Idensohn, the librarian, having kindly examined these ms., informs me that in no case is this Sequence in a hand earlier than the 13th cent. He adds that it is "everywhere a piece inserted by another, later, hand than that of the ms. volume in general." This agrees with what we have otherwise observed. Up to the present time this sequence has not been found in any ms. earlier than 1200.

For example, it is not in any of the early ms. indexed under the article Sequenzen (p. 1048), nor is it included in any of the 14 Troparies of Limoges, written prior to 1200, the sequences of which are printed by G. M. Dreyes, in his Procurium Lemovicense, 1859. It is found in two ms. of the 13th cent., now in the Brit. Mus., one written in Germany about the beginning of the century (Add. 24480, f. 62), the other written in France about the end of the century (Add. 23895, f. 436b). It is also in two early 14th cent. Paris Ms., now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 18698, f. 151; Harl. 2891, f. 249b); in a Harford Ms., circa 1390, and a Fork Ms., circa 1390, both now in the Bodleian, nc. It is not in the fine Sarum Ms., of circa 1378, now in the Bodleian (Sarum 5); but it is in the London ed. of 1486, f. 241. In the Lincoln Ms. of circa 1400, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 11414, f. 803b) it is not found in the offices for Whitsonide, but is in an appendix of Sequences, the use of which was permitted, but not of obligation ("ad placitum"). Also in an early ms. in the University Library at Cambridge (U. l. 10), but in a section of that ms., which was written about the beginning of the 15th cent. The printed text is given in Moss, No. 186, from the St. Gall ms., No. 376, and later sources; Davis, ii. pp. 35, 384, iii. p. 287, v. p. 69, from a Hebrona ms. of the 13th cent., nc.; Wackerroget, l. No. 169; Bücher, No. 80; Kohrein, No. 129; Card. Newman's Elyensis Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1845; F. A. March's Lat. Hym., N. Y., 1878, p. 92, nc. In regard to the statement of Mr. Duffield (see below) that it is contained in the oldest Beichman and Eintriedeln ms., we may remark that Moss does not seem to have found it in any of the Beichman ms. now at Karlsruhe, and that the earliest Eintriedeln ms., which Moss (1863, p. 62), who was librarian there, cites as containing it, is one of the 16th cent.

iii. Authorship. Here critics are very far from being at one. The French tradition as a rule has not attempted to affix any author's name to the sequence, and so e.g. M. Leon Gautier, in his Les Tropes, 1866, pp. 7, 130, and his Poésie Religieuse, 1887, pp. 17, 18, 46, speaks of it as an anonymous sequence of the second period, written not earlier than the beginning of the 13th cent. It has, however, by others been ascribed to a variety of authors, e.g. (1) to Robert II. of France, (2) to Hermannus Contractus, (3) to Archbishop Stephen Langton, and (4) to Pope Innocent III.

(1) Robert II. of France. During the last fifty years the ascription to King Robert has been the usual one. It rests however on no foundation whatever save the statement of Durandus in his Rationale, bk. iv., in the section "De prosa seu sequentiis" (see p. 67, li.). That section contains less than a dozen lines, but in these succeeds in conveying a surprising amount of dubious information. Thus to Robert it ascribes not only the "Veni Sanctus Spiritus," but also the "Chorus nove Hiernsalem" (p. 224, l.), which is much more likely to be by Fulbert of Chartres. Then by a strange perversity it adjudges the "Salve regina" from Hermannus Contractus, and in compensation ascribes to him the "Sancti Spiritus adit," which is certainly not his. As will be seen by referring to p. 677, li., Durandus is the only ancient authority who ascribes the "Veni Sanctus Spiritus" to King Robert. Neither of the two ancient chronicles cited there do so, nor does the Chronicon Frosense (to 1226, see Robert II. in Varietas); and while William of Malmesbury (d. circa 1142) ascribes to Robert the "Sancti Spiritus adit," he does not mention the "Veni Sanctus Spiritus" (ed. Ep. Stubbs in the Rolls Series, 1867, p. 186). And, as noted above, the verse-form is much later than Robert's time. It is possible that Durandus, when he said that Robert composed "sequentium illam Veni Sanctus Spiritus," really referred to the "Veni Sanctus Spiritus: Reple" (q.v.). Whether or not there can be no doubt that the ascription of the "Veni Sanctus Spiritus, Et emittit coelitus" to Robert is without any sufficient reason.

(2) Hermannus Contractus (d. 1013, d. 1064). Equally little, or even less, reason exists for ascribing this sequence to Hermannus Contractus. Cardinal Bona, in his Harvum Libyopiscopus, Rome, 1871, p. 338, says that it "has been by some attributed to Hermannus Contractus." This attribution has recently been vacantly exposed by S. W. Duffield, in the New Englander, vol. xiv., 1886, pp. 612-632, and in his Lat. Hym. 1889, pp. 148-168. Mr. Duffield took great pains to make out a good case, but he altogether fails to produce anything that can be called proof in support of his assertions and conjectures. The sequence is ascribed to Hermannus Contractus by no ancient writer, nor by Amelin Schulliger (Sängerisches St. Gallen, 1859), who has in recent times devoted most attention to him. It is moreover entirely different in style from any of the pieces which have with some show of reason been ascribed to him (see K. Barisch's Lat. Sequenzen, 1868, pp. 61, 60, 106; also the note on "Veni Sanctus Spiritus: Reple"); and these are all composed in the verse-form of the first period of sequence-writing, while, as stated above, this sequence is in the verse-form of the second period.

(3) Stephen Langton (consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury by Innocent III. on June 17, 1207; performed his first episcopal act in England at Winchester on July 28, 1213; d. July 9, 1228). The ascription to Langton is found in a commentary on the Clavis de Hominatione of Melito of Sardis (d. circa 170), pub. by Cardinal J. R. Pitta in his Spicilegium Solesmense, vol. III, 1856, p. 180, where it is said, "Nevertheless let it suffice to adduce as testimony, what Magister Stephanus de Langton, a man venerable in life and doctrine, by the grace of God Archbishop of Canterbury, says in the praise of the Holy Spirit, in that excellent sequence which he composed concerning the Holy Spirit, thus" (then are quoted lines 7-12, 19-24, beginning "Consolator optime"). Pitta regards this commentary as the work of an English Cistercian who flourished about 1216, and says that this statement "of a contemporary and a fellow-countryman," who was clearly a careful writer, and skilled in literary matters, ought to carry great weight. It is to the present writer certainly worth recording, but hardly conclusive in the absence of further evidence.

(4) Pope Innocent III. The ascription to Innocent III., is found in chapter xviii. of the Pisæ sancti Notkeri, by Eikehard v., of St. Gall, as follows:—"There may fitly be added here a conversation which, in our times, took place with the Roman See ('sedem Romanam') concerning the blessed man [Notker]. The venerable Abbot of St. Gall, Ulrich, of pious memory, the sixth of this name [Ulrich v. d. 1148, and Ulrich vi. d. 1218], came to Rome to Pope Innocent III., having been sent on an embassy by King Frederick the Second, afterwards Emperor [crowned as King at Mainz, Dec. 9, 1212; crowned as Emperor at Aachen on July 25, 1215]. After they had talked together of many things, and conferred in turn on various matters, it happened that Moss, concerning the Holy Spirit, with the Sequence 'Sancti Spiritus adit nobis gratia,' was celebrated before the Pope (Apostolicum), the abbot also being present. That Pope himself had also composed a Sequence on the Holy Spirit, viz.: Veni Sanctus Spiritus. When the Moss and the prayers were over, they met again for conversation, and among other things the Pope asked the abbot, saying 'Who was your Notker, and in what way do you keep his anniversary?' For there were at Rome certain things written of him in the books of Sequences, which the Pope himself had read. The abbot replied that he was a simple monk... though certainly learned and holy. To whom the Pope rejoined, 'Do you not keep his festival, nc.?' [Notker was not however beatified till 1213, see p.

332, l.] This passage, with the words in italics, is contained in Ekkehard's autograph copy, written about 1228, and now at St. Gall (MS. No. 556, p. 342). From other sources we know that Ulrich vi. was sent to Rome by the Emperor Frederick to attend the Lateran Council (1215), and the conversation recorded above probably took place either then or at Whitsunday, 1216, for Innocent iii. d. July 16, 1216 (see the Mittheilungen zur oesterreichischen Geschichte, St. Gall, vols. xi. p. 130, and xvii. (1879), p. 114). Doubt has been cast on Ekkehard's statement on the ground that he blundered in ascribing the "Veni Creator" to Charlemagne. But in the present case it must be remembered that he was a monk at St. Gall at the time of which he speaks, and there is every reason to believe that he heard the story from the lips of Ulrich himself on his return from Rome. The facts above stated concerning the St. Gall ms. afford a strong presumption that the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" was unknown at St. Gall till Ulrich brought it back with him from Rome, and that it was at his instigation that it was inserted in the early sequentiales at St. Gall. And finally Innocent iii. was undoubtedly a man of great ability, and much more competent to have written such a poem than any of the others to whom it has been ascribed (see also pp. 1061-1082).

The whole evidence as to authorship may be summed up thus. The Sequence is clearly not earlier than about the beginning of the 13th cent. It is certainly neither by Robert II. nor by Hermannus Contractus. The most probable author is Innocent iii.

iv. Use. As already stated the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" is not found in any of the very early Missals or Sequentiaries. When it began to come into use it did not at once displace the older Whitsunday sequence, i.e. the "Sancti Spiritus adsit," for that continued, as a rule, to be used on Whitsunday up till the revision of the Roman Missal in 1668-70. Consequently the "Veni Sancte," though occasionally used on Whitsunday (as in the Breslau Missal of 1483), was almost universally appointed for use on one or more of the immediately succeeding week days.

So e.g. the Langres Missal, circa 1491, assigns it to the Monday; the Angers of 1489 to Tuesday; the Minster of 1487 to Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday; the Liège circa 1486 to Tuesday and Saturday; the Rouen of 1499 to Wednesday; the Augsburg of 1499 to Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday; the Chalons sur Marne of 1489, and the Beaufort of 1602 to Thursday; and the Paris of 1481 to Saturday. In other Missals it is given only in the Votive Mass of the Holy Spirit, e.g. in the Magdeburg of 1480, the Brixen of 1493, the Sarum of 1496, &c. The Langres, circa 1491, gives it also in a Mass in time of penitence. Martene (de antiqua ecclesie disciplina) says that in some places such as Limoges and Chalons sur Saône, it was sung as a carol in the Cathedral choir after Vespers or Compline on Ascension Day.

Finally it had the honour of being chosen as one of the four (see p. 1042, l.) sequences which were alone retained in the Roman Missal of 1570, and is there appointed for use on Whitsunday and also throughout the week, the text happily being left unaltered both at that time and at the subsequent revision under Urban VIII. (1634). We may add that the text, with a full historical and theological commentary, is given in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. ii., 1838, pp. 61-76.

The Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et, has frequently been tr. into German. Through two of these versions it has passed into English as follows:—

1. Redger Geist, an Tröster maia. This is a full and good tr. by Martin Moller, in his Meditationes sanctorum patrum, Gültitz, 1584, where it is entitled "A very beautiful prayer to God the Holy Ghost;" and thence in Wackernagel, v.

p. 55. Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1648, Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714 (omitting st. iv.; so in the Una L. S., 1851, No. 171), and others. Bunsen, in his Versuch, 1833, No. 210, follows Freylinghausen, and supplies a new tr. (by himself?) of st. iv. Tr. as:—

1. Holy Ghost! my Comforter. This is a full and very good tr. from Bunsen by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 2nd ed., 1856, p. 103, and her G. B. for England, 1863 (with st. v. rewritten). Included in full in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875; and, abridged, in Alford's Year of Prayer, 1867, Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, &c. In T. W. Chignell's Exeter Coll., 1893, it begins "God, our Light and Comforter!" and in Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, and some others, "Holy Ghost! the Comforter."

2. Holy Comforter Divine. By Miss Borthwick, omitting st. ii., iv., vi., ix., as No. 87 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is: "O Holy Ghost! Thou first Divine." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 103.

3. Komm, o heil'ger Geist, und wehe. By Cardinal Melchior von Diepenbrock [b. Jan. 8, 1798, at Bochold in Westphalia; became Prince Bishop of Breslau in 1845, and Cardinal in 1850; d. Jan. 20, 1853], in his Gesammelte Predigten, Regensburg, 1841, p. 109. Tr. as "Come, O Holy Ghost, and breathe." By J. Kelly, in his Hys. of the Present Century from the German, 1885, p. 69. [J. M.]

The Veni Sancte Spiritus Et has also been tr. direct from the Latin into English as follows:—

1. Come, Holy Spirit, send down those beams Which gently flow in silent streams. By J. Austin, in his Devotions in the Ancient Way of Offices, &c., 1668, p. 410. It is given in several modern Roman Catholic hymnals, including Hys. for the Year, 1867, the Parochial H. Bk., 1830, and others. In these collections it begins "Come, Holy Ghost, send down those beams, Which sweetly flow in silent streams," as in the Evening Office of 1748. It is a most spirited rendering, and is worthy of wider adoption.

2. Holy Spirit, from on high, Come, and from the opening sky. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 105. It was repeated in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and others.

3. Come, O promised Comforter. By A. T. Russell, in the Dalton German Hospital H. Bk., 1848, and his Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 126, in 3 st. of 8 l. In Kennedy, 1863, st. i. is given as "Shed, O promised Comforter" (No. 1034). In the Hys. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, the full text is given in an unaltered form.

4. Holy Spirit, Lord of Light. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 284, and his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 123. It is found in several hymn-books in its full and unaltered form, and also altered and abridged as:—

(1) Come, Thou Holy Spirit, come. This arrangement was given in the trial ed. of H. A. & M., 1858, and again in the 1st ed., 1861. The numerous alterations therein are added to in the revised ed. of 1876. The text of the Sarum Hys., 1668, is the 1801 H. A. & M. text altered, with a return in some instances to the original tr.

(2) Holy Spirit, Lord of Life. This, in the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1876, is also an altered form of Caswall's tr.

(3) Holy Spirit, come in night. This is given in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, with the omission of Caswall's st. iii., iv., to the great injury of the hymn. There are also several uncalled for alterations.

(4) Come, Thou Spirit of all light. This, in Thrug's

Coll., 1863, is partly (st. i., ii., iii., l. c.) a recast of Caswall's tr. by Probandary Turing, but would have been better in Caswall's own words.

In its various forms Caswall's tr. is the most widely used of the numerous renderings of the Veni Sancte Spiritus.

5. Come, Holy Spirit, from the height. By F. W. Faber, in his Jesus and Mary, 1849, and his Hymns, 1862. It is given in a few Roman Catholic hymnals for Missions and Schools.

6. Come, O Spirit, Lord of grace. By R. Campbell, in his Hym. and Anthems, 1850, p. 80, in 7 st. of 3 l. This is in one or two hymnals only. In Orby Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, it is expanded into 10 st., the additional stanzas ii., iv., and vi. being by J. C. Earle.

7. Holy Spirit, from an high, On our deep obscurity. By G. Rorison in his Hym. and Anthems, 1851, No. 95, in 5 st. of 6 l.

8. Come, Thou Holy Paraclite. By J. M. Neale, in the Hym. Noted, 2nd ed., 1854, in 10 st. of 8 l. This tr. has passed into a large number of hymnals, and ranks next in popularity to that by E. Caswall noted above.

9. Come, Holy Ghost! in love, Shed on us from above. By Ray Palmer. First pub. in The Sabbath H. Bk., Andover, 1858, No. 451, in 5 st. of 7 l. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and America, including Allon's Cong. Psalmist Hym., 1836; Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1875, in 4 st.; Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884.

10. Holy Spirit, come, we pray. By W. Mercer, in the 1864 ed. of his Church Ps. and H. Bk., No. 222, in 10 st. of 3 l.

11. Come, Thou Holy Spirit, nigh; Leave Thy mortal throne on high. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868, in 5 st. of 6 l.

12. Holy Spirit, God of light! Come, and on our inner sight. By H. M. Macgill, in The Juvenile Miss. Magazine of the United Presb. Ch., Jan., 1868; the United Presb. Hym., 1876; and his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876.

13. Holy Spirit, fire divine. By F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Hymn [and Tune] Bk., Boston, 1868, in 5 st. of 6 l.

14. Come, Holy Spirit, from above, And from the realms of light and love. By A. P. Stanley, in Macmillan's Magazine, June, 1873, and the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, in 5 st. of 6 l.

15. Holy Spirit, come and shine sweetly in this heart of mine. By S. W. Duffield, contributed to Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884. Another rendering by the same translator is given in his Latin Hymn-Writers, &c., N. Y., 1889, as "Come, Holy Spirit, And send forth the heavenly, &c."

16. Holy Spirit, on us rest. This in T. Darling's Hym. for the Ch. of England, revised ed., 1889, is a cento from Copeland and Caswall.

Other trs. are—

1. Come unto us holy Goste, Send us fro the heavenly coste. Primer (Antwerp), 1699 and 1615.

2. Shine heav'nly Dove, descend, and dwell, Primer (London?), 1706.

3. Come, Holy Ghost, and send forth the Beams. Prose tr. in the Evening Office, 1760.

4. Come, O Holy Spirit, down, Send from heaven, &c. A. D. Wackerbath, 1843.

5. Come, Holy Ghost, to us send down, Like rays of light, &c. J. R. Beste, 1849.

6. Come, Holy Spirit, from above, In fullness of the Father's love. Jane E. Leeson, 1883.

7. What is impure, rectify. By W. Graham. A partial tr. in his The Jordan and the Rhine, 1854.

8. Come, O Holy Ghost! inspire Hallowed thought and pure desire. J. D. Chambers, 1851 and 1857.

9. Holy Spirit, come, we pray, Come from heaven and shed the ray. Elizabeth Charles, 1858.

10. Come, O Spirit! Fount of grace. E. A. Washburn. Written in 1860, and pub. in his Voices of a Busy Life, 1863. Also in Schaff's History of the Ch. Caswall, 1886.

11. Come, O Holy Spirit, come; Earthward from, &c. P. S. Worsley, in his Poems and Translations, 1863.

12. Dwelling high in endless day. F. Trupeer, 1865.

13. Holy Spirit from above, Shine upon us, &c. E. C. Benedict, in his Hym. of Hilbert, N. Y., 1867.

14. Come, O Holy Ghost, inspire Hallowed thought. C. B. Pearson, 1868.

15. Come, Holy Spirit, nigh, And from the heaven on high. D. T. Morgan, 1871 and 1880.

16. O Holy Spirit! deign to come. J. Wallace, 1874.

17. Come, Holy Spirit, come, Down from Thy radiant home. In W. Cowan's Poems, Chiefly Sacred, 1879.

18. Holy Spirit, come and shine On our souls with beams divine. J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

Although these trs. do not equal those of the Veni Creator Spiritus in number, yet they indicate a long and profound interest in this magnificent hymn. [J. J.]

Veni Sancte Spiritus: Repla. [Whitewindle]. The text of this antiphon is printed at p. 631, li. It is found in a ms. of the 11th cent., now in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 2361, f. 102), appointed for use at Vespers on the Vigil of Pentecost, and reading "in unitionem." Also in another Brit. Mus. ms. of circa 1100 (Add. 18302, f. 14, and f. 25). In many mss. only the first part ("Veni . . . accende") is given, as in a ms. of the 11th cent., now in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 4951, f. 246), and this form is found in the Sarum Missal of 1498, appointed for the Tuesday and Saturday after Whitsunday, and in the present Roman Missal for Whitsunday and also throughout that week. When Durandus and the earlier writers on Hermannus Contractus ascribed the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" respectively to Robert II. and to Hermannus Contractus, it is not unlikely that they really meant to refer to this antiphon and not to the "Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte"; and the Add. 18302, which was apparently written in Swabia, is also one of the earliest sources of the "Salvo regina" (p. 631, li.) which is most probably by Hermannus Contractus. But there is not sufficient evidence to allow us to assign the antiphon definitely to either of these authors.

This antiphon has passed into English through the German (see p. 631, li.), and also directly. Among the versions directly from the Latin may be mentioned:—

1. Come, O Holy Spirit! fulfil the hearts of Thy faithful ones. By J. D. Chambers, in his Primer, &c., 1852, p. 180.

2. Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of Thy faithful. In the Roman Hym., ed. J. B. Young, N. Y., 1884, p. 41. See also the Crown of Jesus, 1863, p. 4, and the Altar Hym., 1884, p. 102. [J. M.]

Veni, superne Spiritus: Purgata Christi sanguine. C. Coffin. [Whitewindle]. Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736 and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri the same year, p. 55. In the Paris and Inter French Brevs. it is the hymn for the 1st Vespers of Whitsunday. Text in J. Chandler's Hym. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1863. Tr. as:—

1. Come, Heavenly Spirit, come. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hym. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, Ember, 9, and Rice's Sol. from the same, 1870.

2. Come, O Spirit, from on high. By C. S. Calverley, in the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. Come, Spirit from above. I. Williams, in the British Mag., May, 1834; and his Hym. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839.

2. Come, Holy Ghost, Thou Source of good. J. Chandler. 1837.

3. Descend, Celestial Spirit blest. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

4. Spirit Supreme, come down again. "J. M. H." in Lyra Marianica, 1844. [J. J.]

Veni, veni, Rex gloriae. [Advent.] Mr. Crippen says he tr. this "from a MS. of the 15th century (with music) at Karlsruhe." This text is in Mona, No. 35. Mr. Crippen's tr. appeared in his Ancient Hym. and Poems, &c., 1866, in 23 st. of 4 l. as "O come, O come, Thou glorious King." In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, st. xii., xiii., xvii., xviii., and xix., as given as "Give us, O Fount of Purity." These stanzas form a most acceptable hymn on Desiring Holiness. Also tr. by Dr. H. Bonar as "Come, O come, Thou King of glory," 1866. [J. J.]

Venit e coelo Mediator alto. [Passiontide.] This is the hymn at Lauds in the office of the Prayer of our Lord Jesus Christ on the Mount of Olives. See a note on this office under Aspice at Verbum Factum (p. 87, li.). This office appears to be of very recent date, viz. since 1830. It is found in the eds. of the Roman Breviary, pub. at Lyons, 1852, and Tournay, 1879, but not among the offices for universal use. Tr. as:—

1. Daughter of Zion, cease thy bitter tears. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 61, and his Hym. and Poems, 1873, p. 34. It passed, with slight alterations, into the Hymnary, 1872, and others.

2. Zion's daughter, weep no more. By Sir H. W. Baker, in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1859, and the ed. of 1861. It was revised for the ed. of 1875. Also in Kennedy, 1863, &c.

3. Come from the heavenly throne above. In the 1860 ed. of the Hy. Notes, No. 152.

Another tr. is:—

From high heaven, the Mediator. J. Wallace. 1874. [W. A. S.]

Verborgne Gottesliebe du. G. Tersteegen. [The Love of God.] 1st pub. in his Geistliches Blumengärtlein, 1723, Bk. iii., No. 26, in 10 st. of 7 l., entitled, "The longing of the soul quietly to maintain the secret drawings of the Love of God." Although a fine hymn and much used in English, its German use has been almost confined to the early Moravian collections. Included in full in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammlung geist- und heiliger Lieder, and omitting st. iv., v., as No. 642, in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735; but not repeated in the Brüder G. B., 1776, or the Kleine Brüder G. B., 1870. Tr. as:—

1. These hidden love of God, whose height. A spirited tr. by J. Wesley, omitting st. iv., v. [trs. of these sts. by S. Jackson were incorporated when he reprinted Wesley's tr. in his Life of Tersteegen, 1832 (1837, p. 409)], in Ps. & Hym., 1738, and Hym. & Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 71). Written while at Savannah, and in 6-line st. Included, somewhat altered, as No. 3 in the Wesley Hym. & Spir. Songs, 1753; as No. 335 in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (1873, No. 344); and in the Metth.

New Conn. H. Bk., 1863. It is however generally abridged. At least fourteen centos have been included in various hymnals, but as they are taken from the text of the Wes. H. Bk. it is not necessary here to note them in detail. In one form or other the hymn is found under the original first line in collections since 1866, in Thring's Coll., 1830-82, Snapp's S. of G. & G., 1 72, Hyl. Comp., 1876, Bapt. Hyl., 1879, Horder's Cong. Hym., 1884, &c., and in America in the Unitarian H. Bk., 1869, Hatfield's Ch. H. Bk., 1872, Epis. Hyl., 1871, &c. Altered forms include:—

1. O God! whose love immense in height (st. i. alt.), in the Moravian H. Bks., 1789-1886.

2. Thou wast our love of God, whose height (st. i. alt.), New Zealand Hym., 1872.

3. In mercy, Jesus, Thou hast brought (st. iii.) in J. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hym., 1832.

4. Take, Lord, all self from me, that I (st. vii.) in the Moravian H. Bks., 1789-1886.

In the P. Works, 1868, p. 71, Dr. Osborn notes:—

"The translation [in 1736] agrees with this, except in st. iv., where we read:—

"Ah, tear it thence, that Thou alone
May'st reign univ'rsal'd Monarch there:
From earthly loves I must be free
Ere I can find repose in Thee."

But after the ever-memorable 24th of May, 1738, Wesley knew 'the way of God more perfectly'; and wrote as in the text:—

"Is there a thing beneath the sun
That strives with Thee my heart to share?
Ah, tear it thence, and reign alone,
The Lord of every nation there;
Then shall my heart from earth be free,
When it has found repose in Thee."

"In a final revision for the Large Hymn-book, 1780, he changed 'Be' in v. 2, l. 4, into 'Seem,' and made the closing couplet of v. 6 precatory, in accordance with the two preceding, by changing 'is' in the last line into 'be.'" [J. M.]

Verbum caro factum est, Rex virginis Maria. [Christmas.] This hymn exists in a great variety of texts. Leaving out of account the varieties of reading, which are very considerable, we may reckon at least five different forms. The two lines above are used in some cases as the introduction, and line 2 as the refrain.

1. The earliest form known is in a ms. in the Bibl. Nat. Paris (Lot. 1139, f. 48, in a hand of the 12th cent.), and thence in E. du Méril's Poésies inédites du Moyen Age, Paris, 1854, p. 337. This form is partly in Latin and partly in Provencal French. The Latin stanzas are:—

1. In hoc anni circulo.	5. Summi patris filio.
2. Fons de suo rivulo.	6. Antimal impositum.
3. Quod vetustate suffocat.	7. O beata femina.
4. Sine viri copula.	8. Illi laus et gloria.

ii. Mona, No. 50, prints it from a ms. of the 15th cent. in the town library at Trier. The stanzas there are 1, 2, 7, 8, and the following:—

9. Stella votum protulit.	14. Reges tres de genti-
10. Virgine de regna.	bue.
11. In praesepe ponitur.	15. Die hac sanctissima.
12. O pastores caritate.	16. Ex divino flamine.
13. Puer circumciditur.

iii. Hoffmann von Fallersleben, 1861, No. 163, gives a German tr. (beginning "In des Jahres strolchelt") from a Munich ms. of 1421. This has 15 stanzas, and represents 1, 2, 3, 9, 4, 7, 11, 12, 13, 14, 5, of the Latin, and also

17. Joseph nato fruitur.	18. Aurum regi regna-
18. Ab angella concei-	turo.
tur.	20. O Jesu dulcissima.

iv. G. M. Dreyer, in his Contines Bohemone, 1886, p. 43, cites it as in two mss. now at Prag; the first being in the Bohemian Museum, and the second in the University Library. The first, written about 1420, has stanzas 1, 3, 7, 10, 14, 19, 8, and also 21. Adam pome rescit- 23. Serpens ille callidus.

tur. 24. O prompta humilitas.
22. Nos produlvilo. 25. Ergo nostra concol.

The second, written about 1519, has 1, 3, 21, 22, 23, 3, 13, 14, 15, 25, 8.

v. Mone, No. 387, has a form in 29 stanzas from ms. of the 16th cent. at Venice, and the same form is in a ms. in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Fonds Italiques, No. 559, f. 107), also written in Italy in the 16th cent. In the Paris ms. it is given as by Jacobus de Benedictis. The text, as Mone prints it, has stanzas 1, 3, 9, 2, 4, 7, 11, 17, 18, 14, 19, 12, 13, 24, 10, 20, 8, as above. The remaining 12 st. of this text need not here be noted.

vi. Wackernagel, 1841, No. 54, gives it from Lelsestrick's G. E. (R. C.), 1567. There it is in 14 st., viz. 1, 3, 21, 22, 23, 9, 4, 13, 7, 10, 11, 18, 17, 25.

From this summary it is pretty clear that No. i. is the original, and that Nos. ii. and iii. are forms which were current in Germany in the 14th cent. Stanzas 21-23 seem also to belong to the 14th cent. Stanza 25 might be attached to any hymn of the same metre, and is found in some forms of the "Puer natus" (p. 340, l.). The remaining 12 stanzas of No. v. were probably written in Italy. It may be added that ii. is also in Daniel, iv. p. 157; and vi. in Daniel, i. No. 477, and Neale's Hy. Eccl., 1851, p. 74. See also Wackernagel, i., Nos. 264-266. The text as in Daniel, l. No. 477, beginning In hoc anni circulo, was tr. omitting st. vii., x., xi., by Dr. Neale, in his Met. Hys., 1851, p. 106, as "In the ending of the Year." This was repeated in the 1867 ed. of the Hy. Noted, and in The Office H. Bk., 1889. [J. M.]

Verbum Dei, Deo natum. [St. John the Evangelist.] Archbishop Trench remarks justly, "This sublime hymn, though not Adam of St. Victor's, . . . is altogether worthy of him." It is found in a ms. of the end of the 12th cent. in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc. 341, f. 42), and another circa 1200 (Liturg. Misc., 340, f. 141); also in a ms. of the 13th cent. in the British Museum (Arundel, 156, f. 95). Among the St. Gall mss. it is found in Nos. 376, 381 of the 11th cent., No. 86 of the 12th cent., and others. It is included in the Magdeburg Missal, 1480, and many later German Missals, generally assigned to the festival of St. John at the Latin Gate. Pt. ii. begins with st. ix. Volat avis sine meta. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 709; Daniel, ii. p. 166; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 75; and Kehren, No. 408. Tr. as:—

1. God begotten, God the Word, Pt. i. Boundless still his pinions soar, Pt. ii. By H. Kynaston, in his Occasional Verses, 1852, p. 17.

2. Word of God, so long awaited, Pt. i. Higher soars his eagle, higher, Pt. ii. By E. A. Dayman, in the Sarum Hymn, 1868. In Pt. ii. st. iii. is original, by Mr. Dayman.

3. The Word of God, the Eternal Son, Pt. i. As eagle winging loftiest flight, Pt. ii. By E. H. Pinnette, in the New Test. Com. for Eng. Readers, ed. Pp. Elliott's, vol. 1, 1877, p. 344, and the translator's Things New and Old, 1884, p. 189.

4. Not made, nor yet created, came, Pt. i. With boundless range our eagle flew, Pt. ii. By D. T. Morgan, in his Hys. of the Latin Church, 1871, p. 114 (1866, p. 71).

5. He the Word of God, the fated, Pt. i. As an eagle unmolested, Pt. ii. By S. W. Duffield, in his Latin Hymn-Prayers, 1889. [J. M.]

Verbum quod ante saecula. [Epiphany.] Given in the Sens Brev., 1726, and the Paris Brev., 1736, as the hymn for 1st Vespers for the Sundays after the Epiphany. The text is in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837; Carl Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. The Word, Who dwelt above the skies. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 56. In the 1st ed. of H. A. & M., 1861, it was extensively altered by the Compilers, and was included as "The Word, with God the Father One." This was omitted from the revised ed. of 1873. The original tr., with slight alterations, is in the Hymnary, 1872, &c.

2. Word of Life, the Eternal Son. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 94. In J. A. Johnston's English Hymn, 1861, it begins, "Word of God, Eternal Son, Ers the march, &c."

3. Word of God, Eternal Son, From Thy throne. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 57. This is based upon the tr. by I. Williams as above, and several lines are taken from that tr. It is in O. Shipley's Anvus Sanctus, 1884.

Other trs. are:—

1. Word that, ere creation's morn. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

2. Word! from the Father's bosom born. J. D. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Verbum Supernum prodicens, A Patre olim exiens. [Advent.] This hymn, a short and good summary of the leading ideas of Advent, is given as No. 33 in Mone, with the remark that it is probably of the second half of the 5th cent. Daniel gives the text at 1, No. 74, and at iv. p. 144 cites it as in a Rheinan ms. of the 11th cent., ranking it as a hymn of the 11th cent. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 29; Jul. A. vi. f. 31 b; Harl. 2961, f. 225 b); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium (Add. 30851, f. 112); an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30848, f. 3), &c. It is in G. M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissiacensis, 1868, from a 10th cent. ms.; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p. 239); in a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, No. 413; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 11). It is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the Sarum use being at Matins on the 1st S. in Advent, and daily up to Christmas Eve. The text is also in Wackernagel, i. No. 55; the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 4; L. C. Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867, &c. In the Roman Brev., 1632, it is considerably altered, and begins, Verbum Supernum prodicens, E Patre aeterno aliu. This text is in recent eds. of that Breviary; in Daniel, i. No. 74; J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 39; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Both forms of this hymn have been tr. as follows:—

i. The Original Text.

1. To earth descending, Word sublime. By J. M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 11, the Hymner, 1882, &c.

2. O Word Supreme, created not. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867.

Other trs. are:—

1. Word from the Sire, supernal. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.

2. Supernal Word! Thou Effluence bright. J. D. Chambers, 1862 and 1867.

3. Word of the Father, Coming from high. J. W. Hewitt, 1859.

ii. The Roman Breviary Text.

1. Word of th' eternal Father's might. By W. J. Copland, in his Hys. for the Week, 1848, p. 55. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, it is given in an altered form.

2. O Thou, Who Thine own Father's breast. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 45, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 25. It is repeated in a few modern collections, sometimes as "Eternal Word, Who dost reside," as in the English Hyl., 1852-61, where it is changed from c.m. to l.m.; and again as "Thou Who didst leave Thy Father's breast."

3. Supernal Word, proceeding forth. By Card. Newman, in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, p. 108, and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, p. 255. This is repeated in the Hymnary, 1872, and others.

4. O Heavenly Word, Eternal Light. By the Compilers of H. A. & M. It was given in the trial copy of that collection in 1859, the 1st ed., 1861, and the revised ed., 1875. It is also in other hymn-books. The first stanza is based upon Copland's fr. as above.

5. O Word celestial, Who Thy rest. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

1. The Period's come; and lo, to Day. Primer, 1708.

2. Eternal Word, Who dost proceed. Ep. O. W. Doane, 1894.

3. Word uncreate, beloved one. Ep. R. Mont, 1837.

4. The Father's bosom Thou didst leave. J. Chandler, 1837.

5. Dread Word, Who erst, when time was not. Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.

6. O gracious Word, that leaving forth from Heav'n. W. Palmer, 1845.

7. Lo the Word from God proceedeth. W. Bright, 1859.

8. O Thou, the Word, Supreme and blest. F. Trappes, 1868.

9. Dread Word, Who from the Father hast. J. Keble, in his Misc. Poems, 1899.

10. O Word, proceeding from Thy house. J. Wallace, 1874.

11. Supernal Word, Who didst proceed. J. C. Eirle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

Verbum Supernum prodicens, Neco Patris linquens dexteram. St. Thomas of Aquino. [Holy Communion.] Written about 1263 for the office for use on Corpus Christi (see Pange Magna gloriosus Corporis). It is found in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and, unchanged, in 1632), Mozarabic of 1802, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1786, and other Breviaries, its primary use being at Lauds on Corpus Christi.

"Most appropriately, says Daniel (l. No. 241), has St. Thomas made his hymn like the well-known hymn for the Nativity of the Lord ['Verbum Supernum prodicens, A Patre olim extens'], for as to the Festival of the Eucharist, by which the Word made Flesh will dwell with us for ever, what need is there to explain at length the relationship that exists between It and the Nativity of the Lord?"

The text, in 5 st. and a doxology, is in Daniel, l. No. 241; Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 123, and others. St. iv. is a fine instance of perfect form and condensed meaning:—

"Se nascens dedit socium, Convalescens in edulium,
Se moriens in pretium,
Se regnans dat in presertim."

The last stanza, O salutaris hostia, has often been used along with the doxology as a separate hymn, e.g., at the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The hymn is found in a ms. of the 13th cent. in the Bodleian (Ashmole, 1525, f. 175); in a ms. of the end of the 13th cent. (Add. 23935, f. 4 b), and a 14th cent. Sarum Brev. (Reg. A. xiv. f. 95), both in the British Museum; in a 13th cent. ms. at St. Gall, 503, l., and others. Also in Wackernagel, l. No. 232; Königsfeld, ii. p. 214; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1863, and others. [J. M.]

The trs. of this hymn are as follows:—

i. Verbum supernum prodicens Neco, &c.

1. The Word, descending from above. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 114, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 65. It is in the People's H., 1867. In the Hymnary, 1882, it is rewritten as, "The Word proceeding from above."

2. The Word of God proceeding forth. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Notes, 1854. From the H. Notes it has passed into several collections, and in almost every instance with alterations. In the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, it begins, "The Word from His eternal home." Another altered form of the text is "The Heavenly Word proceeding forth," in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875. In the Hymnary, 1872, Neale's fr. is given with st. v., as in H. A. & M.

Other trs. are:—

1. The eternal God, by human birth. Primer, 1708, and O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

2. The Word, Who ever sits at God's right hand. J. Williams, 1839.

3. The Word Supernal forth proceeds, Nor leaves, &c. A. D. Wackernagel, 1842.

4. Word of God to earth descending. R. Campbell, 1850.

5. The Word Most Highest from above. W. J. Blew, 1859-55.

6. The Word Eternal going forth. J. A. Johnston, 1856 and 1861.

7. The Word supernal forth proceeds, Yet, &c. J. D. Chambers, 1857. In Skinner's Daily Service Hyl., 1864, it is altered to "The Word of God from heaven proceeds."

8. Achieving what His wisdom plann'd. F. Trappes, 1865.

9. The eternal Word of God descends. J. Wallace, 1874.

10. The Word supernal, from the heavens descending. C. Kent, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

11. Proceeding forth, the Word supernal. J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

ii. O salutaris Hostia.

The special use of this portion of the hymn is thus set forth in the Dict. of Christian Antiquities:—

"A hymn sung during the Office called Benediction, at the moment when the Tabernacle is opened, in order that the Consecrated Host may be removed and placed in the Monstrance prepared for its solemn Exposition.

"Sometimes also, though less frequently, 'O salutaris Hostia' is sung at High Mass, immediately after the Benedictus; not indeed as an integral part of the Mass itself, to which it does not properly belong, but in order to prevent the long and distracting pause which would otherwise ensue, when, as is frequently the case in Plain Chant Masses, the Benedictus is too short to fill up the time which must necessarily elapse between the Elevation of the Host and the Pater Noster."

This portion of the hymn is not usually fr. distinct from the preceding verses, although in some books it is marked off from the rest by the introduction into the fr. of the Latin line. The trs. are:—

1. O saving Host, that heaven's high gate. Primer, 1708.

2. O Saving Host which Heaven's Gate. Evening Office, 1748.

3. O Saving Victim, pledge of love. Divine Office, 1743.

4. O hallow'd fount of bliss! to Thee. D. Frosch. 1838.
5. O Lord, Who didst a willing Victim die. I. W. Williams. 1839.
6. O Victim of Salvation's cause. A. D. Wackerbarth. 1842.
7. O saving Victim! opening wide The gate of heaven, &c. E. Caswell. 1849.
8. Mighty Victim, earth's salvation. R. Campbell. 1850.
9. O saving Victim, slain to bless. J. M. Neale. 1854.
10. O healthful, saving Sacrifice. J. D. Chambers. 1852 and 1857.
11. O Saviour victim, Thine the power. H. N. Ozon. 1854.
12. O Lamb of God! the Victim slain. J. A. Johnson. 1856 and 1861.
13. O Christ, most willing Victim slain. Salisbury H. Bk. 1857. Altered from Neale. This in the Sarum Hymn, 1868, was again altered to "O salutary Victim slain."
14. Hail, saving Host! Hail, source of love. T. J. Potter. 1859.
15. O saving Victim, worthy deem'd. F. Tropper. 1865.
16. O Thou health giving Sacrifice. W. J. Irons, in his Hymns, 1868, and his Pt. & Hymn, 1873-75.
17. O Victim of redeeming grace. J. Wallace. 1874.
18. O Host, salvation bringing. C. Kent, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.
19. O Victim of the world's salvation. J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

Vere, Thomas Aubrey de, third a. of the late Sir Aubrey de Vere, Bart., was b. in 1814, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. Whilst Dr. Newman was Rector of the Roman Catholic University, Dublin, he was one of the Professors there. His first volume of Poems appeared in 1842, and since then he has also pub. more than thirty distinct works, many of which are in verse, including Poems, 1855; May Carols, 1857; Poetical Works, 1884; and others. A few pieces from his poetical works are given in Roman Catholic collections. [J. J.]

Very, Jones, was b. at Salem, Massachusetts, Aug. 28, 1813, his father, Jones Very, being a shipmaster. He graduated at Harvard College in 1836. He remained at his College, as tutor in Greek, for two years, and then entered the Unitarian Ministry (1843). He has been engaged in the work of a preacher without a pastorate from the first, a great part of his time being devoted to literary pursuits. In 1839 he pub. a volume of Essays and Poems, from which several pieces have been taken as hymns, including:—

1. Father! I wait Thy word. The sun doth stand, Waiting upon God.
2. Father, there is no change to live with Thee. Peace in the Father's Care.
3. Father! Thy wonders do not singly stand. The Spirit-Land.
4. Wilt Thou not visit me? The Divine Presence desired.

These hymns were included in Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Book of Hymns, 1846. In the same collection also appeared:—

5. I saw on earth another light. The Light Within.
6. The bud will soon become a flower. Shooting and Reaping.
7. Turn not from him who asks of thee. Kind Words.

In addition the following hymns appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Hymns of the Spirit, 1864:—

8. One saint to another I heard say, "How long?" The Future anticipated.
9. There is a world eye hath not seen. The Spirit World.

Most of these hymns are in the Lyra Sac.

Americana, 1868; and in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1874. [F. M. B.]

Very, Washington, brother of Jones Very, was b. at Salem, Massachusetts, Nov. 12, 1815. After following mercantile pursuits for some time, he entered Harvard College, and graduated there in 1843. Subsequently he conducted a private school in Salem, where he d. April 28, 1858. Putnam gives three of Very's poetical pieces in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, one of which, "There cometh o'er the spirit" (Spring), appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hymns, 1846. [J. J.]

Versage nicht, o frommer Christ. [Trust in God.] Included as one of Drey schöne geistliche Lieder, Constanz, 1697, in 22 st. of 5 l., and thence in Mittell, No. 584; Wackernagel, v. p. 427; and the Uvo. L. S., 1851, No. 581. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to Nicolaus Herman. Tr. as:—

Ye who the name of Jesus bear, Yield not yourselves &c. A good tr. of st. 1, iv., v., vii., xvii. by A. T. Russell, as No. 228 in his Pt. & Hymn, 1851. [J. M.]

Vexilla Regis prodeunt. V. H. O. Fortunatus. [Passiontide.] This "world-famous hymn," as Dr. Neale calls it, has been ascribed to Theodulph of Orleans, to Sedulius, &c. But it is found in all the mss. of the works of Fortunatus, as well as in all the printed editions, and there is no ground whatever for questioning his authorship. In further annotation it will be most convenient to treat (1) of its Text, then (2) of its Origin and some of the allusions contained in it, and lastly (3) of the variations in its Use.

i. Text, MSS., &c. We print first the full original text from Professor F. Leo's ed. of Fortunatus's Opera poetica, Berlin, 1881, p. 34, where it is given as No. 6 in Bk. ii., entitled "Hymn in honour of the Holy Cross," and in 8 st. as follows:—

iv. "Impleta sunt quas con- clavit David fideli carmine, Dixerado nationibus: Regnavit a ligno Deus.	viii. "Salve ara, salve victima De passionis gloria Quæ vita mortem per- tulit Et morte vitam reddidit."

This text Leo prints from a St. Petersburg ms. of the 8th cent., a Laudan ms. of the 8th or 9th cent., a Vatican ms. of the 9th cent. (Regiæ, 329), and others. It agrees with the original readings of a 9th cent. ms. of Fortunatus, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 24193, f. 18). In the earliest Hymnarica, &c., it is found in much the same text, e. g. :—

In the so-called Durham Ritual, an ancient ms. in the Chapter Library at Durham (A. iv. 19, f. 66b, written in England in a hand of the 10th cent.), is two Hymnætes, written in England in the 11th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus. (Vesp. D., xli. f. 84, and Fort., 2651, f. 238b), &c. During the 11th cent. it began to be customary to omit st. ii., vii., viii., and so in the Vesp. D., xli. st. ii. was subsequently scratched through, st. vii., viii. being erased (in the Vesp. D., xli., the Latin text of almost all the hymns is repeated along with an Anglo-Saxon inter-linear gloss, the Latin being arranged to suit the order of the gloss. In this form, at f. 85b, the original st. ii., vii., viii. are still found, and there is neither original nor gloss of st. ix., x.) and the two following stanzas, not by Fortunatus, inserted in their place:—

ix.
"O crux ave, spes unica,
Huc passionis tempore,
Ange pils justitiam,
Reisque dona veniam.

x.
"Te summa Deus Trinitas,
Collaudat omnis spiritus,
Ange per crucis mysterium
Salvas, rege per saecula."

Among other mss. which omit st. vii., viii. and give ix., x., are the Add. 30849, f. 109, a Breviary written in Spain in the 11th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus.; the Arundel, 155, f. 164b, a Hymnarium written in England in the 12th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus., &c. So also the Hymnarius Moissiacensis, a ms. written in France in the 10th cent., and ed. by G. M. Dreyes in 1888, p. 45. In the Hart. 2961, as above, the hymn is divided into two parts, pt. i. being st. i.-iv., viii., and pt. ii. beginning "Arbor decora et fulgida," being st. v., vi., vii. In a ms. of the 11th cent. now at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 246), st. iv. also immediately precedes st. viii. Other early mss. which contain this hymn, include one of the 11th cent. now in the Brit. Mus. (Jud. A., vi., f. 46b); one of the 11th cent. at Durham (B., iii., 32, f. 25); one of the 16th cent. at St. Gall, No. 196, &c. The variations in the text are somewhat numerous, but we need only mention two, viz. st. vii., l. 3, where the Add. 24193, reads "Foecunda," and st. x., l. 2, where the Arundel, 155, reads "collaudat." Dasek, l., No. 129, li. p. 282, li. p. 284, iv. p. 70, prints the text with readings from a Fleury Ms. of circa 800, a Rheims ms. of the 11th cent., &c. The printed text is also in Wackeragel, l., No. 80; the Hymn. Sarriseniensis, 1861, p. 79; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 1878, p. 65; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1855, &c. In the revised Roman Brev. of 1623 the text is of st. l., iii.-vi., ix., x., slightly altered.

ii. Origin and Allusions. To appreciate this hymn we must bear in mind the circumstances under which it was written. The details are of more than usual interest, as a short summary will show:—

Fortunatus was then living at Poitiers, where his friend, Quem Rhodogund, founded a nunnery. Before the consecration of the nunnery church she desired to present certain relics to it, and among these she obtained from the Emperor Justin II. a fragment of the so-called True Cross, from which circumstance the nunnery received its name of the Holy Cross. This relic was sent in the first instance to Tours, and was left in charge of the Bishop, in order that he might convey it to Poitiers. (See the Historia Francorum, by Gregory of Tours [d. 594], Bk. ix., Chapter 40.) In the Abbe E. Briand's Sainte Radegonde, Poitiers, 1887, pp. 128-130, his journey to Poitiers is thus described: "Escorted by a numerous body of clergy and of the faithful holding lighted torches, the Bishop started in the midst of liturgical chants, which ceased not to resound in honour of the hallowed wood of the Redemption. A league from Poitiers the pious cortege found the delegates of Rhodogund, Fortunatus at their head, rejoicing in the honour which had fallen to them; some carrying censers with perfumed incense, others torches of white wax. The meeting took place at Migné, at the place where, twelve centuries and a half later, the cross appeared in the air. It was on this occasion that the hymn 'Vexilla Regis' was heard for the first time, the chant of triumph composed by Fortunatus to salute the arrival of the True Cross. . . . It was the 19th November, 659."

The hymn was thus primarily a Processional hymn, written for use at the solemn reception of a relic of the Holy Cross. Inspired by the occasion the poet composed this poem of the Crucified King, one of the grandest hymns of the Latin church, in which in glowing accents he invites us to contemplate the mystery of love accomplished on the Cross. The occasion thus gives the key to his choice of subject, and to most of the allusions throughout the hymn. Fortunatus evidently had in his mind, especially in st. v., the old legends of the Tree of the Cross (see under "Pango lingua gloriosi Proclium," p. 260, i.), and designedly used in i. l. 4, the word "patibulum," which means properly a cross, formed thus Y or thus Ψ; the latter form representing the stem of the tree, with the branches on which, as on a balance, the ransom of the world was weighed (st. vi.). The most interesting of the other allusions is the use made in the 4th stanza of Pa. xvi. 10. Neither in the Hebrew, the present Septuagint, the present Vulgate, nor in the English versions, do we find anything answering to Fortunatus's statement that David spoke of God as reigning "from the tree," i.e. from the Cross.

Justin Martyr however cited the passage as Messianic, and regarded the words ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, as part of the original (Dialogue with Trypho, sect. 73; see Migne's P.P. Graec., vi., 646); and Tertullian (against Marcion, Bk. iii., c. 19; see Migne's P.P. Lat., ii., 247) quotes the words "a ligno" as part of the text of Pa. xvi. 10. These words are also found in many mss. of the so-called Italic version of the Psalms, so e.g. in a Præter of the 11th cent. now in the Brit. Mus. (Reg. 2 N. V., f. 112), where the verse reads "Dicite in nationibus dominus regnavit a ligno, et enim correxit orbem," and so in another Præter of circa 700 (Vesp. A., l. f. 92). [In the Add. 10546 of circa 850 it reads "Dicite in gentibus quia dominus regnavit, et enim correxit orbem," and so in the Vitellius A., xviii., f. 93, of the 11th cent.] They also survived in the printed Sarum Missals as a versicle for use on Friday in Easter week and for the Festival of the Invention of the Cross, thus "Dicite in gentibus quia Dominus regnavit a ligno," and this form is also in the present Roman Missal, for the Invention of the Cross (ed. Mechlin, 1874, p. 410). In the present Roman Breviary it is appointed for use at Lauds in the commemoration of the Holy Cross in the ferial office at Easter-tide, thus "V. Dicite in nationibus, alleluia, R. Quia Dominus regnavit a ligno" (see the Marquees of Bute's Roman Brev. into English, vol. i., 1873, p. 152). M. Leon Gautier, in his Les Tropes, 1889, p. 153, quotes a Limoges ms. of the 11th cent. (Bib. Nat., Paris, Lat., 1539), as appointing it for the 3rd S. after Easter, and as paraphrasing it thus: "Dicite, concuncti et pacillite in gentibus quia magna Domini clementia, suis respiciens orbibus, regnavit omnia et imperavit a ligno, proprio Filio suo crucifixo qui surraxit et sedet in throno decemclamate Zabulo."

iii. Use. As already stated the first use was as a processional hymn in honour of the Holy Cross. Its subsequent uses include the following:—

The Sarum use was at Vespers on Passion Sunday, and daily up to Maundy Thursday. In the Paris Brev. of 1738 it was assigned to Vespers from Monday in Passion Week up to Maundy Thursday. In the present Roman Brev. it is used at Vespers on the Saturday before Passion Sunday, and up to Maundy Thursday, and also on the Festival of the Invention of the Cross (May 3); and in the present Roman Missal it is appointed to be sung on the morning of Good Friday, after the ceremony of the Adoration of the Cross, and during the time that the acolytes are censing the reserved sacrament (kept since Maundy Thursday in a side chapel, in the so-called Holy Grave), previous to its being solemnly placed on the High Altar.

Of the imitations and parodies of this hymn we need only mention two.

The first of these is a sequence beginning "Vexilla Regis, prodeunt et fulget," printed by G. M. Dreyes in his Proserium Lemovicensis, 1880, p. 105, from three Limoges mss. now in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 1116, circa 900; Lat. 778 of the 12th cent.; Lat. 1137 of the 11th cent.); being an unhappy combination of Fortunatus with the versicle and antiphon used in the present Roman Brev. at the First Vespers of the Invention of the Cross. The second, printed by Thomas Wright in his Political Songs of England, London, 1839, p. 258, begins "Vexilla regni prodeunt, Fulget cometa comitum," and is a parody describing the death (1317) of Peter de Gaveston, the favourite of Edward II. of England. (Wright, at p. 249; pub. a second song on the same occasion, beginning "Fange, lingua, necem Petri qui turbavit Angliam," which is a parody on the "Fange lingua gloriosi Proletium.")

We may add that the text of Fortunatus, with a full critical and theological commentary, will be found in the Abbé S. G. Pimont's Hymnes du Bréviaire Romain, vol. ii., pt. ii., p. 30, Paris, 1884; and in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. I, Faderborn, 1881, pp. 395-411. [J. M.]

The trs. into English of the Vexilla Regis include:—

1. A Broad the Regal Banners lie. This fine rendering is in The Office of the Blessed Virgin Mary in English, &c., 1687 (Brit. Mus.) an account of which is given in the Churchman's Shilling Mag. for July, 1876. Hymn No. 169 in Thring's Coll., 1882, is taken from this tr., the text being slightly altered. It is based on the tr. of 1585 noted below, and is by far the best rendering of the Vexilla Regis in C. U.

2. The royal banner is unfurled. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 74, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 42. It is given in a limited number of hymnals only.

3. Now onward move the standards of our King. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 79, in 7 st. of 4 l. Its use is limited.

4. Forth flames the standard of our King. By Bp. J. Williams, in his Ancient Hys., 1845, p. 61. This is repeated in a limited number of collections, including Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and others.

5. Forth comes the standard of the King: All hail, Thou Mystery ador'd. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 88, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 50, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is given in several Roman Catholic hymn-books for schools and missions.

6. Forth goes the standard of the King, The sign of signs, the radiant Cross. This tr. appeared as No. 36 in Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Index it is said to be by Chandler, but its similarity to Chandler's tr. is so faint that the most which can be said of it is that it is Chandler's tr. re-written. It is a most successful rendering of the hymn. In its full, or in an abridged form it is found in later collections, as Murray's Hymnal, 1852, Lowe's Gainsburgh Coll., 1854, and several others.

7. The King of Kings His banner rears. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 65, in 6 st. of 4 l.

8. See the royal banner streaming. By G. Rorison, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 50, in 8 st. of 4 l.

9. The royal banners forward go. By J. M. Neale, in his Medieval Hys., 1851, p. 6, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in the Hys. Noted, 1852, with the omission of st. vi. It is in C. U. both in its full and in several altered forms. Amongst the latter are (1) H. A. & M., altered by the Compilers, 1861, and repeated in other collections; (2) F. Pott's Hymns, &c., altered by the Editor, 1861; (3) Nicholson's Appendix Hyl., 1886, beginning with st. iii., "Fulfill'd is all that David told"; (4) The Hymnary, altered by the Editors, 1872, and others. When these various forms of Dr. Neale's tr. are taken into account, it is found that his rendering of the Vexilla Regis is more widely used than all others put together.

10. The royal banner forward goes, The Cross's mystery shines to view. By J. A. Johnston in his English Hyl., 1852. In the 1856 ed. he altered it to "See forward the King's banners go," and in the 1861 ed. to "Before us our King's banner goes."

11. The royal banner is unfurled. This, in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, is a cento of which st. i. is from J. Chandler as above, and st. ii.-v. are from Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, somewhat altered.

12. Forth goes the standard of our King, The sacred banner gleams on high. This rendering, which appeared in Choppe's Hymnal, 1857, and again in other collections, is an arrangement made from older collections, the principal source being Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, as above.

13. The King's bright banners forward go. This in Kennedy, 1863, No. 601, is J. A. Johnston's 1856 text as above, in a slightly altered form.

14. The royal banner is unfurled, And lo! the Cross is reared on high. This rendering in Merrell and How's P. & Hys., 1864, in 4 st. of 4 l., is an altered and abbreviated form of the text in Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, as above, with a slight resemblance to Choppe's text of 1857. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, No. 118 is a cento beginning with st. i. of this text, and concerning which Mr. Ellerton says in his Notes to the Church Hys., 1881, p. xl:—

"Hymn 118. . . Free imitation, written for Church Hymns in 1871 by Bishop William Wakeham How, of the Latin hymn Vexilla Regis proteant, by Venantius Fortunatus. . . In the present imitation, little except the first two verses of Fortunatus's hymn remain. The original contains eight verses, the last four being an impassioned apostrophe to the material cross, an alleged fragment of which was amongst the relics for the reception of which the hymn was written. These verses being considered by the Editors of Church Hymns wholly unsuitable for the use of the congregations for which their book was prepared, have been replaced by others."

The text of this Church Hymns cento is thus composed: st. i. from Morrell & How, 1864, unaltered; st. ii. from Stretton's Church Hys., unaltered; st. iii., Morrell & How, 1864, st. iii. rewritten; st. iv., v. new by Bp. How.

15. The Kingly banners onward stream. By R. C. Singleton, written in 1867, and pub. in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

16. The King's bright banners forward go. By E. A. Dayman, in the Sarum Hyl., 1868. The opening lines (1 and 2) are from Kennedy's 1863 text, hence the first line of st. ii., "With outstretched hands, transixed and torn," must be noted.

Other trs. are:—

1. The banners of the King come forth, The mystery, &c. Primer (Antwerp), 1699.

2. Now forth the Kingly banners' goe. Primer (Mechlin), 1675.

3. Abroad the Regal Banners fly, Now shines the Crosses mystery. Primer (Antwerp), 1685.

4. Behold the Royal Ensigns fly, The Crosses shining Mystery. Primer (London?), 1706.

5. Abroad the royal Banners fly. A partial tr. in the Evening Office, 1748.

6. Behold the Royal Ensigns fly, Bearing the Cross's Mystery. Evening Office, 1760.

7. Is this the standard of a King? I. Williams, 1639.

8. The great King's banner shines above. F. C. Hazenbeth, 1841.

9. Mysterious sign of Royalty. W. Palmer, 1846.

10. See, see the royal banners fly. J. E. Beitz, 1849.

11. The Royal Banner forward goes, The mystic Cross resplendent glows. J. D. Chambers, 1852 and 1867.

13. The banners of the King go forth Outshines the mystery of the Road. W. J. Blenc, 1852 and 1855.

13. The banners of the King appear, The mystery of the Cross shines clear. J. Noble, written in 1667, pub. in his (posthumous) Misc. Poems, 1849.

14. Behold the royal ensigns fly, which bear the Cross's mystery. By F. J. Potter in the Catholic Preacher, 1858.

15. The Banner of the King goes forth, The Cross, the radiant mystery. Elizabeth Charles, 1858.

16. The Royal Banner floats on high. R. Mamm, in Lyræ Mæsticæ, 1864.

17. The Kingly banners proudly fly. F. Trupper, 1865.

18. The King's bright banners onward bear. H. M. Macgill, in The Juvenile Miscellany, Magazine of the U. Presb. Church, April, 1868, and his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876.

19. The banners of our King advance. J. Wallace, 1874.

20. Banners of our King are streaming. C. Kent, in O. Shipley's Annus Suetas, 1881.

21. The royal banners forward fly; The cross upon them cheers the sky. S. W. Duffield, in his Latter Hymn-Writers, &c., 1889.

This extensive list of tra. marks in a striking manner the strong hold this hymn has upon many men. In translating the stanza which has called forth the greatest diversity and skill is the fourth as above.

The finest rendering of these lines which we have seen is that in the Service Book of 1687 (see above), which reads:—

"That which the Prophet-King of old
Hath in mysterious Verse foretold,
Is now accomplish'd, whilst we see God ruling Nations from a Tree."

The nearest approach to this in dignity and force is Dr. Neale's tr. of 1861. [J. J.]

Victimæ Paschali. Wipo(?). [Easter.]
This Sequence is an excellent example of the transition from the rhythmical, irregular, unrhymed Notkerian sequences to the regular rhyming sequences of Adam of St. Victor and later writers. It presents several points of interest, and demands a somewhat detailed examination. We shall treat (1) of the Text and MSS., (2) of the Authorship, and (3) of the Uses made of this Sequence.

i. Text and MSS. To show its structure we print the full text, which reads:—

i. Victimæ Paschali Laudæ immolent Christi- tiani. ii. Agnus redemit oves; Christus innocens Patri Reconciliavit Peccatores. iii. The text as above is printed from the following mss., all now in the British Museum.

(a) Add. 19768, f. 22b, written in the 11th cent., mainly at St. Gall; (b) Reg. 2 B., iv., f. 216b, written in England, circa 1140; (c) Calig. A., xiv., f. 67b, written in England, circa 1139; (d) Add. 29926, f. 435b, written in France, circa 1278; (e) Add. 11669, f. 61, written in Germany, circa 1089; (f) Arundel, 159, f. 92b, written in Germany in the 13th cent. The variations are: i. l. 1, Paschali in a; i. l. 2, impolent in e; ii. l. 2, conflixerunt in a; iv. l. 7, spes nostra in e; iv. l. 8, vos in b and e; iv. l. 8, Gallien in e and f; v. l. 4, surrexisse in e and d; v. l. 5, d. mortuus in b.

This sequence is also found in a ms. written in Germany circa 1199, and now in the Bodleian (Liturg.

Misc. 341, f. 47); in a ms. apparently written at Limoges, circa 1189, and now in the Bibl. Nat. at Paris (Lat. 1139, f. 199); and in the Reichenach Gradual of circa 1060, also in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 10610); in two mss. of the 16th cent. at St. Gall, No. 339, p. 7 (added in a hand of the 11th cent., and No. 340, p. 783, and in a third of the 17th cent., No. 343, p. 304, &c. Among MSS. it is found in a Sarum, circa 1370 (Barlow, s. p. 215), a York, circa 1390; a Hereford, circa 1390, and in the Bodleian; in a Paris, circa 14th cent. (Add. 16905, f. 158b, beginning with "Agnus redemit oves"), and a Sens of the 14th cent. (Add. 80088, f. 82, beginning imperfectly, the preceding leaf being missing), now in the Brit. Mus.; in the St. Andrews, circa 1499, the Angers of 1489, the Magdeburg of 1480, the Münster of 1489, and many others in various continental countries. In the Paris Missal (see above, as also in the printed ed. of 1481) et. 1. is omitted, and in the present Roman Missal ll. 1-3 of et. v. are omitted, while in some of the 18th cent. eds. of the Roman Missal, e.g. in the Venice eds. of 1477 and 1487, in the Brit. Mus., the question "Dic nobis" (iv., ll. 1, 2) is given thrice, i.e. it is repeated after l. 4 and again after l. 6. Otherwise, in most cases, the text is given in full and unaltered. The printed text is also in Duval, ll. p. 95, with further notes at ll. p. 285, ll. p. 287, v. p. 58; Kehrein, No. 83; Bissler, No. 78; Wackernagel, l., No. 199; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1865, and others.

ii. Authorship. As a rule this Sequence has been regarded as of unknown authorship. Of the guesses at its authorship the following may be mentioned:—

(1) Cardinal Bona (Heruus Liturg., Rome, 1671, p. 836) says that it had been ascribed to Notker. This ascription, however, is quite without ground (see p. 814).

(2) Robert II. of France. In a list of authors of sequences, written circa 1300 (see p. 1043), it is ascribed to Robert II. of France. This ascription also lacks confirmation (see p. 807, ii.).

(3) Hermannus Contractus. The attribution to Hermannus Contractus, which is mentioned in the Abbé Migne's Encyclopédie Théologique, vol. viii. (Liturgie), Paris, 1844, col. 650, seems also entirely conjectural.

(4) Adam of St. Victor. In the Augustinian Missal of St. Victor, printed at Paris in 1529, it is attributed to Adam of St. Victor, but it is found in mss. written before he was born (see above and p. 34, ii.).

(5) Italian Origin. In the Ecclésiologist for October, 1854, it is said to be "probably of Italian origin." This appears simply to be a conjecture, and we have been unable to discover anything which can be called evidence in support of it.

(6) Wipo. Lastly P. Anselm Schubiger, in his Singerische St. Gallen, 1854, ascribes it to Wipo, on the ground that it is marked with his name in an Einsiedeln ms. of the end of the 11th cent., and gives a facsimile (Appz., No. 35) of the part of the ms. which contains this sequence. Since Schubiger's discovery the sequence has generally been ascribed to Wipo (otherwise Wippo or Wigbert), who was a native of Burgundy, and a secular priest. He was for some time chaplain to the Emperors Conrad II. (d. June 4, 1039), and Heinrich III., and presented a collection of poems to the former in 1026, and another collection to the latter in 1041; his latest work being a prose history of the Emperor Conrad, finished about 1048. His claim to this sequence (marked as his, so far as we can discover, only in this solitary Einsiedeln ms.) can hardly be regarded as definitely established. Neither of the two earliest St. Gall mss. give his name, and the copy in one of these mss. (No. 340) dates circa 1060 (so also the Reichenach Gradual noted above), i.e. more than 20 years earlier than we otherwise hear of Wipo. And there is nothing in the other pieces known as his which would lead us to connect the "Victimæ Paschali" with his name.

iii. Uses. This fine Sequence is simple, scriptural, good in rhythm, and embraces in itself various elements which account for its popularity and long extended use. Luther held it in high esteem, especially admiring the terse and vivid picture of the conflict between Death and Life in st. iii., and practically incorporated this stanza in his "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (see p. 324, l.). Its brevity and picturesqueness led to its speedy adoption in the Missals of various countries for use at the ordinary church services during the period of Easter.

Of the use from which the text as above is taken, f marks it simply as "a sequence on the Resurrection"; d assigns it to Easter Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday; and e to Thursday in Easter week; while a, b, and c do not indicate its use.

Neither the Sarum, York, nor Hereford Missal used it on Easter Sunday or on Low Sunday; the Sarum appointing it for Friday in Easter week, and for the 2nd and later Sundays up to the Ascension, and the Hereford and York for Wednesday in Easter week, as also on the 2nd and later Sundays. In the Angers Missal of 1485 it is however appointed for Easter Sunday and for Low Sunday, as well as for Tuesday and Wednesday in Easter week; in the Hamburg Missal of 1609 for Easter Sunday, for Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Easter week; in the Uzer Missal of 1495 for the B. V. M. at Eastertide, &c. Other Missals present various combinations or modifications of these uses, which need not be mentioned in detail. In the Roman Missal of 1870 it is one of the four sequences which were alone retained in that revision, and is appointed for use on Easter Sunday and daily up to Low Sunday inclusive, but not for the later Sundays. In the Paris Brev. of 1680 it forms part of the service for Vespers on Easter Sunday.

The dramatic possibilities of this Sequence also early attracted attention. It formed a striking feature in many of the Easter Miracle or Mystery Plays, but these we have not space to describe in detail.

(For its use there see e.g. F. J. Mous's Schauspiele des Mittelalters, Karlsruhe, 1846, pp. 17-37, 128, &c.; Religieuses Antiquités, ed. T. Wright and J. O. Halliwell, vol. II, 1843, p. 181; E. de Coussemaker's Drames Liturgiques du Moyen Age, Rennes, 1880; G. Milobach's Oster- und Passionsspiele, Wolfenbüttel, 1880, &c.)

It was also frequently employed at Matins on Easter Sunday, in the ceremony of the Easter Sepulchre, which was intercalated in the service between the Third Lesson and the "Te Deum." Various forms of this function are found both in England, and on the continent. Dr. Carl Lange, in his Die Lateinischen Osterfesten, Munich, 1887, gives the results of his examination of 224 ms. and printed service books (Breviaries, Antiphonaries, Processionals, Troparies, &c.), ranging from the 10th to the 18th cent., and used in France, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, and England, all of which contain longer or shorter forms of this function, and 68 of which embody the "Victimae Paschali," either in full or beginning with "Die nobis, Maria." The earliest forms in which he has found the "Victimae Paschali" included date from the 18th cent.

At p. 62 Lange prints from a 13th cent. Ritual for use at Chalons-sur-Marne. There, after the Third Responsory, two boys vested in white took their places, one on the right and the other on the left of the high altar, to represent the angels at the Holy Sepulchre; followed by three deacons in white alms-clothes, coming from the right side and standing before the altar, to represent the Three Marys. The Angels ask the Three Marys "Whom seek ye in the sepulchre?" and they answer "Jesus of Nazareth." The Angels, taking off the white altar-cloth, as representing the grave clothes, reply "He is not here." The Marys, turning to the choir, sing "Alleluia. The Lord has risen." Then, passing down towards the choir, the First Mary sings "Victimae" (st. 1.), the Second sings "Agnus redemptus" (st. 2.), and the Third sings "Mors et vita" (st. 3.). Then the successor, coming to the first step of the altar, asks the First Mary "Die nobis" (st. 1v., ll. 1, 2), to which she replies "Sepulchrum" (st. 1v., ll. 3, 4), the Second replies "Angelus testes" (st. 1v., ll. 5, 6), and the Third "Surrexit" (st. 1v., ll. 7, 8). Then the successor, turning to the choir, and pointing to the First Mary, sings "Credendum" (st. v., ll. 1-3), and the whole choir sing "Scimus" (st. v., ll. 4-6). In the meantime the Marys have returned to the vestry, and the ceremony ends by the Bishop or the successor beginning the "Te Deum." This is one of the many varieties in which the complete sequence is included. Even in the use of the "Victimae Paschali" there were great variations. So in a Münchberg Antiphonary of the 13th cent. (Lange, p. 149), Mary Magdalene sings st. 1-iii., then Peter and John ask her "Die nobis" (st. 1v., ll. 1, 2), to which she replies "Sepulchrum" (st. 1v., ll. 3-5). Then the choir sing "Credendum" (st. v. ll. 1-3), Mary alone the "Scimus" (st. v., ll. 4, 5), and the choir "Tu nobis" (st. v., l. 6). In the later service books the more dramatic portion of the sequence beginning with the "Die nobis" is alone retained (e.g. in the Hereford Breviary of 1605). So in the Prag Breviary of 1572 (Lange, p. 172) the rubrics provide for a proper Easter sepulchre and for two Marys. There the Bishop asks Mary Magdalene "Die nobis, Maria?" the choir singing "Quid vidistis in via?" and Mary replying "Sepulchrum" (st. 1v., ll. 3-5), and the choir then singing "Credendum" (st. v., ll. 1-3). As Dr. Lange requires 171 large octavo pages to print and describe the variations of these service-books, we must beg our readers who wish for further information to refer to his interesting work.

As a final proof of the popularity of the "Victimae Paschali," we may mention some of the numerous imitations of it.

Thus M. Leon Gautier, in his 1838 ed. of Adam of St. Victor, prints two sequences, one on St. Victor ("Martyria Victoris laudes recentem Christiani Mortem ei") at ll. p. 94, and the other for the B. V. M. at Easter ("Virgini Mariae laudes innocent Christiani! Eva tristic") at ll. p. 348. Both of these are servile imitations of, and indeed borrow a good deal directly from, the "Victimae Paschali," and in his 1851 ed. of Adam of St. Victor (pp. 236, 245) Gautier says that in both cases the ascription to Adam is a mistake. Other imitations may be consulted in Kehrein, e.g. his Nos. 152, 177, 215, 235, 233, 525, 565.

The varying forms of the text, together with a full critical and theological commentary, will be found in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. ii., 1866, pp. 87-90. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. Ferth to the paschal Victim, Christians, bring Your sacrifice of praise. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 233; and his Hym. and Poems, 1873, p. 123. In a few collections only.

2. The holy Paschal work is wrought. By R. Campbell, in his Hym. and Anthems, 1850, p. 72. It is mainly from a ms. tr. by Dr. Neale (so the Campbell was.) It is in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. In Dr. Rorison's Hym. and Anthems, 1851, No. 76, it was altered to "The Paschal work is wrought."

3. Christ the Lord is risen to-day! Christians, haste your vows to pay. By Jane E. Leeson, in the Rev. H. Formby's Roman Catholic Hymns, 1851, No. 10, in 4 st. of 8 l., and signed in the Index "M. L." This tr. has passed into several collections in G. Britain and America, including H. A. & M., 1861, &c. Usually Miss Leeson's third stanza is omitted. Subsequently Miss Leeson retranslated the hymn in two forms, and included the same in her Par. and Hym., 1853, as—

(1) Sacrifices of Thanksgiving. This is repeated in the Irvingite Hym. for the Use of the Churches, 1864 and 1871 as "Tr. by J. E. L., 1854." We have here a slight error in the date, but a certain indication that the anonymous Paraphrases and Hym. of 1863 were by Miss Leeson.

(2) Sacrifices ye praise meet. This we have not found elsewhere.

4. To the Paschal Victim, Christians, bring the sacrifice of praise. By J. M. Neale, in the Hym. Noted, 1852, No. 28. This is a prose tr. In the Hymnary, 1872, it is given in a metrical form as "Unto the Paschal Victim bring." Line 3, "The Lamb, the sheep, &c."

5. To the Paschal Victim raise Gift and sacrifice of praise. By W. J. Blew, in his Hym. and Tunes

Bk., 1852-55; and again in the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875.

6. Praise to the Paschal Victim bring. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's Hym., 1867, No. 113, and signed "D. L."

7. Christians, to the Paschal Victim. Anonymous, in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882.

Other trs. are:—

1. Bring, all ye dear-bought nations, bring. W. K. Bloom, 1670; the Divine Office, 1783; and O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

2. Let Christians grateful hymns of praise. F. C. Haenke, 1845, and Lyræ Nazarenica, 1864.

3. The Paschal Victim calls for praise. J. R. Best, 1849.

4. Christians, raise your grateful strain. E. C. Benedict, in his Hym. of Hilbert, 1867.

5. Unto the Paschal Victim bring. Line 3, "The Lamb redeemed, &c." C. E. Pearson, 1863.

6. Christians, come and lift your voices. J. Wallace, 1874.

7. Christians, your voices raise. Anon. in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

Victis sibi cognomina. [Circumcision.]

This anonymous hymn was given in the Paris Brev., 1736, for the Feast of the Circumcision at 2nd Vespers, and beyond that date we have been unable to trace it. The text is in J. Chandler's Hym. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 49; Carl. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and L. C. Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. "Tis for conquering kings to gain. By J. Chandler, in his Hym. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 55, and his Hym. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 30. It is given in a great many hymn-books, sometimes in full, and at other times in an abbreviated form.

2. Tyrants their empty titles take. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauds Synon, 1857, p. 102. This is given in the Hymnary, 1872, as "Warrior kings their titles gain."

3. Conquering kings their titles take. This cento appeared in the trial ed. of H. A. & M., 1859, and the eds. of 1861 and 1875, and has passed into several other collections. It is composed of st. i., v., vi., by the Compilers, and st. ii., iii., iv. from J. Chandler as above, slightly altered. Three or four lines in st. v., vi. are also from Chandler. This cento is given in Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861, as "Earthly kings their titles take," and in the Sarum Hym., 1868, as, "Warrior kings fresh glory gain."

4. Let tyrants take their haughty names. By R. C. Singleton, in the Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

1. Let earthly tyrants title claim. J. Williams, 1839.

2. From conquered realms let tyrants claim. W. J. Blew, 1862-65.

3. Let earthly monarchs titles gain. J. A. Johnston, 1852-61.

4. To earthly kings fresh names accrue. Lord Erskine, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

Victorinus, Santolitus. [Santolil, Jean-Baptiste de.]

Vinet, Alexandre Rodolphe, b. June 18th, 1799, at Ouchy, near Lausanne. His father, a man of somewhat stern religion, was schoolmaster of the village, and held a small appointment in the Canton du Vaud, Alexandre was appointed Professor of the French language at the gymnasium of Basle, at the age of 20, and occupied this office, with some work for the University, for twenty years.

In 1819 he was called to the ministry, and married. At first opposed to the movement of the Réveil, a deeper knowledge of its principles and deep sympathy with the persecution of its leaders, drew him heartily to its side. His pen was fearlessly used in defence of toleration (Du respect des opinions, 1824), freedom of worship (Mémoire en faveur de la liberté des cultes, 1826), and the separation of Church and State (Essai sur la manifestation des convictions religieuses, et sur la séparation de l'Église et de l'État, 1842). No work is more permanently valuable on the subject than the Essai, from the logical sequence of its conclusions from the premises laid down. In 1837 he had been recalled to Lausanne, to occupy the "chaire de théologie pratique," in the Academy. In the end of 1840, however, he resigned the chair, withdrawing at the same time from the national church. He took a prominent part in the preliminary committees for the formation of the "Eglise libre du Canton de Vaud"; but his proposals were largely modified in the final constitution of it, to his deep regret. He had been compelled to withdraw from the discussions by his failing health. His constitution, always delicate, gave way comparatively early, and he d. May 10, 1847. His name is tenderly cherished, not only for his efforts in the cause of religious freedom, but as an Evangelical Divine (Discours sur quelques sujets religieux, 1831-41, and Études Évangéliques, pub. after his death), and as a distinguished man of letters (see the portrait of him by Sainte Beuve). His articles in the Semour touched wide and varied subjects of literature with rare delicacy, acuteness, and truth. The most celebrated of his literary works are: Études sur Blaise Pascal, and Études sur la littérature Française au dix-neuvième Siècle, pub. posthumously. The hymns pub. in the Chants Chrétiens are only a few out of the number he wrote. They reveal the inner depth of a nature that shrunk from outward demonstration of religious emotion, and are valuable on this account, as well as for that refinement of meditation which places them so high among the Protestant hymns of France. (See p. 599, II.) [H. L. B.]

Vintimille, Charles Gaspar Guillaume de Vintimille du Luc, was b. Nov. 15, 1653. He was designated Bishop of Marseilles in 1684, but was not consecrated as such till 1692. In 1710 he was translated to the see of Aix (Bouches du Rhône), and in 1729 to that of Paris. He d. March 13, 1746. Under his auspices appeared the new Paris Breviary of 1736 (in which the ancient hymns of the Church were in great measure replaced by those of the Santolilus, Coffin, and other recent French writers); the new Paris Missal of 1738; and the new Paris Processional of 1740; all of which were speedily adopted in many other French dioceses. That Vintimille was himself a hymnwriter seems decidedly doubtful. The hymn "O Christe qui noster poli" (p. 825, I.) has sometimes been ascribed to him, but neither in the Cluniae Brev. of 1686 nor in the Paris Brev. of 1736 is it in any way marked as his. [J. M.]

Virgin born, we bow before Thee.

Bp. B. Heber. [Lent.] Appeared in his post-humous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 54, in 4 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the 3rd S. in Lent. As given in the People's H., 1867, No. 373, the lines "Mary, Mother meek and mild"; are altered to "Mary, Maid and Mother mild." It is otherwise unchanged. [J. J.]

Virginis castae virginis summae decus praecinctae. [Common of Virgins.] Morel, in his Lat. Hymns, 1868, p. 180, gives a part of this sequence with the note, "This is only the beginning of a rambling and somewhat barbarous sequence in the ms. collection of F. Brander [St. Gall ms., No. 546, written in 1507], where it bears the title 'a prolix sequence of some monk of St. Gall.'" Neale, in his Sequentiae, 1852, p. 237, ascribes it to Godescalcus or Gotschalck (d. 1050); but the earliest source he quotes is the Tournay Missal of 1540, and there does not seem to be any reason for accepting this ascription, which is evidently a conjecture. The earliest text known is in the St. Gall ms., No. 393, of the 13th or 14th cent. The printed text is also in Daniel, v. p. 344, and Kebrta, No. 475. Tr. as "To-day let Christian maidens." In the People's H., 1867, No. 221, and signed "S. M." [i.e. Sister Marion]. [J. M.]

Virginis Proles, Opifexque matrix. [Common of Virgins.] This is found in four mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 67 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 110; Harl. 2961, f. 249 b; Add. 30951, f. 155); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1831, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 406); and in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi Coll., Cambridge (391, p. 274), and the Bern ms. 455 of the 10th cent. It is in two mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387 and 413. Also in the Mozarabic, Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the Sarum use being for one virgin and martyr at 1st Vespers and at Matins. Daniel, i. No. 238, gives the original, and the form in the Roman Breviary, 1632, citing it at iv. pp. 140, 368, as in a 9th cent. ms. at Bern, a 10th cent. Rheinau ms., &c. The printed text is also in Wackernagel, i. No. 188; G. M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms., &c. [J. M.]

3. O Virgin born. That Mother's Framer Thou. J. D. Chambers, 1865.

4. O Virgin's Offspring, Who Thy Mother didst create. J. Wallace, 1874.

The foregoing trs. are of the text for a "Virgin and Martyr." There are also trs. of an arrangement of the text for a "Virgin, but not a Martyr." These include one in the Primer, 1708, and a second by J. Wallace, 1874, each beginning with the same first line as above. In the Rom. Brev., st. viii., of the Latin text, Quis creatus Deus alius nobis, is given, together with a doxology, for "Holy Women." This is tr. : (1) "O God of bounty, at thy saints intreating," in the Primer, 1599; (2) "Permit, great God, this Saint with Prayers may free," in the Primer, 1706; and (3) "O God, for this Thy servant's sake, we humbly Thee implore," by J. Wallace, 1874. In the Marquess of Bute's Roman Breviary into English, 1879, Wallace's tr. is given as "When she pleads for us at her sweet petition," &c. [J. J.]

Virgo vernans velut rosa, Agni sponsa speciosa. [St. Winifred.] This is the Sequence on St. Winifred of Wales, in the Sarum Missal, Venice, 1494, f. 255. It does not appear to be in any other ed. of the Sarum Missal, nor to have been received into other English or Continental Missals. It will be found in a note at col. 960 of the Burnt-land reprint of the Sarum Missal, 1861. Tr. as :—

More fair than all the vernal flowers. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 337; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 202. It was repeated in Dr. Rawes's Hys. for the Year, 1867, &c. [J. M.]

Vischer, Christoph, s. of Jakob Vischer or Fischer, burges at Joachimsthal, in Bohemia, was b. at Joachimsthal in 1520. He matriculated at the University of Wittenberg in Nov. 1540 (n. a. 1544), and was ordained at Wittenberg on Feb. 10, 1544, as pastor and probst at Jüterberg, near Wittenberg. He was then appointed (in 1552) cathedral preacher and superintendent at Schmalkalden; in 1571 pastor and general superintendent at Meiningen; in 1574 court preacher and assistant superintendent at Celle (Zelle); and in 1577 chief pastor of St. Martin's Church at Halberstadt. He returned to Celle in 1583, as genotal superintendent of Lüneburg, and d. at Celle in October, 1597 (Koch, ii., 265; Wetzel, i. p. 285, and A. H., i., pt. v. p. 38; Rotermund's Gelehrte Hannover, vol. ii., 1823, p. 40; J. K. F. Schlegel's Kirchen- und Reformations-Geschichte Hannover, vol. ii., 1829, pp. 399-402; ms. from Dr. Ebeling, Celle, &c.)

Vischer was a somewhat voluminous writer. Rotermund gives the titles of 29 works by him. Only one hymn is known us his, viz. :—

Wir danken dir, Herr Jesu Christ, Dass du für uns gestorben bist. Passiontide. This is included in pt. ii. of the Dresden G. B., 1597 (thence in Wackernagel, v., p. 246), marked as by M. C. F., and in 6 st. of 4 l., viz. st. 1. as above, and

- ii. Und bitten dich, war Mensch und Gott.
- iii. Behüt uns auch für Sünd und Schand.
- iv. Und draus schöpfen die Zuversicht.

The only portion we have been able to find in any work of Vischer's is st. ii. This occurs in his Christliche wend eysältige Erklärung der gadenreichen Historien des Leydens und Sterbens hochtrödtlicher Außersetzung und siegreicher Himmelfart unsers lieben Herrn Jesu Christi, auch der Sendung des Heiligen Geistes, &c., Schmalkalden, 1595 (Brit. Mus.), and is given there in Sermo x. of those on the Resurrection (Auferstehung) as follows :—

"Solche Seufftzer erwecket der heilige Geist, störet in uns das wir beten.

"Ach Herr Christo, war Menach und Gott,
Durch dein heilig Fünff Wunden rot,
Erlöse mich von dem ewigen Tod,
Und tröset mich in meiner letzten Not."

The same stanza is found in the ed. Schmalkalden, 1568 (Berlin Library). The sermons on the Asperges seem to have appeared at Frankfurt am Main in 1564 (preface 1563, title 1563, colophon 1564). So the copy in the Vatican Library at Rome). Mitsell, No. 244, prints the four stanzas from the text given by J. C. Olearius, Jens, 1710, as a reprint of the original, and as entitled "A children's hymn composed by M. Christoph Vischer for the Christian community at Schmalkalden, upon the strengthening uses of the bitter sufferings and death of Christ Jesus our Saviour." It is also in the Enc. L. S., 1851, No. 152. The frs. are—

1. We bless Thee, Jesus Christ our Lord; For ever be Thy name adored. This is a good and full fr. by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 622 in his Hymn. Christ., 1843.

2. With thanks we glory in Thy Cross. This is No. 331 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. [J. M.]

Vital Spark of heavenly flame. A Pope. [The Soul Immortal.] In the Spectator for Nov. 10, 1712, Steele gives a letter sent to him by Pope on the words spoken by Hadrian on his death-bed. This letter, in The Works of Alexander Pope, Esq. . . . Printed verbatim from the Octavo edition of Mr. Warburton. London, O. Bathurst, 1788. Vol. v. p. 185, is dated Nov. 7, 1712, and begins:—

"I was the other day in company with five or six men of some learning; where chancing to mention the famous verses which the Emperor Adrian spoke on his death-bed, they were all agreed that 'twas a piece of saley unworthy of that prince in those circumstances. I could not but differ from this opinion: methinks it was by no means gay, but a very serious soliloquy to his soul at the point of his departure; in which sense I naturally took the verses at my first reading them, when I was very young, and before I knew what interpretation the world generally put upon them.

"Animula vagula, blandula,
Hesper comesque corporis,
Que nunc abdis in loca?
Pallidula, rigida, nudula,
Nec (ut soles) dabis joca?"

The letter then proceeds with a prose translation of these lines, and a vindication of the same. At the foot of the letter, and after his signature, Pope added the following metrical rendering:—

"ADRIANI morientis ad ANIMAM
TRANSLATED.

"Ah fleeting Spirit! wand'ring fire,
That long hast warm'd my tender breast,
Must thou no more this frame inspire?
No more a pleasing cheerful guest?"

"Whither, ah whither art thou flying?
To what dark, undecover'd shore?
Thou seem'st all trembling, shiv'ring, dying,
And Wit and Humour are no more."

In the Spectator, Nov. 10, 1712, Steele gives this letter verbatim, with the exception of the metrical version at the end. On Nov. 29, 1712, Pope wrote to Steele expressing regret that as this letter was given in his name he had not an opportunity of setting forth his ideas more fully and accurately. This letter did not appear in the Spectator. On Dec. 4, 1712, Steele wrote to Pope:—

"This is to desire of you that you would please to make an ode as of a cheerful dying spirit, that is to say, the Emperor Adrian's 'Animula vagula' put into two or three stanzas for music. If you comply with this, and send us word so, you will very particularly oblige. Yours, &c." (Works, v. p. 185.)

To this Pope gave answer in the following letter, which is undated in his Works, vol. v. p. 190, but was probably sent within a post or two after the receipt of Steele's communication:—

"I do not send you word I will do, but have already done the thing you desire of me. You have it (as Cowley calls it) just warm from the brain. It came to me the first moment I waked this morning; yet, you'll see, it was not so absolutely inspiration, but that I had in my head not only the verses of Adrian, but the fine fragment of Sappho, &c.

"The dying Christian to his Socr.

"ODE.

"Vital spark of heavenly flame!
Quit, oh quit this mortal frame:
Trembling, hoping, ling'ring, flying,
Oh the pain, the bliss of dying!
Cease, fond nature, cease thy strife,
And let me languish into life."

II.

Hark! they whisper; angels say,
Sister spirit, come away!
What is this absorb me quite,
Steals my senses, shuts my sight,
Drowns my spirits, draws my breath?
Tell me, my soul, can this be death?

III.

"The world recedes; it disappears!
Heav'n opens on my eyes! my ears
With sounds seraphic ring:
Lend, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!
O Grave! where is thy victory?
O Death! where is thy sting?"

(Works, v. p. 190.)

What Steele did with this ode we cannot say. It was certainly not inserted in the Spectator, as is generally supposed. It was included in various editions of Pope's Works, and was taken from thence for use in the hymnals. Collyer included it in his Coll., 1812, No. 627, and since then it has been repeated in numerous hymn-books. In the Cong. H. Bk., 1886, J. Conder gave Pope's original text as No. 612, and a rewritten form of the same, beginning with the same first line, as No. 613. This rewritten form was repeated in his Choir and Oratory, 1897, p. 246, and in his posthumous Hymns of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 169.

The "fine fragment of Sappho" referred to in Pope's letter, formed the subject of Addison's article in the Spectator of Thursday, Nov. 22, 1711. Addison gives in his article a translation in Latin by Catullus, another in French by Boileau, and a third in English by Ambrose Phillips. It was doubtless to the original, and to these translations that Pope referred in his letter to Steele quoted above. As pointed out by R. Carruthers in his edition of Pope's Poetical Works, 1853, vol. ii., p. 178; and by Miller in his Stanzas and Songs of the Church, 1889, p. 149, Thomas Flatman's translation of the "Animula vagula, blandula," may have influenced Pope in his "Vital spark," but we are inclined to think that Addison's article in the Spectator, already referred to, had very much more to do with it than anything that Flatman had done.

Vokes, Mrs. A long correspondence has failed to elicit any information concerning this hymn-writer beyond the facts that the earliest work in which her hymns are found is a Sel. of Missionary and Devotional Hys., edited by the Rev. J. Griffin, a Congregational minister at Portsea, and pub. in 1797. Several of these were repeated in J. Dobell's New Sel. of Seven Hundred Evangelical Hys., &c., 1806. There are also 7 of her hymns, all with the signature "Mrs. Vokes," in W. B. Collyer's Coll., 1812. Of her hymns the following, all pub. in 1797, are still in C. U. :—

1. Behold the expected time draws near. Missions.
2. Behold the heathen waits to know. Missions.
3. Proud Babylon yet waits her doom. Fall of Babylon predicted.
4. Ye messengers of Christ. Missions. [J. J.]

Vom Himmel hoch da komm ich her. M. Luther. [Christmas.] This beautiful Christmas hymn first appeared in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1535, in 15 st. of 4 l.; and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 23. Also in Schirck's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 12, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 55, &c. In King's G. B., 1543, it is entitled "A Children's Hymn for Christmas Eve on the child Jesus, taken from the Second Chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke." It has sometimes been said to be derived, at least in part, from the Latin. To the "Parvulus nobis nascitur" its resemblance is very slight; and this Latin hymn has not been traced earlier than the 1579 ed. of Lucas Loelius's Psalmodia (1st ed. 1553). To the "Nuntium vobis fero de supernis" (Brit. Mus. ms. of the 12th cent., Hart 2928 f. 114), it has no relationship whatever. Of the origin of the German hymn, Laumann, in Koch, viii. 21, thus speaks :—

"Luther was accustomed every year to prepare for his family a happy Christmas Eve's entertainment . . . and for this festival of his children he wrote this Christmas hymn. Its opening lines are modelled on a song, 'Aus fremden Landen komm ich her'; and throughout he successfully catches the ring of the popular sacred song. It is said that Luther celebrated the festival in his own house in this original fashion. By his orders the first seven verses of this hymn were sung by a man dressed as an angel, whom the children greeted with the eighth and following verses."

We may add that Luther took the first stanza almost entirely from the song, which begins :—

"Ich komm aus fremden Landen her,
Und bring euch viel der neuen Mähr,
Der neuen Mähr bring ich so viel,
Mehr denn ich euch hier sagen will."

From the rest of the song Luther did not borrow anything.

In King's G. B., 1535, it is set to the melody of "Aus fremden Landen," or rather, as F. M. Böhme, in his Alteutsches Liederbuch, 1871, No. 271, gives it "Ich komm aus fremden Landen her." In the Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, V. Schumann, 1839, this was superseded by the beautiful melody still in use, which is sometimes ascribed to Luther, and is set to this hymn in the C. B. for England, 1863 (set also to No. 57 in H. A. & M., 1875). Tr. as :—

1. From highest heaven good news I bring. By A. T. Russell, as No. 17 in the Dalton Hospital H. Bk., 1848. There st. i. is condensed from l. ii.; and st. ii.-v. are from iii., iv., viii., xv. In his own Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 43, Mr. Russell omitted the tr. of st. xv. and added a tr. of st. vii.

2. From yonder world I come to earth. In full, by Dr. J. Hunt in his Spir. Songs of Martin Luther, 1853, p. 30. From this st. vi.-ix., xiii., xiv., beginning "Oh! let us all be glad to-day," were included in the Manchester S. S. H. Bk., 1855, the Bk. of Praise for Children, 1881, and the Cong. Church Hym., 1887.

3. From heaven above to earth I come. This is a good and full tr., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Germanica, 1st Ser., 1855, p. 12, and in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 30. Repeated in full in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880. Varying centos, beginning with st. vii., "Give heed, my heart, lift up thine eyes," are in Ep. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hys., 1858, and his Hym. Comp., 1876, in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1879, and others.

4. Good news from heaven the angels bring. This is No. 131 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868, in 7 st. (answering to st. i., iii., iv., viii., x., xiii., xv.), of which st. i.-iv., vii. are altered from A. T. Russell, and v., vi. from Miss Winkworth. Repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 54. St. i.-iii., v., vi., of this form are in the Hys. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882.

Other tra. are :—

(1) "I come from heav'n to tell." In the Gode and Godlie Ballades, ed. 1688, f. 28 (1668, p. 43). Rewritten by H. R. Bramley, as No. 68 in the Bramley-Stainer Christmas Carols, New and Old, beginning "From highest heaven I come to tell." (2) "I come from heaven, to declare," as No. 300 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1784. From this st. vii., viii., x., xiii. were given in the Bible H. Bk., 1845, beginning "Awake, my heart, my soul, my eyes." (3) "To-day we celebrate the birth," of st. iv., vii., viii., xiii. (partly founded on the 1764 tr.), as No. 50 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1868, No. 47). (4) "I come, I come: from yon celestial clime." By Miss Fry, 1848, p. 7. (5) "Little children, all draw near." By J. Anderson, 1848, p. 3. (6) "From highest heaven, on joyous wing." By R. Massie, 1854, p. 3. (7) "From heaven high I wing my flight." By Dr. H. W. Dulcken, in his Bk. of German Songs, 1856, p. 284. (8) "From heaven high I've wandered forth." By Dr. H. W. Dulcken in his Golden Harp, 1864, p. 137. (9) "From heaven on high I come to you." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 256; altered in his Evangelist, 1876, p. 46. (10) "From heav'n on high to earth I come." In the Ch. of England Magazine, 1872, p. 44. (11) "From heaven so high I come to you." By the Rev. J. G. Tasker, in the Was. Meth. Magazine, Dec., 1883.

We may note that in J. C. Jacob's Præl. Ger., 1722, p. 13, there is a hymn in 5 st., beginning "He reigns, the Lord our Saviour reigns," which is set to the melody of 1539. It is not however a tr. from Luther, but is merely a selection of stanzas from Isaac Watts's version of Ps. cxvii. [J. M.]

Vom Himmel kam der Engel Schar. M. Luther. [Christmas.] This is founded on St. Luke ii. 10, 11, and St. Matt. ii. 6; and was apparently written in 1543, and meant for use when his other Christmas hymn ("Vom Himmel hoch") was thought to be too long. It was let pub. in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1543, in 6 st. of 4 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 28. Also in Schirck's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 15, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851. Tr. as :—

1. From yon ethereal heavens. This is a paraphrase, in 54 lines, by Miss Fry, in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 20. From this a cento in 5 st. of s.m., recast and beginning, "Let all our hearts rejoice," is No. 5 in Whittemore's Supp. to All H. Bks., 1860.

2. To shepherds as they watched by night. In full, by R. Massie in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 7. Included in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon in his Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 66.

Other tra. are :—

(1) "A band of angels from the sky," as No. 145 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1784. (2) "Sing! sing! ye ransomed mortals, sing." By Sir John Dowling in his Hymns, 1825, No. 81. (3) "The humble shepherd, tending." By J. Anderson, 1848, p. 7 (1847, p. 21). (4) "From heaven there came an angel throng." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 28. (5) "From heaven angel hosts descend." By Miss Marington, 1854, p. 22. (6) "The angels came down in their colonies so bright." By S. Garnett in his Hys. & Tra., 1861, p. 27. (7) "From heaven the angel-choir came near." By Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 256; altered in his Eclogia, 1876, p. 48. [J. M.]

Vom Himmel kommt der starke Held. [Christmas.] This hymn appears in the Neues Hildburghäuserisches G. B., 1807 (ed. 1808, No. 170), in 10 st. of 4 l. The two opening lines, but not much more, are taken from a hymn by Dr. Johann Christoph Stockhausen [b. October 26, 1725, at Gladenbach, Hesse; became in 1769 Lutheran superintendent at Hanau; d. at Hanau, Sept. 4, 1784], found in the Neue Hanau Münzbergerische G. B., 1779, and included in the Württemberg G. B., 1791, in 6 st. The rest is a paraphrase, apparently by J. C. Wagner (q.v.) of the same passage of Holy Scripture as that used by Luther in his "Vom Himmel kam der Engel Schaar," but it has very little resemblance to Luther. The trs. from the text of Bunson's Versuch, 1833, No. 118, in 9 st., are:—

(1) "The mighty Saviour comes from heaven." By Miss Cox, 1841, p. 13. (2) "From Heaven comes the mighty Lord." By Lady E. Fortescue, 1843. [J. M.]

Vos ante Christi tempora. C. Coffin. [Septuagesima.] Appeared in the Paris Brev. 1736, for the Sundays from Septuagesima to Lent at Vespers; and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 48. The text is given in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 58; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and in L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

1. O ye who followed Christ in love. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 64, and his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 35. In 1853 it was given in an altered form (but opening with Chandler's first line) in Murray's Hymnal, No. 32. Murray's alterations were repeated in great part in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1855, and in the 1st ed., 1861, where the tr. began:—

2. How blest were they who walked in love. In this rendering additional changes were made by the Compilers of H. A. & M., thus rendering it a cento by Chandler, Murray, and the Compilers of H. A. & M. This was repeated in a few collections, but omitted from the 1875 ed. of H. A. & M. In Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, No. 430, the opening line is "O ye who follow Christ in love," but the hymn as a whole is from Murray and H. A. & M. The Hymnal, 1872, is the H. A. & M. text with additional alterations.

3. Ye patriarchs all, and ancient sires. This, in Kennedy, 1853, No. 434, is a cento of which st. ii. ll. 1-4 are from Chandler; st. v., vi. from Murray's Hyl., 1852, the doxology from Bp. Ken, and the rest by the editor, partly from J. A. Johnston's English Hyd., 1856.

Other trs. are:—

1. Ye patriarchal saints and sires. I. Williams. 1839.

2. Ye patriarchs and ancient sires. J. A. Johnston. 1856.

3. O ye, ere Christ had sojourned here. J. D. Chambers. 1857. [J. J.]

Vos O virginum cum citharis chori. [Common of Virgins.] An anonymous hymn at 1st Vespers on the Feast of a Virgin not a Martyr, in the Sens Brev., 1726, and the Paris Brev., 1736. Also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Ye Virgin company. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, 1835 (vol. viii. p. 518), and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 319.

2. Ye virgin choirs rejoice. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, Pt. ii., 1868, p. 43, and with alterations in the Hymner, 1882.

3. Chant your hymns, ye choirs of Virgins. By T. I. Ball, in the 1873 Appx. to the H. Noted.

4. Ye Virgin choirs, with harps of gold. By R. F. Littledale, in the S. Margaret's Hymnal (East Grinstead), 1875. [J. J.]

Vox clara ecce intonat. [Advent.] This hymn has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, but is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors. It is certainly ancient, possibly even of the 5th cent. It is suggested by Rom. xlii. 11 (the Epistle for the 1st S. in Advent), and St. Luke xxi. 25 (the Gospel for the 2nd S. in Advent in Anglican use, for the 1st S. in modern Roman use). It is an excellent summary of the leading ideas of Advent, and will fitted for use throughout the season. Daniel, i. No. 79, gives the ancient text, in 4 st. of 4 l. (together with the recast of the Roman Breviary of 1632, which begins En clara vox redarguit), and at iv. p. 143 cites it as in a Rheims ms. of the 11th cent. It is also in G. M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissaeusis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. In the use of Sarum it was assigned to Lands on the 1st S. in Advent, and daily up to Christmas Eve. Also in the York, Aberdeen, ancient Roman (Venice, 1478), and other Breviaries. In the Mozarabic Breviary of 1502 it is the hymn at Vespers on Wednesday and Friday in the first and third weeks in Advent (see Migne's PP. Lat., lxxxvi. cols. 65, 83, 898). [W. A. S.]

It is found in five mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum, viz. three of the Ancient English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 29 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 32; Harl. 2261, f. 225 b); and two of the ancient Spanish Church (Add. 30,848, f. 6 b; Add. 20,251, f. 111). Also in an 11th cent. ms. as Corpus Christi, Cantiligne (591, page 238); in the St. Gall ms., No. 413, of the 11th cent., &c. In the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Society), 1851, p. 37, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 82. f. 11). The ancient text is also in Wackernagel I., No. 66; Hymn. Sacred., 1851, p. 6; and Bitter, No. 33; the text of the Roman Breviary of 1632 in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. [J. M.]

Both forms of this hymn have been tr. into English as follows:—

1. Vox clara, ecce, intonat.

1. In music, lo, yon orb appears to rise. Hymnarium Anglicanum. 1844.

2. Lo! what a thrilling voice sounds forth. J. D. Chambers. 1852.

3. Hark, the clear voice, whose thrilling tone. W. J. Blew. 1852-55.

4. Hark! what a thrilling voice invades. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

5. Hark, a clear-toned voice, as thunder. J. W. Hewitt. 1859.

6. Give ear! the voice rings clear and true. J. Kable. 1859.

7. Hark to the voice whose thrilling tone. In the Hymner, 1882. Largely indebted to W. J. Blew, as above.

8. Clear rings a voice; it chides the world. Lord Bray, in O. Shipley's Agnus Sanctus. 1884.

ii. En clara vox redarguit.

1. Hark, a joyful voice is thrilling. By Card. Newman, in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, p. 110, and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, p. 9. In O. Shipley's Agnus Sanctus, 1884, and others.

2. Hark, an awful voice is sounding. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 48, and his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 26. It is in a large number of hymn-books. In Kennedy, 1863, it is given in a recast form as "Voice of mercy, voice of terror."

3. Hark, a gladsome voice is thrilling. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, and Rice's Sol. from the same, 1870, No. 1. It is based upon Card. Newman's tr. as above.

4. Hark to the voice that loudly cries. By J. A. Johnston, in his English Hym., 1852, 1856, 1861.

5. Hark, a thrilling voice is sounding. This, which appeared in Murray's Hymnal, 1859, No. 2, is an altered form of Caswall's tr. as above. It was repeated with variations in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, and many others. The text in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871, beginning with same line as H. A. & M., is a nearer approach to the original than that collection. Thring's text, also beginning with the same line, is Caswall with an adaptation of the best emendations of various editors.

6. Voice of mercy, voice of terror. By B. H. Kennedy, in his Hymno. Christiana, 1863, No. 47, is a recast of E. Caswall's tr. as above.

7. Hark, a trumpet voice of warning. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

8. Hark, the Baptist's voice is sounding. In the Hymnary, 1872, is an altered version of Caswall's tr. as above.

Other tr. are:—

1. A heavenly Voice and early Ray. Primer, 1768, 1837.

2. Hark, a voice of warning, bark. Ep. R. Mont., 1844.

3. Lo, loudly hath the voice proclaimed. A. J. B. Hope, 1844.

4. Hark! how that voice swells clearly out. Ep. J. Williams, 1845.

5. Hark, louder through surrounding gloom. W. Palmer, 1845.

6. What thrilling voice through midnight peals. W. J. Copeland, 1848.

7. Behold, a chiding voice and clear. F. Trappes, 1863.

8. Hark, hark, the voice of chanticleer. J. Wallace, 1873. [J. J.]

Vox clarescat, mens purgetur. [Trinity Sunday.] Dr. Neale in his Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 67, gives this from the Saintes Missæ of 1491, where it occurs in the Votive Mass for the Holy Trinity. Neale's text is repeated by Daniel, v. p. 207, and Kehren, No. 149. Du Maril, in his Poésies Populaires Lat. du Moyen Age, 1847, p. 305, prints it from a ms. in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 5132), of the beginning of the 13th cent. Tr. as:—

With hearts renewed, and cleansed from guilt of sin, By D. T. Morgan, in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875; and again in his Hym. and Other Poetry of the Latin Church, 1880. [J. M.]

Vox sonora nostri chori. Adam of St. Victor? [St. Catherine.] A graceful sequence relating the history of St. Catherine of Alexandria, to be used on her festival, Nov. 25. Gautier, in his 1858 ed. of Adam's Oeuvres Poétiques, vol. ii., p. 320, gives it among the genuine proses of Adam, but in his ed. 1881, p. 245, he ranks it as doubtful for rhythmical reasons, and so does not print the text, but cites it as in a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat., Paris, No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N. No. 15615), and other sources. Among Missæ it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 309), the Saintes 1491; the Sens 1529, and others. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 205; Daniel, v. p. 324; Kehren, No. 812; and D. S. Wragham's Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881. Tr. as:—

1. Let our choir with voice sonorous. By R. F. Littledale, in the Church Times, Nov. 19, 1864, in 12 st., and again in an altered form in the People's H., 1867, No. 304.

2. Loud and true our full-voic'd chorus. J. M. Neale, in the St. Margaret's Hym. (East Grinstead), 1875.

Other tr. are:—

1. Come, let our choir with full accord. D. T. Morgan, 1871 and 1880.

2. Let our chorus' voice sonorous. D. S. Wragham, 1881. [J. M.]

entitled, "True hearted Exhortation and Warning to the careless world that with genuine repentance she may prepare and secure herself against the near approaching Last Day." Founded on the Gospel for the 2nd S. in Advent (St. Luke xxi. 25-36), and is one of the finest of Rist's hymns. Repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1794, No. 14 (8 st.); and in Bunnen's Versuch, 1838, No. 493 (Allg. G. B., 1846, No. 426), omitting st. ii.-v. Tr. as:—

1. Awake, thou careless world, awake! The day shall, &c. By A. T. Russell, in 3 st. The tr. of st. i. appeared as No. 108 in the Dalton Hospital H. Bk., 1848; the trs. of st. vii., xiii., were added in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 39.

2. Awake, thou careless world, awake! The final day, &c. A good tr. of st. i., vii., xii., vi., ix., xi., xiii., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 4.

From this the trs. of st. vi., ix., xiii., altered and beginning, "The Lord in love delayeth long," were included as No. 113 in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1866. A cento in 5 st. of L.M. from the trs. of vii., ix., xiii., beginning, "Lo, He, on whom all power is laid," is in H. L. Hastings's Hymnal, 1866.

For her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 27, Miss Winkworth rewrote the tr. to the original metre, beginning "Awake, thou careless world, awake! That final Judgment day," omitting the trs. of st. vii., xi.

Other trs. are: (1) "The last of days will come indeed," by After Cox, 1841, p. 9, being st. i., vii., xii., vi. In her ed. 1864, p. 33, she added a second part, "Lift up, ye saints, your joyful heads," being st. ix., xi., xiii. (2) "Awake! awake! from careless ease," by Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 1. [J. M.]

Wackernagel, Carl Eduard Philipp, D.D., was b. at Berlin, June 28, 1800. He studied and graduated Ph. D. at the University of Berlin. In 1829 he became a master in the technical school (Gewerbeschule) at Berlin, and in 1839 master in a private school at Stetten in Württemberg. He was then (1845) appointed professor in the Realgymnasium at Wiesbaden, and in 1849 director of the Realschule at Elberfeld. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of Breslau in 1861, and in the same year retired to Dresden, where he d. June 20, 1877 (Herzog's Real Encyclopädie, xvi. 588; Dr. Ludwig Schulze's Philipp Wackernagel, Leipzig, 1879, &c.).

Wackernagel was an enthusiastic and successful teacher, and the author of various works on mathematics, on crystallography, on German literature, &c. His claim to notice here is through his editions of German hymn-writers (P. Gerhardt, 1843; M. Luther, 1848; J. Hermann, 1848); his work on Dutch Hymnody (Beiträge zur niederländischen Hymnologie, Frankfurt, 1867), but more especially through his works on German hymnody up to 1600. His Deutsche Kirchenlied first appeared at Stuttgart in 1841, and was supplemented by his Bibliographie zur Geschichte des deutschen Kirchenliedes im XVI. Jahrhundert, Frankfurt am Main, 1855, in which the original works were described. The permanent edition appeared in 5 vols., at Leipzig, 1864-77, as Das deutsche Kirchenlied von der ältesten Zeit bis zu Anfang des XVII. Jahrhunderts, the preface to the last volume being all that he did not live to complete. Volume I. contains 666 Latin hymns, and a Supplement to the Bibliographie of 1856; II. (1867) has 1448 pieces, which are (14 excepted) by German writers prior to the Reformation; III. (1870) has 1487 pieces of the Reformation period; IV. (1874) has 1587 pieces, all (3 excepted) by German writers from 1584 to 1864; and V. has 1606 pieces by German writers from 1679 to 1865. This work is a monument of care and research, and is indispensable to the student of early German hymnody. The present writer has gladly availed himself of it, and it is only in a very few cases that he has been able to supplement or correct its results.

Wackernagel had a share in editing the Elberfeld G. B. of 1857. He was also one of the original commission appointed to prepare the so-called Eisenach Conference G. B. (see Koch, vii. 112). It was meant to be a general hymn-book for use by the Lutherans over all Germany, but disagreeing with the critical canons of his colleagues, soon left. He afterwards pub. a small collection of standard German hymns, entitled Kleines Gesangbuch geistlicher Lieder für Kirche, Schule und Haus, Stuttgart, 1860, the greatest merit of which was the beauty of its type. [J. M.]

Wake the song, O Zion's daughter. [Palm Sunday.] This hymn appeared in E. W. Eddis's Irvingite Hymns for the Use of the Churches, in 1864, and is therein accredited to "J. E. L.," i.e. Jane E. Leeson. It is however a curious cento and is thus composed:—

St. i. Original, by Miss Leeson, based on Dr. Neale's tr. of "Gloria, Insa, at honor," in the Hymnal Noted.

St. ii. Composed of st. iv. v. of the same tr. by Dr. Neale, with two or three verbal alterations.

St. iii. ll. 1-4. Altered from a doxology in the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll., 1786, No. 294; ll. 5, 6 from Dr. Neale, as above; and ll. 7-8 added by Miss Leeson.

This cento is of more than usual excellence, and might be used with advantage. [J. J.]

Wakedale, John. [Staffordshire Hymn-books.]

Walker, George, F.R.S., b. 1735, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, educated by his uncle, Thomas Walker, dissenting minister at Durham, whom, after further study at Dr. Rotherham's academy at Kendal, and at Edinburgh and Glasgow, he succeeded in the pulpit there. From Durham Walker removed to Great Yarmouth, and thence in 1772 to the Warrington Academy. While there he pub. The Doctrine of the Sphere. This and his Treatise on Conic Sections are the chief of his mathematical works. From 1774 to 1798 he was minister at the High Pavement Chapel, Nottingham, and took a prominent part in the public life of the town. His sermons on political events of the time attracted widespread attention, as did his tract The Dissenters' Plea; or, an appeal of the Dissenters to the Justice, Honour, and Religion of the Kingdom against the Test Laws. This and other essays on religious and philosophical questions were republished after his death in two volumes of Essays on Various Subjects, with a Memoir, 1809. Four volumes of Sermons on Various Subjects were also published (1808), the first two volumes having first appeared in 1790, during his Nottingham ministry. In 1798 he removed to Manchester, as Professor of Theology in the recently founded Manchester Academy and also became president of the Philosophical and Literary Society. His health giving way he spent the last months of his life in the neighbourhood of Liverpool, and d. in 1807, while on a visit to London. He was buried in Bunhill-fields. For his Nottingham congregation Walker pub.

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Public Worship, unmix'd with the disputable doctrines of any sect. Warrington, Printed by W. Egges, for the Editor. 1788.

This is one of the chief of the collections made for congregations of Presbyterians in the period of their transition towards Uni-arianism. Of the 387 psalms and hymns 141 are taken from Watts, and of the rest the names of 24 authors are given, including T. Scott, Barbauld and Kippis. Walker himself, holding a "tempered Arianism," freely altered the hymns adopted, both for doctrinal reasons, and "to improve the style" of the compositions. He also contributed hymns of his own. Of these the best known are:—

1. Enough of life's vain scene I've trod.
 2. Though many faults do me reprove.
- Part of "How foolish to oppose to God."
3. The earth proclaims its Lord. [V. D. D.]

Walker, George, D.D., a of Arthur Walker, a farmer at Hillton of Pitbladdo, near Cupar, Fifeshire, was b. at Hillton, Jan. 6, 1783. He studied at the Universities of St. Andrews and Edinburgh; and after being licensed by the Presbytery of Cupar, in 1806, was appointed in 1813 parish minister of Kinnell, near Arbroath. In 1867 he received the degree of D.D. from the University of Edinburgh. He d. at Kinnell on Sept. 21, 1868. He was a scholarly and devout man, with great taste and modest and retiring manners. He pub. :—

(1) Hymns translated or imitated from the German: Lond. Partridge & Co., 1830. This contains 99 hymns from the German, with a fr. of the "Dies Irae," in all 99. Many are given in abridged form, and Dr. Walker did not bind himself to reproduce the metre, or even uniformly the ideas, of his originals. By the kindness of his representatives his ms. copy has been used to identify his tra., most of which are indexed throughout this Dictionary, though none are in G. U. (2) Prayers and Hymns: Edin., W. P. Nimmo, 1866. Besides 73 Prayers, &c., this contains 82 original hymns and 14 versions of the "Gloria Patri." A number of the prayers and 42 of the hymns had appeared in his Prayers and Hymns for the Mornings and Evenings of a Week, 1862. [J. M.]

Walker, John, B.D., s. of Matthias Walker, was b. at Silvermines, county Tipperary, in 1769, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He graduated in 1790, and was elected a Fellow on taking Holy Orders in 1791. Seceding from the Church of England he resigned his Fellowship in 1804, and founded the sect called "Walkerites." He d. Oct. 23, 1838. He was the author of several mathematical, classical, and other works. His Essays and Correspondence were pub. in 1838. Of two hymns written by him for the opening of the Bethesda Chapel, Dorset Street, Dublin, on June 22, 1794, and which appeared in the Sel. of Hys. for use there, 1814, one, "Thou God of Power and God of Love" (Opening of a Place of Worship), has passed into several collections, including the Irish Church Hyl., 1873; the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878, and others. [G. A. C.]

Walker, Mary Jane, nee Deck, daughter of Mr. John Deck, and sister of J. G. Deck (p. 235, n.), was married in 1848 to Dr. Walker, for sometime Rector of Cheltenham, and editor of Ps. & Hys. for Public and Social Worship, 1855. Several of her hymns appeared as leaflets; others in her husband's Ps. & Hys., 1855. In that Coll. 9 bear her signature "M. J. W." These are:—

1. He came, Whose embassy was peace. Passiontide.
2. I journey through a desert drear and wild. The Journey of Life.
3. Jesus, I will trust Thee, trust Thee with my soul. Trust in Jesus.
4. Lord, Thou didst love Jerusalem. Mission to the Jews.
5. O God, our Saviour, from Thy birth. Passiontide.

6. O joyful tidings let us sing. Sunday School Anniversary.
7. O spotless Lamb of God, in Thee. Passiontide.
8. The wanderer no mote will roam. Reconciliation with God.
9. We are not left to walk alone. The Holy Spirit as the Divine Guide.

Of these hymns Nos. 3 and 5 appeared in the 1864 Appendix to Dr. Walker's Coll., and Nos. 2 and 8 are the most popular. [J. J.]

Wallace, James Cowden, was b. at Dudley, circa 1793. He was brother of the Rev. Robert Wallace (1791-1880), Professor of Theology in Manchester New College, and author of Antitrinitarian Biography. J. C. Wallace was Unitarian minister at Totnes, 1824, and afterwards at Brighton and Wareham. He d. at Wareham in 1841. He was a prolific hymn-writer, and contributed various other poetical pieces to the Monthly Repository. In a Sel. of Hys. for Unitarian Worship, by B. Wallace, Chesterfield, 1822, there are 13 of his hymns, and in the 2nd ed. of the same, 1826, there are 29 more. There are also 10 of his hymns in the Dunkinfield Sel. of Ps. & Hys. for Christian Worship, 1822 (still in use), and 64 in Beard's Coll. of Hys., 1837. Of these hymns the following are still in C. U. :—

1. Is there no balm to soften grief? The Efficacy of Prayer (1837).
2. It is not rank, or power, or state. The Universality of the Gospel.
3. There's not a place in earth's vast round. God seen in Everything.
4. Through every clime God's care extends. Divine Care of All.
5. There is an eye that never sleeps. The Divine Helper in Need. [V. D. D.]

Wallin, Benjamin, s. of Edward Wallin, pastor of the Baptist Church, Maze Pond, Southwark, was b. in London in 1711. He received a good education under the care of the Rev. John Needham, of Hitchin (father of the hymn-writer of that name), and was for a time engaged in business. But in 1740 he responded to an earnest request to become pastor of the church over which his father had presided, and this position he retained until his death on Feb. 19, 1782. Mr. B. Wallin published nearly forty sermons and charges, and other small religious books and pamphlets. In 1750 he pub. a volume entitled, Spiritual Hymns and Songs, in Two Parts: Published for the Comfort and Entertainment of true Christians; with authorities at large from the Scriptures. The hymns in this vol. are 100 in number, and the texts of scripture illustrated in each stanza are quoted in full in the lower part of the page. The versification is homely and the rhymes are often faulty.

Two hymns from the work are in C. U. :—

1. Hail, mighty Jesus (Saviour) how divine. Divine Grace.
2. When I the holy grave survey. Easter.

These, with others, appeared in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776. They are usually given with alterations, chiefly introduced by Toplady. [W. R. S.]

Walther, Johann, was b. in 1496 at a village near Cola (perhaps Kahl), or also Cölleda, near Sachsenburg) in Thuringia. In 1524 we find him at Torgau, as bassist at the court of Friedrich the Wise, Elector of Saxony. The Elector Johann of Saxony made him "Sengermeister" (choirmaster) in 1526. When the Electoral orchestra (Kapelle) at Torgau was disbanded in 1530, it was reconstituted by the town, and in 1534 Walther was also appointed cantor (singing-master) to the school at Torgau. On the accession of the Elector Moritz of Saxony, in 1548, Walther went with him to Dresden as his Kapellmeister. He was pensioned by decree of Aug. 7, 1554, and soon after returned to Torgau, still retaining the title of "Sengermeister." He d. at Torgau, perhaps on March 25, or at least before April 24, 1570. (Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, 1871, p. 8, and 1878, p. 85; Archiv für Litteraturgeschichte, vol. xii., 1884, p. 185; Dr. Otto Taubert's Pflege der Musik in Torgau, 1868, and his Gymnasial Sing-Chor zu Torgau, n.d., 1870, &c.)

Walther was more distinguished as a musician than as a hymn-writer. In 1524 he spent three weeks in Luther's house at Wittenberg, helping to adapt the old church music to the Lutheran services, and harmonising the tunes in five parts for the Geistliche Gesänge Buchleyn, pub. at Wittenberg in 1524 (p. 703, ll.). He was also present in the Stadtkirche at Wittenberg, when, on Oct. 29, 1525, the service for the Holy Communion, as rearranged by Luther and himself, was first used in German. His hymns appeared mostly in his Das christlich Kinderlied D. Martin Luthers, Erhalt uns Herr, &c. Auf's neu in sechs Stimmen gesetzt, und mit etlichen schönen Christlichen Texten, Lateinischen und Teutschen Gesängen gemehrt, &c., Wittenberg, 1566 (preface dated Torgau, St. Michael's Day, 1564). They are collected by Wackernagel in his D. Kirchenlied, lii. pp. 187-206 (Nos. 219-229).

Those of Walther's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Herzlich Lieb hab ich dich, mein Gott, Trinity Sunday. 1st pub. in 1565 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 204, in 4 st. of 8 l. in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 190. Tr. as:—

O God, my Rock! my heart on Thee. This is a good tr. of st. i., iii., iv., by A. T. Russell, as No. 133 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

ii. Herzlich thut mich erfreuen, Eternal Life. 1st pub. separately, in 33 st., at Wittenberg, in 1552, entitled "A beautiful spiritual and Christian new miner's song, of the Last Day and Eternal Life" [Königsberg Library]. Thence to Wackernagel, iii. p. 187, in 34 st., st. 33 being added from the Dresden reprint of 1557. It is set to the melody of a popular song on the Joys of Summer. It is a fresh and beautiful hymn, but is only partially available on account of its length. Wackernagel, in his Kleines G. B., 1860, selects 21 st. as No. 219. The most popular form is that in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1530, beginning "Der Bräutigam wird bald rufen." This form has in order st. 31, 8, 9, 16, 18, 17, 13, and appeared in Melchior Franck's Rosarium musicum, 1628; in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1705, No. 749, &c. Tr. as:—

1. Now fair my joyous heart would sing. This is a tr. of st. 1, 4, 5, 17, 33, 34, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 223. Her trs. of st. 1, 4, 5, were included in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, No. 325.

3. Soon will the heavenly Bridegroom come. This is by Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymns Christ., 1803, No. 1009, and follows the text of the G. L. S., omitting st. 16, 18, 13. It is repeated in the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, &c.

a. The Bridegroom soon will call us. By Dr. M. Loy, from the G. L. S. text, but omitting st. 18, 13, as No. 24 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. from the G. L. S. text, is "Soon shall that voice resound," by Miss Fry in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 36. Her second part, altered and beginning, "Rejoice, the Lord doth guide us," is in J. Whittemore's Suppl. to all H. Bks., 1860. [J. M.]

Wer Gott nicht mit uns diese Zeit. M. Luther. [Ps. cxvii.] This version of Ps. cxvii. was 1st pub. in the Geistliche Gesänge Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524, in 3 st. of 7 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 17. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 79, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 250, &c.

Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 115, relates that the Elector Johann Friedrich of Saxony, having been comforted by the Superintendent Aquila with this hymn during his captivity after the battle of Mühlberg, 1547, on his release on May 12, 1552, sang the whole of it with grateful heart, as a thankoffering to God.

The tr. in C. U. is:—

Had God not come, may Israel say. In full by R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 35. Repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon, in his Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 49.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "If God were not upon our side." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 98. (2) "Had not the Lord been with us then." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 34. (3) "Had not the Lord been on our side." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1863, p. 62. (4) "Had God not been with us this time." By Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 460. In his Exotics, 1875, p. 68, it begins "Were God not with us all the time," and is otherwise altered. [J. M.]

Wardlaw, Ralph, D.D. This venerable and (in his generation) influential Scottish divine contributed twelve hymns to the praise of the Church Universal that are likely to live in a humble and useful way. As having so done, and besides edited several collections of hymns, he claims a place of honour in this work. Critically, and regarded as literature, his hymns have little of poetry in them; no "winged words" to lift the soul heavenward. They reflect simply and plainly the lights and shadows of every-day experiences of the spiritual life, rather than its etherialities and subtleties. His "Lift up to God the voice of praise" is the most widely known; and there is a certain inspiring clangour about it when well sung; yet it is commonplace. His "Hail morning, known among the blest" is narrative and prosaic, though it filled a gap at the time in Sabbath morning worship. "At the time by God appointed," "Remember Thee! remember Christ!" and "Contemplate, saints, the source divine," have vanishing gleams of imaginative light and fine and tender emotion. "O how good the hallowed union," "Where the sounds of plaintive wailing," and "See the Sun of truth arise," are melodious and singable, and pleasant but shallow. "Christ of all my hopes the ground," (Pt. ii.), "When with wasting sickness worn," is much too long, but is a fairly good song of Zion. Wardlaw pub. in 1803 a Selection of Hymns, to displace what was called The Tabernacle Coll., 1800, that had been used by the Congregationalists of Scotland [see Scottish Hymnody], and to which he contributed a few hymns. He was assisted in the preparation of this compilation by Dr. Charles Stuart, of Dunearn. The 1st ed. contained 322 hymns. In 1817 a Supplement was added of 171, bringing up the number to 493. Of these eleven (or twelve strictly) were by Wardlaw. Two of these had previously appeared in the Scottish Missionary Magazine (vol. viii. 48). His hymns bear so very slight a proportion to Dr. Wardlaw's writings as a profound theologian and expositor and thoroughly-equipped controversialist on the chief problems of the period, as to make it necessary to refer the reader to his remarkable Life, by the Rev. Dr. W. L. Alexander, entitled, Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Ralph Wardlaw, D.D. (2nd ed., 1856). Wardlaw was b. at Dalkeith on December 22, 1779, where he received his early education, later attending Glasgow University. His only church was in Glasgow. He d. at Easterhouse near Glasgow on Dec. 17, 1853, and his public funeral is still remembered for the representative character of the vast multitude who attended it. [A. B. G.]

Of Dr. Wardlaw's hymns the following are still in C. U.:—

1. Glad when they saw the Lord. Easter.
2. Hail, morning known amongst the blest [saints]. Sunday Morning.
3. Lift up to God the voice of praise. Praise to the Father.
4. O Lord our God, arise. Missions.
5. Remember Thee, remember Christ. H. Communion.
6. See the Sun of Truth arise. Christ the Light.

Of these Nos. 3-5 appeared in the Tabernacle Coll. (noted above), 1800. [J. J.]

Ware, Henry, D.D., s. of Dr. H. Ware, pastor of the Unitarian congregation at Hingham, Massachusetts, and afterward Hollis Professor of Divinity at Cambridge, U.S.A., was b. at Hingham, April 21, 1794. Before going to Harvard College, in 1808, he was under the care of Dr. Allyn, at Duxbury, and then of Judge Ware, at Cambridge. He graduated at Harvard in high honours, in 1812; and was then for two years an assistant teacher in Exeter Academy. He was licensed to preach by the Boston Unitarian Association, July 31, 1815; and ordained pastor of the Second Church of that city, Jan. 1, 1817. In 1829, in consequence of his ill health, he received the assistance of a co-pastor in the person of Ralph Waldo Emerson. In the same year Ware was appointed Professor of Pulpit Eloquence and Pastoral Care in the Cambridge Theological School. He entered upon his duties in 1830, and resigned in 1842. He removed to Framingham, and d. there, Sept. 25, 1843. His D.D. degree was conferred upon him by Harvard College in 1834. Dr. Ware's publications as set forth in his Memoir, pub. by his brother John Ware, M.D., were numerous and on a variety of topics. He edited the Christian Disciple, which was established in 1813, and altered in title to the Christian Examiner in 1824, for some years before the change of title, and gave it his assistance subsequently. The Rev. Chandler Robbins collected his works and pub. them in four volumes, in 1847. His hymns, many of which are of more than usual excellence, are given in vol. i. Of these the following are in C. U.:

1. All nature's works His praise declare. Opening of an Organ. Dated Nov. 3, 1822. It is in Harvard's English Cong. Hymns, 1884.
2. Around the throne of God The host angels throng. Cantorial Præce. Dated 1823, and printed in the Christian Disciple, vol. v., and in Putnam, 1874. A fine hymn of praise.
3. Walker of earth and heaven, Whose arm upholds creation. Thanksgiving for Divine Mercies. Appeared in Cheever's American Common Place Book, 1831; and in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
4. Father, Thy gentle chastisement. In Schweizer. Dated March, 1836; and in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868.
5. Great God, the Saviour of Thy Son. Ordina- tion. Written for the Ordination of Jared Sparks, the historian, as pastor of the Unitarian Church, Baltimore, 1813. Given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874.

6. In this glad hour when children meet. Family Gatherings. Dated Aug. 26, 1835. In Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874.

7. Lift your glad voices in triumph high. Easter. Dated 1817, and was pub. in the Christian Disciple of that year; in 2 st. of 8 l. It is in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868; Putnam, 1874, and numerous hymn-books. Sometimes st. ii. is given separately as, "Glory to God, in full anthems of joy."

8. Like Israel's hosts to exile driven. American National Hymn. Written for the Centennial Celebration of the Boston Thursday Lecture, Oct. 17, 1833, and given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874. It is a great American National Hymn in praise of the Pilgrim Fathers.

9. O Thou in Whom alone is found. Laying Abandonment Stone of a Place of Worship. In Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Thring's English Coll., 1862.

10. O Thou Who on Thy chosen Son. Ordination. Written for an Ordination, March, 1829. In Putnam, 1874, and Dale's English H. Bk., 1874.

11. Oppression shall not always reign. Against Slavery. "This was Mr. Ware's last composition in verse. It bears date March 16, 1843. In its original form it is longer than as presented here (in 3 st. of 8 l.), and is unsuited to a church-book. The following stanzas, taken from one of the Collections [at l. ii. are in Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hymns, 1848] are a part of the original, altered and transposed, and thus adapted to sacred worship." (Putnam, 1874, p. 113.)

12. To prayer, to prayer; for the morning breaks. Prayer. This poem of 10 st. of 6 l. is dated 1826, and is given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, and Putnam, 1874. Two cantos therefrom are in C. U. The first begins with st. 1., adapting it for Morning, and the second with st. 11., "To prayer, for the glorious sun is gone," for Evening.

13. We rear not a temple, like Judah of old. Dedication of a Place of Worship. This is dated 1836, and is given in Putnam, 1874.

14. With praise and prayer our gifts we bring. Opening of a Place of Worship. In Dale's English Hymn Bk. 1874.

With American Unitarians Dr. Ware ranks very high, and by them his hymns are widely used. [F. M. B.]

Waring, Anna Lætitia, daughter of Elijah Waring, and niece of Samuel Miller Waring, was b. at Neath, Glamorganshire, in 1820. In 1850 she pub. her Hymns and Meditations, by A. L. W., a small book of 19 hymns. The 4th ed. was pub. in 1854. The 10th ed., 1863, is enlarged to 38 hymns. She also pub. Additional Hymns, 1858, and contributed some pieces to the Sunday Magazine, 1871. Her most widely known hymns are: "Father, I know that all my life," p. 367, il.; "Go not far from me, O my Strength," p. 436, il.; and "My heart is resting, O my God," p. 781, l. The rest in C. U. include:—

1. Dear Saviour of a dying world. Resurrection. (1854.)
2. In heavenly love abiding. Safety in God. (1850.)
3. Jesus, Lord of heaven above. Love to Jesus desired. (1864.)
4. Lord, a happy child of Thine. Evening. (1850.)
5. My Saviour, on the [Thy] words of truth. Hope is the Word of God. (1850.) Sometimes st. iv., "It is not as Thou wilt with me," is given separately.
6. O this is blessing, this is rest. Rest in the Love of Jesus. (1854.)
7. O Thou Lord of heaven above. The Resurrection.
8. Source of my life's refreshing springs. Rest in God. (1850.)
9. Sunlight of the heavenly day. New Year (1854.)
10. Sweet is the solace of Thy love. Safety and Comfort in God. (1850.)
11. Tender mercies on my way. Praise of Divine Mercies. (1850.)
12. Thanksgiving and the voice of melody. New Year (1854.)
13. Though some good things of lower worth. Love of God in Christ. (1850.)

These hymns are marked by great simplicity, concentration of thought, and elegance of diction. They are popular, and deserve to be so.

Waring, Samuel Miller, s. of Jeremiah Waring, of Alton, Hampshire, and uncle of Anna L. Waring, was b. at Alton, in March, 1792, and d. at Bath, Sept. 19, 1827. His hymns appeared in his Sacred Melodies, 1826; and from that work the following, which are in C. U., were taken:—

1. Now to Him Who loved us, gave us. Praise to Jesus. Sometimes, "Unto Him Who loved us."
2. Plead Thou, O plead my cause. Jesus, the Advocate Implored.

[G. A. C.]

Warner, Anna, daughter of Henry W. Warner, and sister of Sarah Warner, author of Queechy, and other novels, was b. near New York city about 1822. She is the author of the novel, Say and Seal, 1859, and others of a like kind. She also edited Hyssop of the Church Militant, 1858; and pub. Wayfaring Hymns, Original and Translated, 1869. Her original hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Jesus loves me, this I know. The love of Jesus. In Say and Seal. 1859.
2. O little child, lie still and sleep. A Mother's Evening Hymn. In Temple Choir. 1867.
3. One more day's work for Jesus. Evening. From Wayfaring Hymns. 1869.
4. The world looks very beautiful. A Child Pilgrim. circa 1860.

For her translations see Index of Authors and Translators.

Warren, William Fairfield, D.D., was b. at Williamsburg, Massachusetts, in 1833, and graduated at the Wesleyan University in 1853. After spending some time in Germany, he was appointed Professor of Systematic Theology in the Methodist Episcopal Mission Institute at Bremen, in 1861. Returning to America in 1866, he held some important appointments there, ultimately becoming President of Boston University, in 1873. His hymn, "I worship Thee, O Holy Ghost" (Whitauitido), was contributed to the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, at the request of the editorial committee, in 1877, and was pub. therein in 1878 (Nutter's Hymn Studies, 1884, p. 111). It has passed into other collections. [J. J.]

Warum betrübt du dich, mein Herz. [Cross and Consolation.] Wackernagel, iv. pp. 128-130, gives three forms of the text of this anonymous hymn: No. 190 as the first of Zwey schöne neue geistliche Lieder, Nürnberg, N. D., c. 1560; No. 191, from an Enchiridion printed at Hamburg, 1565; No. 192, from the Psalmen und Leder, Lübeck, 1567. In his Bibliographie, 1855, p. 279, he had cited it as in Neun schöne geistliche Lieder, Nürnberg, N. D., which he then dated 1556—probably too early. According to Koch, v., 653, it had already appeared as "Czemu sie troszczyś," in a Polish hymn-book ed. by Pastor Sekluoyan, and pub. at Königsberg in 1530.

This hymn has often been ascribed to Hans Sachs. So Ambrosius Harnemann in his Prodromus Hymnologiae, Wittenberg, 1633, Second 10, No. 8, entitles it "Consolation against Tearfulness. Hans Sachs"; and in Jeremias Webers G. B., Leipzig, 1633, p. 578, it is entitled, "On Famine. A good family hymn. Written for the use of heads of households and their families, by Hans Sachs, of Nürnberg, the well-known German poet." The hymn has not however been traced in any of the works of Sachs, and the ascription to him seems to be without foundation.

In the 1560 Zwey schöne the hymn has 12 st.; in the 1565 Enchiridion there are 14 (Nos. viii., ix. not in 1560). The 1565 is the usual text as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 701; but st. v.-ix., in which the Old Testament examples of Elijah, Daniel, Joseph, and the Three Holy Children are cited, are omitted in some collections. It is one of the best German hymns of Cross and Consolation, and is in almost universal German use. Tr. as:—

Why art thou thus cast down, my heart? By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. v.-ix., in her Lyrical Ger., 2d Ser., 1858, p. 187, and repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 143.

Other trs. are:

(1) "Why thus with grief oppress my heart," by J. C. Jacobi, 1728, p. 14 (1752, p. 66), repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. 1, Nos. 141, 317. (2) "Rejoice, my soul, God cares for thee," by P. H. Mother, as No. 183, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1769 (1860, No. 221). (3) "Why vex thyself with anxious fears," by Dr. G. H. Hillis, 1945, p. 69. (4) "Oh! why art thou so sad, my breast," by Madame de Fontes, in her Poets and Poetry of Germany, 1858, vol. 1, p. 376. (5) "My soul, why art thou troubled? why," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 88. (6) "Why dost thou vex thyself, my heart," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 200. (7) "Why dost thou make lament, my heart," by the Rev. Andrew Carter, in the Quiter, 1881. [J. M.]

Warum sollt ich mich denn grämen. P. Gerhardt. [Cross and Consolation.] Founded on Ps. lxxiii. 29. Appeared in the Crüger-Rungo G. B., 1653, No. 240, in 12 st. of 8 l. Thence in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 64, and Bachmann's ed., No. 29. In Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 320, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 784. It is a beautiful hymn, but, like many of Gerhardt's, difficult to translate. It comforted the Salzburg emigrants on their way through Swabia in 1732; it soothed the dying bed of Friedrich Wilhelm I. of Prussia, May 31, 1740; and st. viii. was the last utterance of its author on June 7, 1676. See further, Koch, viii., 471-479. Tr. as:—

1. Why, my soul, thus trampling ever. A good tr. of st. i., iv., vii., viii., xi., xii., as No. 293 in the Anglican H. Bk., 1868, marked as tr. by the Rev. Angelo A. Benson, 1862.

2. Why should sorrow ever grieve me. In full by J. Kelly, in his P. Gerhardt's Spir. Songs, 1867, p. 214. His tr. of st. i., v., x.-xii., are repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880, No. 420.

Other trs. are: (1) "Why should I continue grieving," in the Suppl. to German Psalmsody, ed. 1785, p. 58. Previously in the Select Hymns from German Psalmsody, Tranquebar, 1754, p. 91, and as No. 473 in pt. 1 of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Suppl. of 1806 to the Moravian H. Bk., of 1801, at vii., x., are repeated altered, and beginning, "With undaunted resolution." (2) "Wherefore should I grieve and pine," by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 198. (3) "Wherefore, then, should I be gloomy," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 144. [J. M.]

Was Gott thut das ist wohlgethan, So denken Gottes Kinder. B. Schmolck. [Harvest.] 1st pub. in his Freuden-Oel in Traurigkeit, Breslau, 1720, No. 93, p. 98, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "The contented heart in a scanty Harvest." In his Klage und Reigen, Breslau, N. D. [1734], No. 77, p. 96, he gave it in 9 st. (st. iv., v., ix., being new), and entitled it "The contented heart in a scanty harvest, 1731." The text of 1734 is No. 1203 in the Berlin G. J. S., ed. 1863. The German has undergone various recensions, and so e.g. Miss Cox follows that in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833; Miss Warner that in the Berlin G. B., 1829. The text followed in H. A. & M. and the Hymnary is that in Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867, which is based on st. i, iii, vii, viii. of the 1734. Tr. as:—

1. What our Father does is well. A free tr. from Biggs's text, by Sir H. W. Baker, as No. 227 in H. A. & M., 1861, with an original doxology. This has been repeated in the Irish Church Hym., 1873, in Porter's Coll., 1876, the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871, Bapt. Hym., 1879, &c.; and in America in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, Presb. Hym., 1874, &c.

2. What God does is done aright. By Mrs. H. M. Chester, as No. 471 in the Hymnary, 1872, from the text of Biggs, with an original doxology. Repeated in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883.

Other trs. are: (1) "Whatever God does is well," by Miss Warner, 1858, p. 258, repeated in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1886. (2) "What God hath done is done aright," by Miss Cox, 1864, p. 126. [J. M.]

Washburn, Edward Abiel, D.D., was b. April 16, 1819; graduated at Harvard, 1838; studied theology at Andover and New Haven, and entered the Congregational ministry. In 1841, having been ordained in the Protestant Episcopal Church, he became Rector of St. Paul's, Newburyport, Meas., where he remained till 1851. Spending 1851-52 in Europe, on his return he became Rector of St. John's, Hartford, 1853-62, and Professor of Church Polity in Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Connecticut; also Rector of St. Mark's, Philadelphia, 1862-65; and Calvary, New York, 1865-81. He d. Feb. 2, 1881. His works include Social Law of God, 1874, and trs. of Latin hymns. A selection from his poems was published in New York in 1881. Some of his trs. are given in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and other collections. For these trs. see Index of Authors and Translators. [F. M. B.]

Washburn, Henry S., was b. at Providence, Rhode Island, June 10, 1813; spent his boyhood at Kingston, Massachusetts, and was educated at Worcester and Brown University. Subsequently he was a manufacturer at Worcester and Boston. Since 1875 he has been the President of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Co. Mr. Washburn has held some prominent posts, and has been active in public matters. He has written various hymns and songs, the best known of which is:—

Let every heart rejoice and sing. National Hymn. This "was written for a celebration in Faneuil Hall, Boston, July 4, 1842, and sung by the Sunday School Children of the city." It was set to music by Garcia, and often subsequently used at home and abroad. The author altered it for The Psalmist, 1843, No. 1066; and in that form it has been generally known. [F. M. B.]

Waterbury, Jared Bell, D.D., was b. in New York city, Aug. 11, 1799, and graduated at Yale College, 1822. He was for some time pastor of a Congregational church at Hudson, N. York, and then of Bowdoin Street Congregational church, Boston. He d. at Brooklyn, Dec. 31, 1876. He pub. Advice to a Young

Christian; The Officer on Duty, and other works. To the Rev. J. Leavitt's Christian Lyre, vol. i., 1830, he contributed the following hymns, each of which was headed, "Written for the Lyre," and signed "J. B. W." :—

1. My Jesus, Thou hast taught. The Love of Jesus.
2. Met, O God, to ask Thy presence. Repentance.
3. O fly, mourning sinner, with Jesus to me. Promise of Pardon.
4. See Sodom wrap in fire. Warning.
5. Sinner, is thy heart at rest? The Voice of Conscience.
6. Soldiers of the Cross, arise! Lo! your Leader from the skies. Soldiers of the Cross.
7. When, O my Saviour, shall this heart? Desiring Jesus.

In vol. ii. of the same work, 1830, also:—

8. I have fought the good fight; I have finished my race. Martyr's Death Song.

Another of his hymns is given in the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, as:—

9. Infinite love, what precious stores. Nichel of Divine Grace. Sometimes dated 1862.

Of these hymns, Nos. 5, 6, and 9 are the best known. [F. M. B.]

Waterston, Robert Cassie, M.A., s. of Robert Waterston, was b. at Kennebunk, in 1812, but has resided from his infancy at Boston, Massachusetts. He studied Theology at Cambridge; had for five years the charge of a Sunday school for the children of seamen; was associated for several years with the Pitts Street Unitarian Chapel, Boston; and then pastor for seven years of the Unitarian Church of the Saviour in the same city. Much of his time has been given to literature, and a long list of his papers of various kinds is given in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1874. He also interested himself largely in educational matters. He contributed one hymn to the American Unitarian Cheshire Pastoral Association Christian Hymns, 1844; 8 in his own popular Supplement to Greenwood's Psalms and Hymns, 1845, and others to various works. Putnam gives 20 poetical pieces in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, amongst which are the following, which are in C. U. at the present time:—

1. In darkest hours I hear a voice. Looking unto Jesus. Contributed to Putnam's Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, and found in a few collections.
2. In each breeze that wanders free. Nature and the Soul. Pub. before 1863, and again in Putnam, 1874. The hymn "Nature, with eternal youth," in Hedge and Huntington's Hym. for the Ch. of Christ, 1868, No. 185, is composed of st. iv-vii. of this piece.
3. One sweet (bright) flower has drooped and faded. Death of a Child. Appeared in the American Unitarian Cheshire Pas. Association Christian Hym. 1844, No. 668, and again in Putnam, 1874, as "One bright flower, &c." It is in several collections. In the Christian Hym. the heading is "Death of a Pupil;" and Putnam, "On the Death of a Child. Sung by her classmates."

In Putnam there are other pieces by him which are worthy of attention. [F. M. B.]

Watson, George, s. of F. Watson, b. at Birmingham, 1816, and until the year 1866 was in business in London as a printer. From his office and with his co-operation originated the well-known publications, the Band of Hope Review, in 1851; and The British Workman, 1855, which were the pioneers of cheap illustrated publications. Mr. Watson's hymn-writing has been limited. Two (see below) appeared in Paxton Hood's Our Hymn Book, 4 & 2

1868; the rest have been issued as fly-leaves, or are still in MS. Those in C. U. are:—

1. O the deep mystery of that love. The Love of Jesus. 1st pub. in P. Hood's Our H. Bk. 1868, No. 739, in 4 st. of 4 l.

2. With the sweet word of peace. Parting. Written in 1867 to be sung at a meeting held in Brighton to say Farewell to the Rev. Paxton Hood on his leaving his church for a considerable time for change and rest. On his return Mr. Hood included it in his Our H. Bk. 1868, No. 872, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was given with considerable alterations in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymn. 1871. This text was repeated in the Scottish Evangelical Union Hymnal, 1878, and is the neatly accepted form of the hymn. It has much tenderness and beauty, and is worthy of wide circulation. [J. J.]

Watts, Alaric Alexander, was born in London, Mar. 19, 1797, and educated at the collegiate school of Wye, Kent. After a short engagement as a private tutor, he devoted himself to literary pursuits. He was for some time editor of the Leeds Intelligencer, and then of the Manchester Courier. Subsequently returning to London, he edited 10 vols. of The Literary Souvenir, and 3 vols. of The Cabinet of Modern Art. He was also engaged for some time as editor of the United Service Gazette, and contributed to the Standard, and other newspapers. In 1853 he received a royal pension of £100 a year, and an appointment in Somerset House. He d. at Kensington, April 5, 1864. His hymns appeared in his Poetical Sketches, 1822. 3rd ed. 1824. Of these, "When shall we meet again," is found in a few collections. [J. J.]

Watts, Isaac, D.D. The father of Dr. Watts was a respected Nonconformist, and at the birth of the child, and during its infancy, twice suffered imprisonment for his religious convictions. In his later years he kept a flourishing boarding school at Southampton. Isaac, the eldest of his nine children, was b. in that town July 17, 1674. His taste for verse showed itself in early childhood. He was taught Greek, Latin, and Hebrew by Mr. Pinhorn, rector of All Saints, and headmaster of the Grammar School, in Southampton. The splendid promise of the boy induced a physician of the town and other friends to offer him an education at one of the Universities for eventual ordination in the Church of England; but this he refused; and entered a Nonconformist Academy at Stoke Newington in 1690, under the care of Mr. Thomas Rowe, the pastor of the Independent congregation at Girdlers' Hall. Of this congregation he became a member in 1693. Leaving the Academy at the age of twenty, he spent two years at home; and it was then that the bulk of the Hymns and Spiritual Songs (pub. 1707-9) were written, and sung from MS. in the Southampton Chapel. The hymn "Behold the glories of the Lamb" is said to have been the first he composed, and written as an attempt to raise the standard of praise. In answer to requests, others succeeded. The hymn "There is a land of pure delight" is said to have been suggested by the view across Southampton Water. The next six years of Watts's life were again spent at Stoke Newington, in the post of tutor to the son of an eminent Puritan, Sir John Hartopp; and to the intense study of these years must be traced the accumulation of the theological and philosophical materials which he published subsequently, and also the life-long enfeeblement of his constitution.

Watts preached his first sermon when he was twenty-four years old. In the next three years he preached frequently; and in 1708 was ordained pastor of the eminent Independent congregation in Mark Lane, over which Caryl and Dr. John Owen had presided, and which numbered Mrs. Bendish, Cromwell's granddaughter, Charles Fleetwood, Charles Desborough, Sir John Hartopp, Lady Haversham, and other distinguished Independents among its members. In this year he removed to the house of Mr. Hollis in the Minories. His health began to fail in the following year, and Mr. Samuel Price was appointed as his assistant in the ministry. In 1712 a fever shattered his constitution, and Mr. Price was then appointed co-pastor of the congregation which had in the meantime removed to a new chapel in Bury Street. It was at this period that he became the guest of Sir Thomas Abney, under whose roof, and after his death (1722) that of his widow, he remained for the rest of his suffering life; residing for the longer portion of these thirty-six years principally at the beautiful country seat of Theobalds in Herts, and for the last thirteen years at Stoke Newington. His degree of D.D. was bestowed on him in 1728, unsolicited, by the University of Edinburgh. His infirmities increased on him up to the peaceful close of his sufferings, Nov. 25, 1748. He was buried in the Puritan resting-place at Bunhill Fields, but a monument was erected to him in Westminster Abbey. His learning and piety, gentleness and largeness of heart have earned him the title of the Melancthon of his day. Among his friends, churchmen like Bishop Gibson are ranked with Nonconformists such as Doddridge. His theological as well as philosophical fame was considerable. His Speculations on the Human Nature of the Logos, as a contribution to the great controversy on the Holy Trinity, brought on him a charge of Arian opinions. His work on The Improvement of the Mind, pub. in 1741, is eulogised by Johnson. His Logic was still a valued text-book at Oxford within living memory. The World to Come, pub. in 1745, was once a favourite devotional work, parts of it being translated into several languages. His Catechisms, Scripture History (1732), as well as The Divine and Moral Songs (1715), were the most popular text-books for religious education fifty years ago. The Hymns and Spiritual Songs were pub. in 1707-9, though written earlier. The Horae Lyricae, which contains hymns interspersed among the poems, appeared in 1706-9. Some hymns were also appended at the close of the several Sermons preached in London, pub. in 1721-24. The Psalms were pub. in 1718. The earliest life of Watts is that by his friend Dr. Gibbons. Johnson has included him in his Lives of the Poets; and Southey has echoed Johnson's warm eulogy. The most interesting modern life is Isaac Watts: His Life and Writings, by E. Paxton Hood. (For criticism of his work as a hymn-writer, see Hymnody, Early English, § xi., and Psalters, English, § xv.) [H. L. B.]

A large mass of Dr. Watts's hymns and paraphrases of the Psalms have no personal history beyond the date of their publication. These we have grouped together here and shall preface the list with the books from which they are taken.

(1) Horae Lyricae. Poems chiefly of the Lyric kind, in Three Books Sacred; i. To Devotion and Piety; ii. To Virtue, Honour, and Friendship; iii. To the Memory of the Dead. By I. Watts, 1706. Second edition, 1709.

These 454 Hymns and Versions of the Psalms, in addition to the centos which are indicated by the sublines, are all in C. U. at the present time. The more important and best known of Dr. Watts's Hymns and versions of the Psalms have separate annotations under their respective first lines. [See Index of Authors and Translators.] [J. J.]

Wagh, Benjamin, was b. at Settle, in Yorkshire, Feb. 20, 1839, and educated for the Congregational Ministry at Airedale College, Bradford. He has held pastorates at Newbury, Berkshire, Greenwich, and New Southgate. He has been for several years editor of The Sunday Magazine, and a large contributor to its pages. He has pub. (1) The Goat Cradle, Who rocks it; (2) Sunday Evenings with my Children; (3) The Children's Sunday Hour; (4) The Child of the English Savages; (5) Imperial Legislation and Street Children. Mr. Wagh's hymns have appeared from time to time in The Sunday Magazine, and have not been separately published. Those which have come into C. U. include:—

1. Jesus, the Friend of friendless men. Jesus the Stranger's Friend, 1874.
2. O happy pair of Nazareth. The Child Jesus.
3. O let me see Thy beauty, Lord. The Beauty of the Lord. This is given in a revised form as "Now let us see Thy beauty, Lord," in Border's Cong. Hymns, 1884.

Mr. Wagh's hymns are for children's use, and are exceedingly fresh and unconventional. Several others of merit might be selected from the Sunday Magazine with advantage to children's hymnody. [W. G. H.]

We all had sinned and gone astray. G. Thring. [The Good Shepherd.] This was the author's first hymn, and was written to the tune "Cambridge New," at his mother's request, in 1831. It was pub. in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hym., 1864; and in his own Hym. Cong. and Others, 1866, p. 11, in 4 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "The Love of Christ." Also given in his Hym. & Sac. Lyrics, 1874, p. 86, and in his Coll., 1882. [J. J.]

We all, O Lord, have gone astray. [The Shepherd and His wandering Sheep.] This is based upon J. Merrick's version of the last part (Tau) of Ps. cxix, pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1765. It was given in Cotterill's Set., 1819, p. 64, and has been repeated in a few collections in G. Britain and America. It was arranged from Merrick by Cotterill. [J. J.]

We are but little children poor [weak]. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Holy Baptism.] Pub. in Dr. Hook's Leeds Church S. S. H. Bk., 1850, in 9 st. of 4 l. It is in use, sometimes abbreviated, in its original form; as "We are but little children weak," in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and numerous other collections; and as, "O Lord, the Holy Innocents" (st. ii.), in the American Protestant Episcopal Hymnal, 1871. In these various forms it is in extensive use. [J. J.]

We bid Thee welcome in the Name. J. Montgomery. [Induction of a Minister.] This hymn is in the x. mss., but is undated. It was pub. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 535, and again in his Original Hymns, 1858, No. 805, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "On the Appointment of a Minister."

It is found in many collections, but usually in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

We bow before Thy gracious Throne. This, in the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1858, No. 518, is a cento from two hymns by C. Wesley, st. I, iv. being from "Thou Son of God, Whose flaming eye"; and st. ii., iii. from "Come, O Thou all-victorious Lord (p. 248, ii.), as in the Wes. H. Bk. 1780. [J. J.]

We come, Lord, to Thy feet. [Opening of Sunday School.] This hymn, together with the companion hymn for the Closing of a Sunday School, "O Lord, our hearts would give Thee praise," appeared on a card printed for Sunday-school use by Dp. Pelham, when Incumbent of Christ Church, Hampstead. Both hymns were adapted by him from another and now unknown source. The Rev. E. H. Bickersteth included both hymns, with slight alterations, in his Ps. & Hys., &c., 1858, from thence they have passed into several collections. W. F. Stevenson attributes the former in his Hys. for Church and Home, 1878, to Lady Lucy Whitmore, 1824, but we have failed to find it in her Family Prayers, &c., 1824 (see p. 1085, ii.), and know of no authority for the ascription. [J. J.]

We give Thee but Thine own. Ep. W. W. How. [Offertory.] Written about 1858, and 1st pub. in the enlarged ed. of Morrell & How's Psalms & Hymns, 1864, No. 197, in 6 st. of 4 l. From thence it has passed into numerous collections, and now ranks in popularity with some of the best of modern hymns. Of the author's compositions in extensiveness of use it is exceeded only by his "For all Thy Saints who from their labours rest." Orig. text, Church Hymns, 1871. The doxology in H. A. & M. and others is an addition. [J. J.]

We have not seen Thy footsteps tread. Anne Richter, see Rigby. [Faith.] The complicated nature of the various forms of this hymn in C. U. requires the reproduction of the original poem, and the texts of some of the hymns adapted therefrom.

1. The earliest date to which we have traced the original poem is 1834. In that year it appeared anonymously in Songs from the Valley: A Collection of Sacred Poetry. Kirkby Lonsdale, 18mo. This volume was compiled by the elder daughters of the Rev. W. Carus Wilson. [c. mss.] At page 130 it reads:—

"FAITH.

"Blessed are they who have not seen, and yet have believed."

"We have not seen Thy footsteps tread
This wild and sinful earth of ours,
Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead
Again to life's reviving powers:
But we believe—for all things are
The gifts of Thine Almighty care.

"We have not seen the billow sea
Grow calm and still at Thy command,
Nor the dim orbs again to see,
Beneath the healing of Thine hand:
But we believe the Fount of Light
Again could give those eyeballs sight.

"We did not see Thee tread the wave;
We did not hear the voice from heaven,
Which once with awful warning gave
That God's own Son for us was given.
But we believe—oh! strengthen Thou
The faith which to Thy Name we owe.

WE HAVE NOT SEEN THY

"We did not see the armed throng
Steal to the 'garden's' midnight shade,
And watch the palm-tree's boughs among,
Then quail beneath Thy glance afraid:
But we believe—Almighty love
Alone could such dark moments prove.

"We did not see the darkness veil
With sudden gloom the noon-day skies;
Nor the fierce soldier's cheek grow pale,
And priestly mockers veil their eyes:
When the proud Roman owned the power
Of heaven, 'twas in that awful hour.

"We did not hear the footsteps fall
Within that lonely garden ground,
Of the all-wakeful sentinel,
Slow tracing there his watchful round;
But we believe—the Holy One
Bursting that tomb, in glory shone.

"We were not with the chosen few
Who saw Thee through the clouds ascend,
Who gazed, and wished to follow too,
Then on the earth all prostrate bend;
But we believe that mortal eyes
Beheld the journey to the skies,

"Chase every shade of doubt away;
'Light of the World!' in mercy shine;
Illumine with faith our erring way,
We would no worship own but Thine,
Bring us to heaven's peaceful shore,
And make us Thine for evermore!"

This text was republished in the April number of The Friendly Visitor, 1836, also printed at Kirkby Lonsdale, and edited by the Rev. W. Carus Wilson. It is signed "Anne R. Kirton-Lindsay." It is also found in Original and Select Hymns; A Companion to Select Poetry. Lond. John Van Voorst, 1837, No. 143 (2nd ed. enlarged 1838). The editor of this work was a Miss Little, of Bedford.

2. The first adaptation of this poem for congregational use appeared in J. H. Gurney's Lutterworth Coll. of Hys. for Public Worship, 1838, No. 264. It is signed "American," i.e. from an American source with alterations and additions. From the mss. of H. J. Buckoll (p. 181, i.) we gather that it was the joint production of Gurney and himself. This text is:—

"We saw Thee not when Thou didst tread,
In mortal guise, this sinful earth,
Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead,
And wake them to a second birth:
But we believe that Thou didst come,
And leave for us Thy glorious home.

"We were not with Thee on the wave,
When Thou the stormy sea couldst bind:
Nor saw the health Thy blessing gave
To lame and sick, to deaf and blind:
But we believe the Fount of Light
Could give the darkened eye-ball sight.

"We did not mark the chosen few,
When Thou didst through the clouds ascend,
First lift to heaven their wondering view,
Then to the earth all prostrate bend:
But we believe that mortal eyes
Beheld that journey to the skies.

"And now that Thou dost reign on high,
And thence Thy faithful people bless,
No ray of glory from the sky
Doth shine upon our wilderness:
Yet we believe that Thou art there;
And sing Thy praise, and lift our prayer."

3. The next recast was apparently by H. J. Buckoll, alone (see § 5). It appeared in Ps. & Hys. for use in the Rugby School Chapel (of which he was joint editor with Dr. Goulburn), 1843, No. 53, as follows:—

"We saw Thee not when Thou didst tread,
O Saviour, this our sinful earth;
Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead,
And wake them to a second birth;
But we believe that Thou didst come,
And quit for us Thy glorious home.

- "We were not with the faithful few,
Who stood Thy bitter cross around,
Nor heard the prayer for those who slew,
Nor felt that earthquake rock the ground;
We saw no spear-wound pierce Thy side;
Yet we believe that Thou hast died.
- "No angels' message met our ear,
On that first glorious Easter-day,
'The Lord is risen, He is not here,
Come see the place where Jesus lay!'—
But we believe that Thou didst quell
The banded powers of Death and Hell.
- "We saw Thee not return on high,
And now our longing sight to bless,
No ray of glory from the sky
Shines down upon our wilderness:
Yet we believe that Thou art there,
And seek Thee, Lord, in praise and prayer."

4. The next form of the text appeared in J. H. Gurney's Ps. & Hys. for Public Worship, Selected for some of the Churches in Marylebone, Lond. 1851, No. 269, and reads:—

- "We saw Thee not when Thou didst come
To this poor world of sin and death,
Nor e'er beheld Thy cottage-home
In that despised Nazareth;
But we BELIEVE Thy footsteps trod
Its streets and plains, Thou Son of God.
- "We did not see Thee lifted high
Amid that wild and savage cry,
Nor heard Thy meek, imploring cry,
'Forgive, they know not what they do';
Yet we BELIEVE the deed was done,
Which shook the earth, and veiled the sun.
- "We stood not by the empty tomb
Where late Thy sacred body lay,
Nor sat within that upper room,
Nor met Thee in the open way;
But we BELIEVE that angels said,
'Why seek the living with the dead?'
- "We did not mark the chosen few,
When Thou didst thro' the clouds ascend,
First lift to heaven their wondering view
Then to the earth all prostrate bend;
Yet we BELIEVE that mortal eyes
Beheld that journey to the skies.
- "And now that Thou dost reign on high,
And thence Thy waiting people bless,
No ray of glory from the sky
Doth shine upon our wilderness;
But we BELIEVE Thy faithful word,
And trust in our Redeeming Lord."

It will be noted that st. iv., v. are from the Lutterworth Coll., 1838. In a note to this hymn in the "Table of first lines" to the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., Gurney says concerning it:—

"This hymn, and the last hymn in the book, 'Yes God is good,' were suggested by two poems in a small American volume, which were well conceived, but very imperfectly executed. Successive alterations have left nothing of the original compositions remaining but the first four words, and the repeated words, in each hymn. With this acknowledgment, the writer has not scrupled to put his name to them—J. H. G."

The "small American volume" here referred to has not been identified. In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 381 begins with st. ii. of this text, "We did not see Thee lifted high."

5. On the death of Buckoll in 1871, a ms. in his handwriting, but undated, was found which contained the Lutterworth text of 1838 expanded into 14 stanzas. With the aid of this ms. we are enabled to say with tolerable certainty that of the Lutterworth text st. i., ii., iii. were by Buckoll, and st. iii., iv. were by Gurney; the Rugby text, 1843, was by Buckoll; and the Marylebone text, 1851, by Gurney.

6. After the publication of Gurney's text in the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, complications soon arose mainly in the form of centos. Some of these are:—

(1) In the Hys. for the Chapel of Harrow School, 1858, No. 98 is thus composed, st. i., ii. Buckoll, from the Lutterworth Coll.; st. iii., iv., Buckoll, from the Rugby Hymns; st. v., vi., Gurney, from the Lutterworth Coll.

(2) In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and others, is composed of st. ii.-v. of Gurney's 1851 text, and begins "We did not see Thee lifted high."

(3) In Pott's Hys. Fitted to the Order of Common Prayer, &c., 1861, No. 182, we have Pt. i. st. i., Gurney, from the Marylebone; st. ii., iii., Buckoll, from the Lutterworth Coll.; Pt. ii., "We did not see Thee lifted high," Gurney, from the Marylebone text.

(4) The text of the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 541, is: st. i., ii., Buckoll, from the Lutterworth Coll.; st. iii., Buckoll, from the Rugby Hymns; st. iv., v., Gurney, from the Lutterworth Coll.

(5) In the American Unitarian H. [and Tune] Bk., 1866, No. 428, is composed of st. ii.-iv. of Buckoll's Rugby text alone, and begins "We were not with the faithful few."

The text by Gurney, as in the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, is the most popular form of the hymn. It is found in H. A. & M., 1875; the H. Cong., 1876; Thring's Coll., 1882, and many others. [J. J.]

We in the lower parts. [Holy Communion.] This cento appeared in the 1874 Suppl. to the New Cong. H. Bk., No. 1242. It is thus composed: st. i. and iii. are from No. 97 of C. Wesley's Hys. on the Lord's Supper, 1745; st. ii. from No. 81 of the same; and st. iv. and v. from another source. [J. J.]

We limit not the truth of God. G. Easton. [Profound Depth of Holy Scripture.] This hymn was given in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 409, in 5 st. of 8 l., and headed with the following extract upon which it was based:—

"He charged us before God, and His blessed angels, if God should reveal anything to us by any other instrument of His, to be as ready to receive it as any truth by his ministry; for he was very confident the Lord had more light and truth yet to break forth out of His holy word." Narrative of Pastor Robinson's Address to the Pilgrim Fathers.

This note, together with the hymn, also appeared in Mr. Rawson's Hys., Verses, and Chants, 1876. [J. J.]

We love the place, O Lord (God). W. Bullock and Sir H. W. Baker. [The House of God.] In its original form this hymn appeared in Dean Bullock's Songs of the Church, Halifax, N. Scotia, 1854, pp. 37, 38, as follows:

"THIRD SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY.

"Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy house."
Psalm xxvi. 8.

"We love the place, O Lord,
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The joy of Thy abode
All other joy excels.

"We love the house of prayer,
Wherein Thy servants meet;
For Thou, O Lord, art there,
Thy chosen ones to greet.

"We love the sacred font
Wherein the Holy Dove
Pours out, as He is wont,
The effluence from above.

"We love our Father's board,
Its altar steps are dear;
For there in faith adored,
We find Thy Presence near.

"We love Thy saints who come
Thy mercy to proclaim,
To call the wanderers home,
And signify Thy name.

"Our first and latest love
To Zion shall be given—
The House of God above,
On earth the Gate of Heav'n."

2. This text, which has many features of excellence, underwent the following changes at the hands of Sir H. W. Baker, in 1860, and was pub. in H. A. & M., 1861, as follows, the italics being Sir H. W. Baker's alterations and additions:—

"We love the place, O God,
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The joy of Thine abode
All earthly joy excels.

"It is the House of prayer,
Wherein Thy servants meet;
And Thou, O Lord, art there
Thy chosen flock to greet.

"We love the sacred Fount;
For there the Holy Dove
To pour it ever went
His blessing from above.

"We love Thine Altar, Lord;
Oh what on earth so dear?
For there, in faith adored,
We find Thy Presence near.

"We love the Word of Life,
The Word that tells of peace,
Of comfort in the strife,
And joys that never cease.

"We love to sing below
For mercies freely given;
But Oh! we long to know
The triumph-song of heaven.

"Lord Jesus, give us grace
On earth to love Thee more,
In heaven to see Thy Face,
And with Thy saints adore."

This form of the hymn has passed into most extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and has been translated into several languages.

3. A third form appeared in Harland's Church Psalter and Hymn, enlarged ed. 1867, the opening stanza of which begins:—

"O Lord, we love the place
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The sweetness of Thy grace
All other joy excels.

This is based upon the H. A. & M. text; but is very inferior as a piece of literary workmanship.

4. A fourth form is given in Thring's Coll., 1882. Of this st. i., ii. are by Bullock, with "God" for "Lord," in st. i. l. 1; st. iii. ll. 1, 2, Bullock, l. 3, Bullock altered by Thring, l. 4, Bullock altered by Baker; st. v. by Thring; st. vi. ll. 1-3, by Thring, l. 4, Bullock altered by Baker. This is a good cento and worthy of more extensive use. [J. J.]

We love Thee, Lord! yet not alone.
Julia A. Elliott, nee Marshall. [Love for Christ.] This appeared in her husband's Ps. & Hymns, 1835, in 6 st. of 4 double lines. Although not separately numbered as such, it is really a hymn in two parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. iv., "We love Thee, Lord! because when we, &c." It has passed into a few collections. [J. J.]

We plan foundations for the dead.
J. Montgomery. [Foundation Stone of a Cemetery Chapel.] The ms. of this hymn is dated "May 5, 1848." The hymn was written for the laying of the foundation-stone of the chapel for the Church of England portion of the Sheffield General Cemetery. Montgomery's hymn, "Father of glory, God of grace," was written for the Opening of the same, and is dated "June 27, 1850." Montgomery d. on April 30, 1854, and was buried under the shadow of the spire of this chapel. [J. J.]

We sing the praise of Him Who died.
T. Kelly. [Passiontide.] Appeared in Hymns by Thomas Kelly, not before Published, Dublin, 1815, No. 52, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross: Gal. vi. 14." Here st. v. reads:—

"The balm of life; the cure of woe;
The measure and the pledge of love;
'Tis all that sinners want below;
'Tis all that angels know above."

In later editions of Kelly's Hymns this stanza is altered by Kelly to:—

"The balm of life, the cure of woe,
The measure and the pledge of love;
The sinner's refuge here below,
The angel's theme in heaven above."

This authorised text is that usually found in modern collections. In H. A. & M., 1861, an additional stanza was given by the Compiler. The use of this hymn in all English-speaking countries is extensive. It has also been tr. into several languages. The Rev. L. C. Biggs's rendering into Latin of the H. A. & M. text in his annotated edition of H. A. & M., 1867, begins "Laudes canamus mortui." Lord Selborne [Sir R. Palmer] said at the York Church Congress, 1866 [Report, Hymnody] that this hymn "is distinguished by a calm subdued power, rising gradually from a rather low to a very high key [quotes, and continues], I doubt whether Montgomery ever wrote anything quite equal to this." In several collections this hymn begins with st. ii., "Inscribed upon the Cross we see." An adaptation of the original text for use at Holy Communion is given in the Memoir of S. Medley, by his daughter, pub. in Liverpool in 1883. It begins with the same first line, and was probably made by Medley. [J. J.]

We sing to Thee Whose wisdom formed. [Divine Use of Music.] This appeared in The Whole Book of Psalms: with the Usual Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Together with all the Ancient and Proper Tunes sung in Churches, with some of Later Use. Composed in Three Parts. . . . By John Playford, London, 1677, p. 293, in 7 st. of 4 l. and a doxology. It was included in the 6th ed. of the Supplement to the New Version, 1768, but has fallen out of use. Its original title is, "On the Divine use of Music." [J. J.]

We thank, Thee, Lord, for this fair earth. Pub. G. E. L. Cotton. [Flower Services.] Pub. in Hymns for use in the Chapel of Marlborough College, 1858, No. 94, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in the enlarged edition of 1869. It has passed into numerous collections, and usually with the change of two or three words in the whole hymn. [J. J.]

We walk by faith and not by sight.
H. Alford. [St. Thomas.] Appeared in his Ps. & Hymns, &c., 1844, p. 108, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 249. It is also given in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, and others. [J. J.]

Wearied in the strife of sin. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Ascension.] This hymn was pub. as a leaflet, with music by Dr. Charles Vincent, in 1887. It is in 7 st. of 4 l., headed "Crucified and Crowned," and dated "Ascension Day, 1887." It is No. 236 in the 1890 ed. of the H. Comp. [J. J.]

Weary of earth, and laden with my sin. S. J. Stone. [Lent.] Written in 1866, and 1st pub. in the same year in his Lyra Fidelium, p. 44, in 8 st. of 4 l. It is based on Art. 10 of the Apostles' Creed, "The Forgiveness of Sins," and was written, originally, for a parochial mission. In 1868 Mr. Stone revised it for the Appendix to H. A. & M. From H. A. & M. it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America. It is one of the most tender and plaintive of Mr. Stone's hymns. In the American Laudes Domini, 1884, it is divided into two parts, pt. i. being st. i.-v.; and pt. ii. st. vi.-viii., altered to "O Jesus Christ the righteous! live in me." [J. J.]

Weary of this wordy strife. C. Wesley. [For Unity.] 1st pub. in 7 st. of 6 l. at the end of J. Wesley's Sermon on 2 Kings x. 15, in 1755. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vi. 71.) Two centos are in C. U. (1) "Weary of this wordy strife," in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883; and (2) "My brethren, friends, and kinsmen these," in the American Church Praise Book, N. Y., 1882. [J. J.]

Webb, Benjamin, M.A., was b. in London in 1820, and was educated in St. Paul's School; whence he passed to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1838, B.A. 1842, M.A. 1845. Ordained by the Bishop [Monk] of Gloucester and Bristol he was Assistant Curate of Kemerton in Gloucestershire, 1848-44; of Christ Church, St. Pancras, 1847-49; and of Brasted, Kent, 1849-51; at which date he was presented to the P. C. of Sheen in Staffordshire, which he held until 1862, when he became Vicar of St. Andrews, Wells Street, London. In 1861 the Bishop [Jackson] of London collated him to the Prebend of Portpool in St. Paul's Cathedral. Mr. Webb was one of the Founders of the Cambridge Camden, afterwards the Eccelesiologist Society; and the Editor of the Eccelesiologist from 1842 to 1868, as well as the General Editor of the Society's publications. His first appearance in print was as joint editor of Bp. Montague's Articles of Inquiry in 1841; in 1848 he was joined with Mr. J. M. Neale in An Essay on Symbolism, and A Translation of Durandus; in 1847 he put forth his valuable work on Continental Ecclesiology; in 1848 he was joint editor with Dr. Mill of Frank's Sermons, for the Anglo-Catholic Library, and with the Rev. J. Fuller-Russell of Hierurgia Anglicana. After the decease of his father-in-law (Dr. Mill), he edited Dr. Mill's Catechetical Lectures, 1856; a second edition of Dr. Mill's Christian Advocate's Publications on the Mythical Interpretation of the Gospels, 1861; and of Dr. Mill's Sermons on our Lord's Temptation, 1873. He was also one of the editors of the Burntland reprint of the Sarum Missal. One of his most valuable works is Instructions and Prayers for Candidates for Confirmation, of which the third edition was pub. in 1882. Mr. Webb was one of the original editors of the Hymnal Noted, and of the sub-Committee of the Eccelesiologist Society, appointed to arrange the words and the music of that book; and was also the translator of some of the hymns. In conjunction with the Rev. Canon W. Cooke he was editor of the Hymnary, 1872, for which office his habitual reconstruction and composition of the words of the anthems used at St. Andrew's, Wells Street, as well as his connection with the Hymnal Noted, eminently qualified him. His original hymns contributed to the Hymnary, 1871 and 1872, were:—

1. Assessor to thy King. St. Bartholomew. In the Hymnary, 1872.
2. Behold He comes, thy King most holy. Advent. Originally written to be sung in St. Andrew's Church, Wells Street, as an anthem to the music of Schumann's Advent-tied, and afterwards pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.
3. Praise God, the Holy Trinity. Hymn of Faith. Originally written for use in St. Andrew's, Wells Street, and subsequently in the Hymnary, 1872.
4. Praise the Rock of our salvation. Dedication of a Church. Pub. in the Hymnary, 1872. Mr. Webb's authorized text is in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883.
5. Ye angel hosts above. Universal Praise to God. In the Hymnary, 1872.

Mr. Webb's trs. are annotated elsewhere. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) He d. in London, Nov. 27, 1885. [W. C.]

Wedderburn, James, John and Robert, were the three sons of James Wedderburn, a Dundee merchant. James, the eldest, entered the University of St. Andrews in 1514. He afterwards went to France, and on his return produced tragedies and comedies in Scotch which roused the rage of the ecclesiastics, who forced him to flee, in 1540, to France, where he d., probably at Dieppe, about 1550. John, the second son, graduated M.A. at St. Andrews in 1528. Having entered the priesthood and officiated at Dundee, he fell under suspicion of heresy, and fled in 1539 to Wittenberg, where he associated with Luther, Melancthon, and other Reformers. There in his exile, doubtless under Luther's influence, he wrote and translated many of the psalms, hymns and ballads commonly known as The Gude and Godlie Ballades. After the death of James v. (Dec. 13, 1542), he returned to Scotland, but was forced in 1548 again to flee. He d. in England in 1556. Robert, the youngest son, graduated M.A. at St. Andrews in 1530. He entered the priesthood, and was Vicar of Dundee in 1533. He seems to have written a number of the "Ballades" proper. To him Dr. Laing would ascribe the remarkable Complains of Scotland, a satirical poem first pub. at St. Andrews in 1549. (See Scottish Hymnody, § 3; and the works by Dr. Laing and Dr. Mitchell mentioned in the Appendix to that article.) [J. M.]

Weep, mourner, for the joys that fade. W. Knox. [Heaven.] 1st pub. in his Harp of Zion, 1825, in 2 st. of 11 l., and entitled "Heaven." It is based on Job xix. 28. It was also included in his Poems, &c., 1847, p. 181, but is unknown to the hymnals in that form. As early as 1844 it was given in an altered form as: "O weep not for the joys that fade," in the American Unitarian Christian Hymns, of the Cheshire Pastoral Association, and, later, in other American collections, in most of which it is ascribed to Knox, in error. [J. J.]

Wegelin, Josua, D.D., s. of Johann Wegelin, or Wegeloin, then superintendent of (Ephorus) of the Evangelical college at Augsburg, was b. at Augsburg Jan. 11, 1604. After studying at the University of Tübingen (M.A. 1626), he was for a short time pastor at Budweiler, and was appointed in 1627 fourth diaconus of the Franciscan (Barfüßler) church at Augsburg. In 1629, along with 13 other Evangelical pastors, he was compelled to leave Augsburg by the decree of Restitution (see p. 1090, it.) enacted by the Emperor Ferdinand III. After Gustavus Adolphus had become master of the city, in 1632, Wegelin was recalled to the Barfüßler Kirche as archidiaconus. In 1633 he was appointed preacher at the Hospital Church of the Holy Ghost, but in 1635, as a result of the battle of Nördlingen (Sept., 1634), he was again forced to flee from Augsburg. He found refuge at Pressburg, in Hungary, where he became pastor, and afterwards Senior, Inspector, and Doctor of Theology. He d. at Pressburg, Sept. 14, 1640 (Koch, iii. 169; Goedeke's Grandriis, vol. iii. 1887, p. 161, &c.).

Wegelin's hymns are simple and natural, and are the productions of an earnest, true-hearted and good pastor rather than of a skilful poet. Goedeke, as above, gives lists of their first lines from his (1) Augsburger Bet-Büchlein, Nürnberg, 1636 (copy in possession of Pastor E. Krauss of Greifswald). There are also eds. which have the engraved title dated 1635, and the printed title dated 1648, a copy of the 8vo ed. being in the Göttingen Library, and a copy of the 12mo in the Library of the Prebiter Seminar at Hannover], and from his (2) Hand-Land- u. Wand-Büchlein, Nürnberg, 1637 (Göttingen Library). Some 20 of his hymns were included in J. M. Dillherr's G. H., Nürnberg, 1654 (p. 301, it.), and other collections of the 17th cent.

The only hymn by Wegelin which has passed into English is:—

Allein auf Christi Himmelfahrt. Ascension. This is his most popular hymn. 1st pub. 1636, as above, p. 609 (Göttingen copy p. 652, Hannover copy p. 581), in 3 st. of 7 l. entitled, "iv. Short Psalm of Praise on the Ascension of Christ;" repeated in Dillherr's G. H., 1654, p. 304. In the Lüneburg G. H., 1661, No. 112, it is recast and begins, "Auf Christi Himmelfahrt allein"; this recast being probably made by the compiler Ernst Sauermann (1658 corrector of the Latin school at Celle, 1671 pastor of St. Alexander's Church at Elmbeck or Elmbeck, in Hannover; d. at Elmbeck, Nov. 17, 1670). Both forms are given in the Leipzig Forraat, 1673, Nos. 384 and 389, and in the Uran, L. S., 1851. Tr. as:—

1. Raise your Devotion, mortal Tongues. By J. C. Jacobs, in his Psal. Ger., 1722, p. 24; repeated, altered, in his 2nd ed., 1732, p. 41. In 1722 it is marked as tr. from the second form of Wegelin's hymn; in 1732 as from J. Zwick's Auf diesen Tag bedenken wir. It may be regarded as a very free tr. from Wegelin; with the first stanza taken from st. v. vi. of Isaac Watts's "Hosannah to the Prince of Light." The 1732 text was included as No. 443 in pt. I. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, with a new tr. of st. iii. added. This tr. of st. iii. was omitted in the 1789 and later eds. In the edition of 1836, No. 170, only st. I., II. of Jacobs is retained.

2. Since Christ is gone to heaven, His home. This is a good tr. from the second form, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd ser., 1858, p. 47; and in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1859, p. 314. In her C. E. for England, 1863, No. 64, it is altered in metre. [J. M.]

Wegleiter, Christoph, s. of Leonhardt Wegleiter, book-keeper at Nürnberg, was b. at Nürnberg, April 22, 1659. In 1676 he matriculated at the University of Altdorf, and so distinguished himself by his poetic gifts that he was, in 1679, received by S. von Birken as a member of the Pegnitz Shepherd and Flower order, and in 1680 was at once capped M.A. and laureated as a poet. After studying at other German universities, and making a lengthened tour (1683-88) in Germany, Holland, and England, he was appointed, in 1688, Professor of Theology at the University of Altdorf, and also diaconus of the Town Church there; receiving from the University the degree of D.D. in 1697. He d. at Altdorf Aug. 16 (18?), 1706 (Koch, iii., 502; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1885, p. 178; 1886, p. 157; 1887, pp. 30, 81; Will's Nürnbergisches Gelehrten Lexicon, pt. iv. p. 187, &c.).

Wegleiter was a successful professor, and an edifying preacher of the school of Spener and Francke. His hymns, some 25 in all, are thoughtful, original, and devout, but somewhat artificial in style. Six were contributed to the 2nd ed., 1691, of the Pegnitz Society's Poetischer Andachts-Sang (p. 669, l.), and the rest appeared in various hymn-books of the period.

The only hymn by Wegleiter which has passed into English is:—

Beachertes Herz, lag ab die Bergen. Sunday Morning. 1st pub. in the Geistliche Hirsens-Music, Schleusingen, 1701, No. 497, in 2 st. of 8 l., entitled "Sunday Hymn," and marked as by "D. Christ. Wegleiter." Included in the Uran, L. S., 1851. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to B. W. Marperger. Tr. as:—

Encumber'd heart! lay by thy sorrow. This is a good tr., omitting st. vi., vii., by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hymns from Germany, 1841, p. 59. Her tr. of st. iii., iv., ll. 1-4; viii., ll. 1-4, beginning, "My God, I now appear before Thee," are included in the Hedges & Huntington Hym. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853, No. 2.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "O'erburden'd Heart, thy Labour baulch," by H. J. Buckell, 1842, p. 1. (2) "Now weary heart! thy cares dislodge," by Lady E. Fortescue, 1845, p. 16. (3) "Now, heavy heart, away with sorrow," by Miss Marington, 1863, p. 147. (4) "My burdened heart, throw off thy cares," by Dr. J. Guthrie, 1869, p. 114. (5) "O burden'd heart, cast off thy sorrow." This is No. 1012 in Roil's Praise Bk., 1872. [J. M.]

Weingärtner, Sigismund. Very little is known of this author. His name appears as "Sigismund Weingart" in the Index of Authors prefixed to the 766 Geistliche Psalmen, &c., pub. at Nürnberg in 1607, but no biographical particulars are there given. He is generally said to have been a preacher in or near Heilbronn. But Koch, ii. 300, says that no preacher of that name ever held office in or near Heilbronn on the Neckar; and conjectures that he may have been of Heilsbrunn in Bavaria. As to Heilsbrunn, Dr. Zahn, now of Neudettelsau in Bavaria, informs me that there was no preacher of that name near Heilsbronn, and that he has been unable anywhere to trace this writer. Goedeke, in his Grandriis, vol. ii., 1884, p. 198, says, "he seems to have been of Basel," but for this also there is no clear evidence.

In the 1607 work as above, the Index of First Lines reads thus:—

"S. W. Auf Jesum Christum steht all mein Thun, 765."
"Auf meinen lieben Gott, traw ich, 936."

The latter is here tr. into English, viz.:—

Auf meinen lieben Gott. Trust in God. Included, 1607, as above, p. 936, in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled, "Another beautiful hymn"; but, as will be seen above, no initials are attached to it in the 1607 Index of First Lines. Later compilers, however (such as Jeremias Weber in his G. H., Leipzig, 1638, p. 167; marked as "Another. Sigismund Weingärtner"), transferred the initials given in the 1607 index, and so ascribed "Auf meinen lieben Gott," to Weingärtner. This ascription is probably a mistake. L. Curtze in his D. Philipp Nicolai's Leben und Lieder, 1859, p. 10, ascribes the hymn to Friedrich Beurhaus, since 1657 prorektor of the school at Dortmund (d. 1609), but this also lacks confirmation. Wackernagel, v. p. 433, gives it as anonymous, printing it from M. Vulpia's G. B., 1609, with a second form from J. Aldenberger's Geistbüchlein, Nürnberg, 1611. Whoever was the author the hymn is certainly a good one, and has been a great favourite in Germany. In the Uran,

Z. S., 1861, No. 694, st. 1.-iv., vi. are as in 1807, and st. v. is one of the st. added in C. Demantius's Threnodice, Freiberg, 1620. The tr. in C. U. are:—

1. On God in all my woes. This is a good tr. of st. 1.-iv. of the 1607, by A. T. Russell, as No. 231 in his Ps. & Hys., 1861.

2. In God my faithful God. This is a good and full tr. from the 1607, by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 147, slightly altered in her Christians Singers, 1869, p. 156. Repeated, omitting st. iv., in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1830.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "In God the Lord most just," by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 62; repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. 1, No. 474. (2) "I trust my blessed God," by S. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 219. [J. M.]

Weisse, Michael (Weiss, Wiss, Wegs, Weya, Weysa), was b. circa 1480, in Neisse, Silesia, took priest's orders, and was for some time a monk at Breslau. When the early writings of Luther came into his hands, Weisse, with two other monks, abandoned the convent, and sought refuge in the Bohemian Brethren's House at Leutomischl in Bohemia. He became German preacher (and apparently founder of the German communities) to the Bohemian Brethren at Landskron in Bohemia, and Fulnek in Moravia, and d. at Landskron in 1534 (Koch, ii. 115-120; Wackernagel's D. Kirchenkied., i. p. 727; Fontes rerum Austriacarum, Scriptores, vol. ii. pt. ii. p. 227, Vienna, 1863, &c.).

Weisse was admitted as a priest among the Brethren at the Synod of Brandeis, in 1531, and in 1532 was appointed a member of their Select Council, but he had previously performed important missions for the Brethren. He was, e.g., sent by Bishop Lucas, in 1522, along with J. Roh or Horn, to explain the views of the Bohemian Brethren to Luther; and again, in 1534, when they were appointed more especially to report on the practices and holiness of life of the followers of the German Reformers. He was also entrusted with the editing of the first German hymn-book of the Bohemian Brethren, which appeared as Ein New Gesangbuchken at Jungen Bunzel (Jung Bunzlau) in Bohemia in 1531 (see pp. 156, 5, and 157). This contained 156 hymns, all apparently either translations or else originals by himself. The proportion of trs. is not very clear. In the preface to the 1531, Weisse addressing the German Communities at Fulnek and Landskron says, "I have also, according to my power, put forth all my ability, your old hymn-book as well as the Bohemian hymn-book (Cantional) being before me, and have brought the same sense, in accordance with Holy Scripture, into German rhymes." So Johann Roh in the preface to the 1644 ed. speaks of himself as correcting "hymns which he (i.e. Weisse) transferred from Bohemian into German"; and the 1639 ed. speaks of Weisse as having "begun to translate the (Bohemian) Cantional, and rendered 143 hymns into German." Mr. Müller, however (see p. 157), has only been able to identify 13 as trs. from the Bohemian.

Luther called Weisse "a good poet, with somewhat erroneous views on the Sacrament" (i.e. Holy Communion); and after the Sacramental hymns had been revised by Roh (1544). Included 12 of his hymns in V. Babel's G. B., 1545. Many of his hymns possess considerable merit. The style is flowing and musical, the religious tone is earnest and manly, but yet tender and truly devout, and the best of them are distinguished by a certain charming simplicity of thought and expression. At least 118 passed into the German Lutheran hymn-books of the 16th and 17th centuries, and many are still in use. Three are annotated in this Dictionary at pp. 226, ii.; 223, i.; and 226, i.

The following hymns by Weisse have also passed into English:—

1. Christus ist erstanden, Von des Todes Banden, Easter. 1st pub. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 273, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is suggested by the older hymn, "Christ ist erstanden" (p. 206, l.). In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 129, The tr. in C. U. is:—

Christ the Lord is risen again! This is a full and very good tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 37, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 58. It has been included in many recent English and American hymnals; generally omitting st. ii., as in H. A. & M., 1861; Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1880-82; Cong. Ch. Hyl., 1887, and in America in the Epis. Hyl., 1871; Bapt. Service of Song, 1871, &c. Further abridged forms are in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; and in the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and many others, especially in America.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Christ (and 'tis no wonder')." This is No. 250 in pt. 1 of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Christ our Lord is risen," by Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 322.

ii. Es geht daher des Tages Schein. Morning. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 318, in 7 st. of 4 l. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 455. The tr. in C. U. are:—

1. The Light of Day again we see. In full, by H. J. Buckoll in his Hys. from German, 1842, p. 14. His tr. of st. iii., iv., vi., vii., beginning "Great God, eternal Lord of Heaven," were included in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1843.

2. Once more the day-light shines abroad. This is a full and very good tr., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 69, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 18. Repeated in Thring's Coll., 1880-82.

iii. Gelobt sei Gott im höchsten Thron. Easter. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 265, in 20 st. of 3 l., with Alleluia. In the Pfalz G. B., 1859, No. 19, five st. are given, and in Layrix's Kern, 1844, No. 139, there are six st. At p. 157 it is marked as from the Bohemian (1st pub. 1501), the Bohemian being suggested by the "Surrexit Christus hodie" (p. 1104, l.), and the German being based on both. The tr. in C. U. are:—

1. Praise God upon His heavenly throne. This is a free tr. of st. 1, 4, 10, 18, 20, by A. T. Russell, as No. 112, in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. Glory to God upon His throne. By Mrs. H. R. Spaeth, in the Southern Lutheran Service and Hys. for Sunday Schools, Philadelphia, 1883.

iv. Gott sah zu seiner Zeit, Christmas. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 244, in 10 st. of 9 l. The tr. in C. U. is:—

When the due Time had taken place. By C. Kinchen, omitting st. v., as No. 169 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1743 (1849, No. 20). In the ed. of 1886, No. 954 consists of st. x., beginning "Ah come, Lord Jesus, hear our prayer."

v. Lab sei dem allmächtigen Gott. Advent. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 230, in 14 st. of 4 l. Included in V. Babel's G. B., 1545, and recently as No. 12 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. In the larger ed. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1886, it is marked as a tr. from a Bohemian hymn, beginning "Cirkev Kristova Boha chval." The tr. are:—

1. Praise be to that Almighty God. By J. Gambold, omitting st. xi.-xiii., as No. 246, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the 1789 and later eds. (1886, No. 31), it begins "To God we render thanks and praise."

2. O come, th' Almighty's praise declare. By A. T. Russell, of st. i.-iii., v., as No. 26 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

vi. O Herr Jesu Christ, der du ersehnen bist. For Children. On Christ's Example in His early years on earth. 1531 as above, and in Wackernagel, iii. p. 326, in 7 st. of 7 l. The first three st. are tr. as "Christ Jesus, Lord most dear," in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 278. The form in C. U. is that in Knapp's Ev. J. S., 1837, No. 2951 (1865, No. 2601), which begins "Nun hilf uns, o Herr Jesu Christ," and is in 3 st. of 4 l., entirely recast. This is tr. as:—

Lord Jesus Christ, we come to Thee. In full from Knapp, by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 179.

Hymns not in English C. U.:—

vi. Dan Vater dert oben. Grace after Meat. 1531, and thence in Wackernagel, III, p. 221, in 5 st. of 7 l. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1136. Tr. as, "Father, Lord of mercy," by J. C. Jacobs, 1722, p. 117. In his ed., 1732, p. 183, slightly altered, and thence in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 260.

vii. Die Sonne wird mit ihm'n Schein. Evening. 1531, and thence in Wackernagel, III, p. 223, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Uwe. L. S., 1851, No. 517. Tr. as, "Soon from our wishful eyes awhile," by H. J. Buckoll, 1842. ix. Kom, heiliger Geist, wahrer Gott. Walters-Ade. 1531, and in Wackernagel, III, p. 223, in 9 st. of 5 l. From the Bohemian as noted at p. 157, and partly suggested by the "Veni Sancte Spiritus repie" (q.v.). The trs. are: (1) "Come, Holy Ghost, Lord God indeed." This is No. 285 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "Thou great Teacher, Who instructest." This is a tr. of st. vi., as No. 334 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1861 (1849, No. 367).

x. Lob und Ehr mit stetem Dankopfer. The Creation: Septuagesima. 1531, and in Wackernagel, III, p. 227, in 5 st. of 16 l. Tr. as, "Praise, glory, thanks, be ever paid," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 137.

xi. O Jesu Christ, der Heiden Licht. Epiphany. 1531, and in Wackernagel, III, p. 248, in 2 st. of 14 l. Tr. as, "O Jesus Christ, the Gentiles' Light." This is No. 253 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1467, st. ii. was rewritten. This form begins, "Erscheine allen Auserwählten," and is in 4 st. of 4 l. Tr. as, "Lord, to Thy chosen ones appear," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 132.

xii. Singet Lieben Lant. Redemption by Christ. 1531, and in Wackernagel, III, p. 243, in 16 st. of 4 l. Tr. as, "Sing, be glad, ye happy sheep." This is a tr. of st. xiv., by C. G. Clemens, as No. 299 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In the 1801 and later eds. (1849, No. 408) it begins, "O rejoice, Christ's happy sheep."

Besides the above the following in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, are also from Weisse (the numbers in brackets being references to the complete hymns in vol. III of Wackernagel, in cases where the tr. does not begin with st. i. of the original), viz. Nos. 247, 248, 250, 255, 256 (iii., 294), 257, 261, 270, 271 (iii., 351), 272, 273 (iii., 401), 280 (iii., 355), 284, 288 (see p. 187. Trs. from the Bohemian, No. 2), 289 (iii., 378), 292. [J. M.]

Weissel, Georg, s. of Johann Weissel, judge and afterwards burgomaster at Donnau, near Königsberg, was b. at Donnau in 1590. He studied at the University of Königsberg, from 1608 to 1611, and thereafter, for short periods, at Wittenberg, Leipzig, Jena, Strassburg, Basel and Marburg. In 1614 he was appointed rector of the school at Friedland near Donnau, but resigned this post after three years, and returned to Königsberg to resume his studies in theology. Finally, in 1623, he became pastor of the newly erected Altrossgart church at Königsberg, where he remained till his death, on August 1, 1635 (Koch, iii. 180; Altpreuussische Monatschrift, 1867, p. 430; Goedake's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 122, &c.).

Weissel was one of the most important of the earlier hymn-writers of Prussia. His hymns, about 29 in all, are good in style, moderate in length, and varied in metre. The earliest seem to have been written for use at the consecration of the Altrossgart church on the 2nd S. in Advent, 1623. The majority are for the greater festivals of the Christian year. The best are No. ii. below, and those for the dying. They appeared mostly in the Königsberg hymn-books, 1639-1650, and in the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. i., Elbing, 1642; pt. II., Königsberg, 1644 (Berlin Library).

Those of Weissel's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Im dunkern Stall, o Wunder gross. Christmas. 1st pub. in B. Derschau's Ausserlesene geistliche Lieder, Königsberg, 1639, p. 7, in 5 st. of 5 l. In the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. i., 1642, No. 14, it is entitled "On the Birth of Christ, Lux in tenebris lucet," and in the Index is marked as by Georg Weisselius. Repeated in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, p. 66, and as No. 168 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The tr. in C. U. is:— O miracle of love and might! This is a somewhat free tr., omitting st. v., by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 104 in his Hymns. Christ., 1863.

ii. Macht hoch die Thür, das Thor macht weit. Advent. This is a Hymn of Triumph for the Entry of the King of Glory, founded on Ps. xlv. ; and is one of the finest German Advent hymns. 1st pub. in the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. i., 1642, No. 2, in 5 st. of 8 l., marked as "On the 1st S. of Advent," and in the Index marked as by Georgius Weisselius. Included in Crüger's Praxis, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1662, and most later books, as e.g. the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1599. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Lift up your heads, ye mighty gates. This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 10, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 25. In the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887, the Evang. Hyl., N. Y., 1880, and others, the original form is followed. In the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Bapt. Hyl., 1879; Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others, ll. 7, 8 of each stanza are omitted. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 17, ll. 1-4 of each stanza are given, and then ll. 6, 7 of st. iv., v. are added as a sixth st.—this form being followed in the Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874; Meth. Epl. Hyl., 1878, and other American Colls. Other forms are:—

(1) Behold One cometh from afar (l. alt.). This (partly from Mercer) is in the 1874 Suppl. to the New Cong. H. Bk., and the 1874 Appx. to the Lyra Ger. H. Bk.
(2) Behold He cometh from afar. In J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, altered from No. 1.
(3) Oh! hallowed is the land and blest (ll. i. 1, alt.). In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, &c.
(4) O blest the souls, for ever blest (ll. i. 1, alt.). In Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864.
(5) Ring wide the portals of your heart (tr.). In the American Unitarian H. Bk., 1868.

2. The mighty gates of earth unbar. This is by W. Mercer, based on Miss Winkworth's tr., in his Church P. & H. Bk., 1857, No. 14 (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 71), repeated in Kennedy, 1863.

Another tr. is: "Lift up, lift up your heads, ye gates," by G. Moultrie, in his Spousals of S. Dorothea, 1870.

iii. Wo ist dein Stachel nun, o Tod? Easter. Founded on 1 Cor. xv., 53-58. 1st pub. as No. 3 in pt. ii., 1644, of the Preussische Fest-Lieder, in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled "For the Easter festival," and in the Index marked as by Georgius Weisselius. Thence in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, p. 193, and others. The form which has passed into English is that in the Hannover G. B., 1657, No. 74, in 10 st., repeated as No. 315 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. This, beginning "O Tod, wo ist dein Stachel nun," is entirely rewritten, probably by Justus Gesenius. Tr. as:—

O Death! where is thy cruel sting! This is a full and good version of the 1657 text, as No. 80 in the Ohio Lat. Hyl., 1880, marked as a compilation, [J. M.]

Weissensee, Philipp Heinrich, was b. Feb. 6, 1673, at Vichberg, near Gaildorf, Württemberg, where his father was pastor and consistorialrath. He studied at the University of Tübingen, and, after acting as assistant to several clergymen, became, in 1697, a tutor to the court pages at Stuttgart. In 1703 he was appointed a tutor in the clergy training school at Maulbronn, and in 1708 in that at Blaubeuren. He was then appointed, in 1722, prelate at Blaubeuren, and in 1727 took up residence at Stuttgart as prelate of Hirsau and member of the Württemberg consistory. For political reasons he was removed, in 1740, to Denkendorf near Reilingen, as Probst and General Superintendent. He d. at Denkendorf, Jan. 6, 1767, being then the Father and Senior of the Lutheran Church in Württemberg (Koch, v. 79; B. Haug's Liederdichter des württembergischen Landgesangbuchs, 1780, p. 42, and Appz. ii., &c.).

Weissensee was one of the earliest friends of Foreign Missions, being specially interested in that to Malabar. He was a good poet, and in 1718 pub. a German metrical version of Thomas à Kempis's Imitation. The most important of his hymns were contributed to the 2nd ed. of J. A. Grammelich's Viertzig Betrachtungen von Christi Leiden und Tod, auf die Viertzig Tugten in den Fasten, Stuttgart, 1727 (Berlin Library. The 1st ed., 1722, has no hymns).

Those of Weissensee's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Der Tod kommt an; da soll ich ringen. For the Dying. 1st pub. 1727, as above, p. 144, in 4 st. of 6 l., as the companion to Meditation on St. Luke xxii. 44. Included in Knapp's Ec. L. S., 1837 and 1863. In Bunson's Verseck, 1835, No. 388, it begins "Kommt an der Tod, da ich soll ringen." The tr. in C. U. is:

When the last agony draws nigh. This is a good tr. of st. l. iv., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyræ Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 239; repeated as No. 543 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868.

ii. Jesus, hilf beten; und bete du Treuer. Prayer. 1st pub. 1727 as above, p. 124, in 4 st. of 6 l., as the companion to Meditation x. on St. Luke xxii. 40. Included in the Württemberg G. B., 1742, No. 94 (1842, No. 265). Tr. as "Help me to pray, Lord! and make supplication," by J. D. Burns in his Memoirs and Remains, 1869, p. 232. [J. M.]

Welsh Hymnody. No reasonable doubt can exist as to hymns being sung in the early British Church. People whose muse always sang the praises of men, whether kings, warriors, or patriots, would scarcely fail to pour forth their feelings of devotion, and to give the highest scope possible to their muse in the form of hymns or sacred lyrics. In the works of Taliesin, who is supposed to be a bard of the sixth century, reference is made to the hymnology of that period, "Nid cerddor celfydd ni molwy Ddafydd; nid cywir ceintid ni molwy y Tâd"; that is, "No musician is skilful unless he extols the Lord, and no singer is correct unless he praises the Father."

In the works of Llawdden, a bard who took a prominent part in the reformation of Welsh poetry in the year 1451, some reference is also made to the hymnology of the mediæval period:—

"Mi a luniaf feu lanwaith, Gwyddiaf a Selmau safu;
A naw emyn o newydd,
A phawb gair i Fair fydd."

Tudur Aled, also, says that in heaven it will be a part of the saints' supreme joy to sing the Virgin's praises:—

"Cawn wynfyd, cawn y Wenfais, Cawn y nef oll, cawn i Fair."

In the year 1340, Davydd Ddu o Hiraedg Vicar of Tremerchion, and Canon of St. Asaph, composed some hymns, perhaps the first Welsh hymns, since the early Church hymns were lost. He also translated the Te Deum, in the Welsh metre known as Hypynt or Vaulted Strain. His sacred poem, Am Ddiwedd Dyn a'i Gorph, is printed in the Myvyrian Archaeology of Wales. Also a very poetical translation of the Officium B. Mariæ from Latin into Welsh by him, fills thirty columns of the first volume of the Myvyrian Archaeology.

At the time of the Protestant Reformation the Welsh appeared to have lost the spirit of sacred song. On the Continent the Reformation was the signal for an outburst of vernacular hymnology. Luther's hymns and psalms fired the hearts of his followers, so that his opponents feared his hymns more than his sermons, and England and Wales caught the fire.

i. Established Church.—In the years 1549–62, Sternhold and Hopkins gave to the English people the Metrical Psalms; but Wales had to wait many years for the appearance of a poet whose name is now familiar to all Welshmen, as well as the task he so admirably performed.—Solman Edmund Prys.

1. Vicar Pritchard, commonly known as Vicar Rees Pritchard (p. 209, i.), did good service as a hymnologist. It appears that his book called Canwyll y Cywry; or, the Welshman's Candle, was at one time much used, and some of its quaint verses sung as hymns, probably for the want of something better, for in his days the voice of sacred song and praise was scarcely heard in Wales. His compositions were in use before Archdeacon Prys's Psalms were published. On the decay of religion in Wales, according to one author, when the recognised teachers of the people neglected their duty, The Welshman's Candle appeared and was extensively circulated. Much of it was sung, for it served as a kind of Welsh hymn-book. It was the beginning of a new era. The following is one of his hymns, that was much used before and after Archdeacon Prys's Psalms appeared. The title is:—Mawlgan am gariad Crist at y byd (or, Praise for Christ's love for the world):—

"Rhyfedd fawr gariad Mab Duw at y byd,
Pan ddeoth ef o'r Nefoedd i'n prynu mor ddrud;
Myfyrwn i gofio am gariad Mab Duw,
A'i fof'n wastadol tra byddom ni byw.
Cyflawmodd y Gyfrith, bodlonodd el Dîd,
Fe beynodd ein pardwn, fe'i bellodd a'i waid;
Fe'n dygodd ni ellwath i beddweh a Duw.
Mollawn yr Iesu tra byddom ni byw.
Fe ddog ar y Croesben ein pechod bob un,
Fe'n gochodd o'n betau a'i wir waed at bun;
Fe'n gwnaeth yn frenhinol officiaid i Ddau,
Mollawn yr Iesu tra byddom ni byw.
Gogiant a gallu a ddech bob pryd,
A fo'r Glân Drinded o'n prynu mor ddrud;
A mawnglod a moliant i'n Prywr a'n Fen,
A d'waded pob Cristion yn wastad, Amen."

This may be taken as a specimen of his style, and of the early hymns that were heard from every mouth in the Principality before the time of Archdeacon Prys.

"It is scarcely credible," says Canon Williams, "with what avidity and pleasure the work was received, read, repeated, and it may be said, sung by the people."

2. Archdeacon Prys (p. 918, ii.), however, is the connecting link between our Hymnology and the Reformation period. It was in the year 1621 that he turned the Psalms into a metrical shape, in order, as he quaintly puts it, "that the Welsh people might be enabled to praise God from their hearts." It was a glorious task. His version of the Psalms is still used. Some have thought it dry and stiff, but on the whole the task was admirably performed. The Ven. Archdeacon Prys was a man of deep learning and piety. He was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he took his degree. He assisted Dr. Morgan in the translation of the Welsh Bible; and from his Metrical Psalms, Englynion, Cywyddau, and other things composed by him, we have abundant evidence that he was a man of culture, taste and capacity, and that he possessed the religious spirit that could enter into sympathetic relations with the authors of the Psalms, and interpret them from his inmost soul. In some cases, indeed, his rendering of the Psalms, and his recasting them as it were in his own mould, sheds a flood of light on their meaning. His version of the latter part of the 110th Psalm has been pointed out as an illustration of this: "He shall drink of the brook in the way, therefore shall he lift up the head."

"O wir frya i'r gyflafan hon,
Fe yf' o'r afon new.
A gaffo, ar ei ffordd yn rhwydd
Yr Arglwydd a'i dyrchaf."

That of itself is a sufficient commentary on the Psalm, and its reference to the sufferings and exaltation of the Messiah. It has been said that the Archdeacon's translation of the Psalms is dry and rugged, and that in several places he is guilty of breaking the fixed rules of poetry, and of frequently ignoring the principle of metres so thoroughly developed in Welsh poetry. This, I believe, is a mistake. The old poet, if fairly dealt with, shows that he understood and recognised the principles of rhyme and metre, and the various ways of measuring and adorning Welsh poetry, and their development into a system and rules of art. I do not say that his metrical Psalms are faultless, but I hold that he is not so guilty of the fault called camaceniad, as some have accused him of being. I believe he has respected the rules of rhyme and rhythm, and where he is thought guilty of trampling on those of metre, he is skilfully avoiding doing so by changing the metrical feet and autometers [cyhydeddau a'r corffannau]. The ninety-second Psalm, in which occurs the famous stanza.—

"Y rhod a blaenwyd yn nhy Dduw, Yn goedwig fyw y tyfiant;
Ac yn nghynieddau ein Duw ni
Y rheiny a fiodenent."

is an excellent translation.

3. Next to the Archdeacon's comes the name of Rowland Vaughan (p. 1308, l.), a gentleman, a scholar, and an excellent poet, although his chief mark was made as a translator of hymns, &c. His translation of that beautiful hymn, "Veni Creator Spiritus," is well-known. Whether he translated the original Latin or the English of Bishop Cosin we are not able to decide. The English and Welsh metres, however, differ, the Welsh being a little shorter than the English, but in sweetness, vividness and strength the Welsh far surpasses the English. We quote the opening stanza of each, together with the original:—

"Veni Creator Spiritus
Mentes inorum visita,
Imple superna gratia,
Quae in creasti pectora."
"Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,
And lighten with celestial fire;
Thou the anointing spirit art
Who dost thy seven-fold gifts impart."
"Tyr'd Yabryd Glân i'n c'lonau ni,
A dod d'oleuni nefot;
Tydi wyt Yabryd Crist, dy ddawn
Sydd fewr lawn a rhagori."

Rowland Vaughan's tr. of the Veni Creator Spiritus, and Gatarnod Pechadur, ought to be remembered, for we have nothing more beautiful in the whole range of Welsh Hymnology.

4. Ellis Wyn o Llanysys (p. 1296, ii.), (or Bardd Cregg) should be mentioned in connection with this period. One of the best Welsh hymns we have was composed by him, and was as much admired then as it is now. It is a funeral hymn, or, as the Welsh people call it, "Emyn Cynhebrwag, neu Wynos." It always appeared in Welsh editions of the Prayer-book after 1710:—

"Myn yw'r Adgyfodlad mawr,
Bydd yw gwawt y bywyd;
Calf pawt a'm cred, medd i' Arglwydd Dduw,
Er trengu, fyw mewn eiddyd.
A'r sawl sy'n byw mewn uffudd gred
Imi, calf drwydded nefot,
Na allo'r Angau brenhin braw,
Ddrwg iddaw yn drag 'wyddol.
Yn wir, yn wir, medd Gwir of Hun,
Fob cyfryw ddyrn sy'n gwranddo
Fy nghair, gan greu'r Tad a'm rhos,os,
Mae ddiranc einicos ganddo.
A wnel ei oreu'n uffudhan,
Trew ffydd i'm gairlan byfryd;
Ni ddaw i faru, ond trowdod aeth,
O angau caeth, i fywyd."

Some of his works are mentioned in his biographical notice, &c.

5. The Rev. Griffith Jones (p. 605, ii.), of Llanddowror, published a hymn-book under the title of Casgliad o Hymnau, gan y Parch. Griffith Jones. (A Collection of Hymns by the Rev. Griffith Jones.) We have not been able to find any hymns composed by this celebrated clergyman. The hymns in his collection were selections from the works of different authors. The Rev. Griffith Jones has been called the morning star of the Reformation in Wales. His voice had been heard speaking against corruption and sins rampant in Wales more than twenty years before Rowland and Harris began to rouse the country. Williams of Pantycelyn refers to this in his elegy to the Rev. Griffith Jones:—

"Dyma'r gŵr a dorrodd allan,
Bonyn barch cyn torri'r waer;
Hed fe hatodd, fe egnodd,
Fe ddech yn gynbauf mawr."

His collection of Hymns is not in use now, though some of the hymns it contained are still sung by Welsh congregations.

6. The Rev. Evans Evans (Glangettrionydd), is the chief hymnologist of this century. He published two books of hymns and tunes between the years 1829 and 1841. He was Vicar of Rhyll, and died in the year 1850. "Ar lan Iorddonen ddofn," and "O Dduw, rho i'm dy hedd," are two of his hymns that have been sung, and are still sung withunction by many Welsh congregations. Most of his hymns are tender and plaintive. His collections of hymns and tunes are not in use in the Welsh Church now, but in every edition of hymns published in Wales by Churchmen and Dissenters, since his time, his hymns always appear among the choicest.

Several hymn-books have appeared for use in the Established Church in Wales, from time to time, since the days of the Rev. Griffith Jones. Often clergymen composed and collected a number of hymns for one or two or more parishes. This seems to have been the state of things during the greater part of the seventeenth century. After that larger collections were published, but with no efforts to secure for the Welsh Church one general hymn-book. The hymns sung by the Church were much the same as those sung by Nonconformists throughout Wales.

7. The Rev. Robert Davies, M.A., published a collection of hymns which proved useful in parts of North Wales. It was called:—

Hymnau ar Wyliau ac Mynyddiau Epiŵys Loegr, wedi eu canu allan o wylth gwahanol awdwr, yn nghyd ag amryw ras newyddion; that is, "Hymns on the Festivals and Fasts of the Church of England, collected from the works of different authors, with several New Hymns, by the Rev. Robert Davies, M.A., of Cambridge, and Curate of Rhuddlan, in Flintshire."

Singularly the book has no date. It was published at Denbigh. Several of its hymns are found in the collections of the present day.

Another hymn-book which was in use in many churches, was called Daniel Jones's Book. The Rev. Daniel Jones was a celebrated clergyman in South Wales. He was Vicar of St. Dogmel's in Pembrokeshire. His book is still used in some parts of Wales. Another collection was called The Bishops' Hymn-book. This was collected and published under the direction of the four Bishops, and was an attempt to provide a book for the general use of the Church in Wales. The attempt was not successful; for some reason or other the work failed to commend itself to the universal favour of the Welsh Church.

8. There are three collections which have had a large circulation, and are now used throughout the Principality. (1) Hymnau Hen a Newydd, or "Hymns Ancient and Modern," London, Haddon, 1868, 555 H.; enlarged in 1875 to 596 H., not to be confounded with the English hymn-book of the same name, though the Introits are added, and it is of a similar school. (2) The Rev. Canon Daniel Evans's book, Hymnau a Thonau, London, Novello, 1865, 504 H.; and the (3) Emynydd by the late Rev. T. Williams, Rector of St. George, dedicated to the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph.

These three books contain many of the same hymns, being selections from the works of Williams of Pantycelyn, Morgan Rhys, Ann Griffiths, Rev. E. Evans, and translations from English collections. These hymns as yet belong to no party in the Church, but are hymns that may be sung by all. Complaints are made by some clergymen that many of the hymns are of too subjective a cast, and that they should be replaced by hymns more objective in character, and there is also a demand for more Sacramental Hymns. There is now [1886] in course of preparation, by the Rev. Elis Roberts, Vicar of Llangwn; and the Rev. W. G. Thomas, Vicar of St. Asaph, a new hymnal which is intended, in accordance with the Bishop of St. Asaph's desire, to be a good and acceptable hymnal for the use of the Church in Wales.

ii. Calvinistic Methodists.

1. During the latter part of the eighteenth century a complete change came over the country. The cold negligent spirit which had characterised the first half, disappeared, the people were shaken from a long deep sleep, and with the revival came a love for hymns and spiritual songs. The Methodist revival is a starting point from which has been unfolded a rich and pure literature that will bear comparison with anything of the same nature produced by the most cultured nations. Foremost in the rank of religious poets stands the Rev. W. Williams (b. 1717, d. 1791) of Pantycelyn. He was a most prolific writer. It is a matter of history that his sacred songs and hymns did more than anything else to arouse the people and create a taste for reading in all parts of Wales. The extensive circulation and the universal reception given to his hymns published at different times between the years 1744 and 1758, must lead us to believe that they carried a mighty influence, and were a great factor in the education of the people of Wales. People who could not themselves read soon learnt the hymns, and thousands of people knew a great many of them by heart. All his works appeared in one volume in 1758, and contained upwards of 800 hymns. They are still in general use in the Established Church, and among the different denominations.

2. Morgan Rhys, of Llanfynydd (d. 1778), worked well to build up Welsh hymnody. There are about two hundred of his hymns now extant. Many of them are the favourite hymns of Welsh congregations. The following:—

"O agor fy Hygaid i welod"

"Dyma Geldwad i'r colledig"

"O gariad, o gariad, arfodol et freint," &c.

have found their way into every collection of hymns by Churchmen and Nonconformists. He was a contemporary of Williams of Pantycelyn, and belonged to the same religious body.

3. The Rev. David Morris, David Charles, and Thomas Charles, have contributed to the hymnology of Wales. The well-known hymn, "O fryniau Caerusalem eoir gwelod," by the Rev. D. Charles, of Caermerthen, is to be found in all Welsh hymnals. The Rev. Thomas Charles, of Bala, the eminent divine, and one of the founders of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and organizer of the Sunday School as it now exists in Wales, has left behind him only one hymn, but of such a beautiful character as to make Welsh people wish he had done more in that direction. This hymn is in the Calvinistic Hymn-book, now in use among that body throughout the country. It begins, "Dyfois fawr trag'wyddol gariad." In that book it is divided into two parts with five verses in each part. The Rev. D. Charles, jun., is the translator of "Jerusalem, my happy home," as "O Salem, fy anwyll gartrefc."

4. The Calvinistic Hymn-book that we have just referred to, was published by the authority of the General Assembly of the Calvinistic Methodists, and is perhaps the most perfect hymnal in Wales. It is the only hymn-book used among the congregations of that body throughout the Principality. A list of the authors from whose works the hymns are selected is given in the beginning of the book, and the number of authors is over fifty, but by far the greatest number of hymns is taken from W. Williams of Pantycelyn. The book was prepared by a committee appointed by the General Assembly, and bears the date of 1869.

iii. Congregational.

1. One of the first editions of hymns, if not the first ever published, for the Congregationalists in Wales, was by the Rev. T. Baddy, in 1703, about 14 years before Williams of Pantycelyn was born, and about 82 years after the appearance of Archdeacon Pryn's Psalms. Baddy published an edition of hymns under the title of Sacramental Hymns, and also a translation of Thomas Doolittle's Christian's Passover, to which were added six hymns to be sung after receiving Holy Communion.

2. In the year 1714, the Rev. D. Lewis, Newport, published Heavenly Songs and Spiritual Hymns. Nothing is known of him beyond the fact that he was a minister of the gospel in South Wales.

3. In 1742, the Rev. Herbert Jenkins issued his Hymnæus Davidol. Mr. Jenkins was a minister at Maidstone, where he d. in 1772, after a ministry of more than 24 years.

4. David Jones, of Caio, is known as the translator of Dr. Watts's works. He published his translation of Watts's Psalms in 1753, and soon afterwards a translation of Watts's Divine Songs.

5. The Rev. Ioan Thomas, of Rhniadr, published many editions of hymns between the years 1776 and 1786, under the titles of Caniadau Sion, and Hymnau yn perthyn i'r Drysorfa Euraidd (or, "Hymns relating to the Golden Treasury" [a Magazine]). There are extant about 187 of his hymns, many of which are still used in many congregations.

6. The Rev. Thomas Williams (q.v.), of Bethesda'r Fro, was a prolific hymn-writer. He published his first collection of hymns in 1812. They became very popular among the Independents, and other denominations in Wales.

7. The Congregationalists have had several collections of hymns since the publication of Watts's Hymns, &c. In 1840, Mr. Evan Edwards, of Mold, brought out a collection, and Dr. Rees published the Perganiedydd (or, "The Sweet Singer") in 1847. Another collection by the Rev. E. Griffiths, of Swansea, appeared in 1837; and Caledfryn's Collection, in 1861. Their best collection is Aberth Mafiant, pub. in Liverpool (?), chief ed. Dr. W. Rees.

8. The collection known as S. R., published in 1841, is still used by some congregations.

9. The collection of hymns and tunes in general use among the Congregationalists at present, is Jones & Stephens, published in 1868; and a 2nd ed. by Stephens in 1869. This last book contains the principal hymns of Williams of Pantycelyn; D. Jones, of Caio, D. Williams, Ann Griffiths, Edward Jones, B. Francis, and others.

iv. Baptists.

1. The first collection of hymns belonging to the Baptist denomination in Wales, was by the Rev. Joseph Harris [Gomer], 1821, and this was their only book for many years. The hymns it contained were principally selections, but it contained also many new hymns by "Gomer" himself and his talented son, Ieuan Ddu, also by the Rev. Benjamin Francis, Titus Lewis, and D. Saunders. It contained about 800 hymns.

2. Later the Rev. Daniel Jones, of Liverpool, made a large collection which was adopted by several congregations, but although it contained many excellent hymns, new and old, it never reached a second edition. After that, the Rev. Robert Jones, Llanllfyni, issued a collection containing new hymns by himself and others. This obtained considerable patronage among the churches in North Wales, and is still in use in some congregations.

3. In the year 1867 another collection made its appearance, compiled by the late Rev. Lewis Jones, of Pwllheli, containing about 1200 hymns. This is extensively used in both South and North Wales.

4. There are also several local hymn-books in use in a few churches in South Wales. In some cases a collection is confined to one congregation.

5. Lately, however, another candidate has made its appearance, and has secured a very large circulation. It is called Llawlyfr Moliant (or, "The Hand-book of Praise"), and was prepared by a committee appointed by the Carnarvon Association, and first published in 1881. It contains 422 hymns and 125 tunes. Between 30,000 and 40,000 copies of this book have been sold.

6. A new edition of J. Harris's (Gomer's) book was published, but arranged differently from the first. "Gomer's" arrangement was topical or doctrinal, but the arrangement of this edition is metrical.

v. Wesleyan Methodists.

1. The Wesleyan Body has a large collection of hymns from different sources which was pub. at Llanidices in 1846. It contains 1040 hymns. This hymnal was prepared by persons appointed by the Synod. The work is also recommended by two Chief Ministers from North Wales, and two from South Wales. Some of the hymns are very good. Several of the hymns are by Williams, of Pantycelyn (with alterations), and other Welsh hymn-writers. Many of the Wesleyan hymns are translated in this hymnal, and with other translations from the English have become favourite hymns among the congregations of the Welsh Wesleyans.

vi. Unitarians.

The Welsh Unitarians, like their brethren in England, developed in the 18th cent. chiefly out of the old Presbyterian congregations, passing through the same stages of Arminian and Arian doctrine. [Cf. Walt. Hymnody.]

1. The first book to be used in their congregations appears to have been the translation of Watts's Psalms, by David Jones, of Caio, 1753.

2. In 1796 Rev. Josiah Rees, of Gellionen, pub. a collection of hymns, and the year following a selection from Watts's Psalms. The bulk of these are D. Jones's translations, but hymns are added from other authors, the editor himself, his father, Owen Rees, Sol. Harris, of Swansea, who contributed a translation of Addison's "Spacious firmament," Jenkin Jones, D. Lloyd, David Davis, &c. A new ed. was pub. in 1834 with considerable additions.

3. The great hymn-writer of the Unitarians is Edward Williams (Iolo Morgannwg), (1745-1828). He pub. in 1812 a collection of 204 original Psalms, and in 1834 his son brought out a further collection, 211 in number. There was a new ed. 1837. Iolo has also left a collection of about 2000 hymns in ms., besides those published.

4. In 1857, Rev. John Jones, of Aberdare, brought out a collection of hymns, 208 being by Edward Williams, 68 by Thomas Evans, and some by the editor and his brother Rees Jones.

5. But this and other earlier collections are now superseded in congregational use by the collection of his son, Rev. R. J. Jones, minister at Aberdare.

"Hymns a Ffwd a Goeddi; or, Hymns of Praise and Prayer," collected by R. J. Jones, Aberdare. Jenkin Howell, Printer, 1878. Second ed., 1883.

This collection of 379 hymns is excellent, and is modelled on the plan of Dr. Martineau's Hymns of Praise and Prayer. It contains hymns from many sources, including translations of several in C. U. The translations of Dr. Newman's hymn, "Lead, kindly light"; "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and of "For ever with the Lord," are especially good. The names of the 64 authors from whom the hymns are taken, and a very useful glossary, form a part of the book. The bulk of the hymns are by Edward Williams. Other authors of original hymns are Thomas Evans, Owen Rees, Josiah Rees, Jenkin Jones, David Davis, Rees Jones (Amonon), William Thomas, the Editor, &c. In style, order and perspicuity, it is second to no book of the kind ever published in Wales.

vii. General Survey.—Passing from the Collections to the Hymns, we find that Welsh hymnody is, to a great extent, a home production, and is almost, but not entirely, confined to home use. There are a dozen or two of Welsh hymns which have become the favourite hymns of English congregations, most of which are by Williams of Pantycelyn. We give the first lines in Welsh and English. Some were composed in English, and have not been translated into Welsh, such as:—

- (1) "Hark! the voice of my beloved."
- (2) "Jesus, lead us with Thy power."
- (3) "O for a strong foundation" (Author unknown).
- (4) "Jesus is all my hope."

The last is one of Williams's English hymns. The following Welsh and English hymns are also by Williams:—

- (5) "Issu, Issu, 'rwyf i'n ddigon."
"Jesus, Thou art all-sufficient."

- (6) "Arglwydd, arwain trwy'r anialwch."
"Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah."
- (7) "O Iachawdwr pechaduriaid."
"Great Redeemer, friend of sinners."
- (8) "Gosod babbll yn ngwlad Gosen."
"Fix, O Lord, a tent in Goshen."
- (9) "F'w y caffi bywydill rheibus."
"Why should cruel beasts be suffered."
- (10) "Dros y brynlau tywyll niwilog."
"O'er the gloomy hills of darkness."

This last hymn is famous in the Missionary fields, and has been translated into many languages. In the Cashmere districts, in India, most successful Mission work is carried on under the care of Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionaries. The Khasi Hymnal, 1877, consists of 242 hymns, some original, but mostly translations from the latest collection of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists, is the official hymn-book of the Mission.

Ewald says that Hebrew poetry has a simplicity and transparency that can scarcely be found anywhere else, and a natural sublimity that knows but little of fixed forms of art; that even when art comes into play, it ever remains unconscious and careless of it. Compared with the poetry of other nations and ancient peoples, it appears to belong to a simple and child-like age of mankind, overflowing with an internal fulness and grace that troubles itself but little with external ornament and nice artistic law. Much of this is applicable to Welsh religious poetry. In spirit, character, figures of speech, and emotional language, it may be aptly compared with the Hebrew. Williams of Pantycelyn, Morgan Rhyu, D. Williams, and Glangetrionydd, and Islwyn, especially turned to the world of nature, attentively regarded it and used it; and entered into deep fellowship with it in its various phases, not for itself alone, but (like the Hebrew prophet), on account of its relation to their own souls. Nature to them spoke the language of heaven; all forces—animal, vegetable, and physical, attracted them to God. Williams of Pantycelyn, in some of his hymns, makes the most beautiful use of the floral world, as well as of the physical. Nothing could excel the faithfulness to nature, the vividness and the graphic powers of these hymns:—

"Planta'r egwyddorion byny,
Yn fy nghalon bob yr un,
Ag sydd megis peraroglan
Yn dy natur di hun;
Blodau byfryd, &c.
F'o'n disgleirio dae'r a nen.
'Rwyf yn cara'r pserifonin
Ar y creigiau eirth y sy,
Ar eu traed ac ar eu dryllaw
'N celsio dringo i fyny fry,
Ar fy nulin,
Minau ddot i ben y bryn."

Williams's true and intense admiration of the beauties of nature, and his reverence for its sublimities, may be seen in the use he made of it to express his own experience, which indeed has been the experience of humanity in all ages of the world.

Next to Williams of Pantycelyn comes another Williams, almost his equal as a poet—David Williams, of Llanbedr-y-Ffrê. Many of his hymns are popular, and some of them are very beautiful. Morgan Rhyu, as a hymn-writer, stands almost abreast with those we have named. Several of his hymns have a sacred interest for thousands of Welshmen; and many have a grand martial sound which is most inspiring. T. Williams, Bethcader-Frô, is another writer of great merit; often in his hymns we have the utterances of penitence and prayer, the breathings of a weary pilgrim, and the "yearning plaintive music of earth's sadder minstrelsy," followed by jubilant strains and peals of victory, as in:—

"Mae pren wedi 'i gael
Mewn dyrys anial ddr,
Yn plygu 'i frig, yn cymbell pawb
I fwyta 'i ffwrthau pur."

Welsh hymn-writers, in common with others, differ in style, but meet on the wide field of subjects suggested by the Gospel. Their works are rich in narrative and scriptural allusion, in praises for redemption, in utterances of penitence and self-abasement, and in vivid description of the Christian warfare. Williams of Pantycelyn surpasses all in the expression of the yearnings of the heavenly home-sickness; in devout tenderness, often rising into rapture, wherewith his faith clasps the crucified Saviour, when wrapt in contemplation of the glory of Jesus as the Head of the Church militant and triumphant; and also in the depth and maturity of his theological thoughts. [See Various.] [W. G. T.]

Wenn mein Stündlein fürhänden ist. N. Herman. [For the Dying.] This beautiful hymn, probably the finest of its author, appeared in his Historien von der Sündfluth, &c., Wittenberg, 1862, in 4 st. of 7 l., entitled, "A spiritual song, in which supplication is made for a happy final hour, on the saying of Augustine:—

'Turbaber, sed non perturbaber, Quia vulnerum Christi recordaber.'"

Thence in Wachernagel, iii. p. 1211, and in Ledderhose's ed. of Herman, p. 104. Wachernagel also gives the hymn as lengthened in the Bonn G. B., 1875, to 11 st., being the above 4, the 5 st. of Herman's hymn, "Da nun Elias seinen Lauf," and 2 st. not by Herman, as v. and x. This st. v. (which Mützell, No. 247, quotes from Drei schöne geistliche Lieder, Cöln, 1874), as altered in the Leipzig G. B., 1862, is generally attached to Herman's original 4 st., as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 842, in 5 st. Tr. as:—

1. When Thou shalt close my fleeting day. A good tr. of st. i.-iii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 247 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. In Kennedy, 1863, it begins, "When death shall close our fleeting day," and this form is in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, and the Avon Hyl., 1871.

2. Mine hour appointed is at hand. A full and very good tr. by R. Massie, contributed as No. 482 to the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 385), and thence in his Lyra Domestica, 1864, p. 134. Repeated in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, and the Moravian H. Bk., 1866.

3. When my last hour is close at hand, My last sad, &c. A full and very good tr. by Edgar Alfred Bowring, made at request of the Queen for use at the funeral of the Prince Consort in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Dec. 23, 1861, and printed as the first of the Two Chorales then sung. St. iv., v., beginning "I shall not in the grave remain," are set to music and were sung. The full tr. is printed, without music, between the two chorales. The second chorale is, "To Thee, O Lord, I yield my spirit" (p. 261, &c.) In full in the H. Bk. for St. Aidan's College, 1814, and omitting st. iii., in Adam's Ch. Pastoral, 1864, the Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, and others. St. iv., v. beginning "I shall not in the grave remain," are given as a separate hymn in Kennedy, 1863.

4. When my appointed hour is come To pass from earth, &c. A good and full tr. in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, No. 67; and repeated in Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, and C. N. Hall's Christ Ch. Hyl., 1876. St. iv., v. are from the Bowring version, No. 3.

5. When my last hour is close at hand, And I must, &c. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 193, rewritten and improved in her Christian Stagers, 1869, p. 143. In the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are: (1) "Jesus, by Thy Almighty pow'r," as No. 812 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 1201). (2) "When now the solemn hour is nigh," by Dr. H. Müllr., 1858, p. 343. (3) "When death arrives, and I must go," by Dr. G. Walker, 1866, p. 104. [J. M.]

Werde munter, mein Gemüthe, Und ihr Sinnen geht harfür. J. Rist. [Evening.] Probably Rist's finest hymn. 1st pub. in the "Dritte Zeilen" of his Himmlische Lieder, Lüneburg, 1642, p. 45, in 12 st. of 8 l., entitled, "A Christian Evening Hymn, with which to commit oneself to the protection of the Most High." Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 26, and most later hymn-books, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 537. The sixth stanza has been a special favourite in Germany, and was (see Koch, viii. 191) repeated in their last moments by Johann Georg, Duke of Mecklenburg, 1075, and Moritz Wilhelm, Duke of Sachse-Weitz, 1718. Tr. as:—

1. Bounce thyself my Soul and gather. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, 1722, p. 113. In his ed., 1732, p. 176, slightly altered, and thence as No. 480, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, a considerably altered form of st. vii., ix., v., beginning, "Author of the whole Creation," was included as No. 762 (1896, No. 1184), and this passed into J. Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, J. A. Latrobe's Coll., 1841, and P. Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861.

2. Sink not yet, my soul, to slumber. A very good tr., omitting st. viii., ix., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 78. Wesley Family, The.—This very remarkable family is almost as interesting from the hymnologist's as from the Church historian's point of view. The father and his three sons all wrote hymns which are suited for public worship, while one of the daughters, Mehetabel, though not strictly speaking a hymn-writer, wrote poetry of a religious tendency, which sometimes rises to a higher level than that which her father or any of her brothers— with the possible exception of Charles—ever reached. The well-known history of the Wesleys at Epworth gives us a vivid picture of the good side of the life of a clergyman's family in the early part of the eighteenth century. Though the admirable wife and mother was unquestionably the central figure of the group, and perhaps the ruling spirit in the household, yet from the stand-point of this work, the father holds the more prominent place, because it was he and not Mrs. Wesley who both set the example of writing poetry himself, and transmitted the taste to his children. To him also, no less than to Mrs. Wesley, may be traced some of the characteristics which are more or less common to all the family. The chief of these characteristics were clear, vigorous, common-sense, a high standard of faith and morals, an acuteness of intellect sharpened to the finest possible point by education, a certain manliness and robustness of character, which is as conspicuous in the females as in the males, and an outspokenness and even brusqueness of manner which, did we not know the affectionate relationship which always subsisted between all the members, we might have expected to have led to ruptures between them. Owing to the great reputation which John Wesley has attained, and the vast numbers of those who revere him as their spiritual leader, the history of the Wesley family is tolerably familiar to most people, and it will therefore be sufficient in this article to touch briefly upon the leading events in the lives of those members of it who were writers of sacred poetry.

1. Samuel Wesley, M.A., the elder, was b. in 1662 at Whitchurch in Dorsetshire, of which parish his father, John Wesley, was Vicar until the Act of Uniformity caused him to resign his living. He was educated at a Dissenting academy by a Mr. Morton, and was designed for the Nonconformist Ministry. But having been, on account of his talents, selected as a champion to defend the dissenters against some severe invectives, and having commenced a course of controversial reading for this purpose, he was led by his studies to embrace the opposite views, and became, and continued through life, a pronounced churchman. With the impetuosity which was a family trait, he set forth on foot to Oxford, and entered himself at Exeter College. In spite of his straitened means, he managed to keep his terms and take his degrees at the University.

He then received Holy Orders and took a curacy of £28 a year. Having held this curacy for a year, he obtained a naval chaplaincy, and then took another curacy in London. About the year 1690 he married Susanna, daughter of Dr. Annesley, a famous Nonconformist minister, and a scion of the noble house of Anglesey. The wife, like the husband, had been brought up as a dissenter, but at the early age of 13 she had come over to the Church of England, and was afterwards a Jacobite in politics. In 1693 Mr. Wesley was presented to the living of South Ormsby in Lincolnshire. He was also chaplain to the Marquis of Normenby, afterwards Duke of Buckingham. In 1697 he was appointed by the Crown to the Rectory of Epworth, and there he spent the remainder of his life, nearly forty years. The first part of his residence at Epworth was marked by a series of troubles arising partly from his pecuniary embarrassments, which increased with his increasing family, partly from the animosity of his parishioners, who resented the part which he felt it his duty to take, as a staunch churchman, in politics, and partly from unfortunate accidents. These troubles reached their climax in 1705, when he was thrown into Lincoln gaol for debt. They are graphically described by his own pen.

"I have been thrown behind," he writes to his good friends at Oxford, "by a series of misfortunes. My Parsonage Barn was blown down ere I had recovered the Taking my Living; My House great part of it burnt down about 2 years since. My Flax, great part of my Income now in my own Hands, I doubt willfully fr'd and burnt in y^e night, whilst I was last in London. My Income sunk about one half by the low price of Grain and my credit lost by the taking away my Regiment. I was brought to Lincoln Castle June 23rd last past. About 3 weeks since my very unkind People, thinking they had not yet done enough, have in y^e night stabbed my 3 cows, w^{ch} were a great part of my poor Numerous Family's Subsistence.—For w^{ch} God forgive them."

Some points in this letter require explanation. When he speaks of being in London, he means on Convocation business; for he was elected Proctor for the Diocese, and in one of his absences Mrs. Wesley instituted those religious meetings at the Rectory which are thought by some to have been the precursors of the Wesleyan Society Meetings. "His Regiment" was a Chaplaincy in the army which had been given him in reward for a poem in praise of the Duke of Marlborough. The last and worst of the many fires through which he suffered was in 1709, when the rectory was entirely burnt down, and the present house erected in its place. The latter part of his time at Epworth was more free from troubles. He met with many generous friends who enabled him to emerge from his pecuniary difficulties, the firmest and most constant of these friends being the admirable Archbishop of York, Dr. John Sharp; his sons grew up to be a comfort and a credit to him; his income was slightly increased by the addition of the neighbouring living of Wroot; and his parishioners gradually became more tractable. The annoyance caused by the famous Epworth Ghost can scarcely be reckoned among his serious troubles. In 1731 he met with an accident which probably hastened his end, and in 1735 he passed away and was buried in Epworth churchyard, leaving behind him the character of an excellent parish priest, a good husband and father, and a man of very considerable abilities and attainments.

Mr. Wesley was a somewhat voluminous writer. His first publication was a volume of poems bearing the unpromising, not to say repulsive, title of Maggots. It appeared in 1685. In 1691 he became the clerical correspondent to the Athenian Gazette (afterwards Mercury) pub. by his brother-in-law, John Dunton. In 1693 appeared an Heroic Poem on the Life of Our Blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. This was dedicated to Queen Mary, and led to his appointment to the living of Epworth. In 1695 he pub. Elegies on Queen Mary and Archbishop Tillotson; and in 1698 A Sermon preached before the Society for the Reformation of Manners. The Elegies are rather fulsome and in bad taste according to the standard of the present day; but it should be remembered that high-flown panegyrics were the fashion of the age. The Sermon is a spirited and energetic defence of the "Societies," which were regarded with some suspicion by many high-churchmen, but of which Mr. Wesley, like his friend Robert Nelson, was a warm supporter. In 1700 he published The Pious Communicant rightly prepared; or a Discourse concerning the Blessed Sacrament, &c., With Prayers and Hymns suited to the several parts of that holy office. To which is added A short Discourse of Baptism. In this work appeared his version of the "Great Hallel" or "Psalms Hymn." In 1704 he pub. The History of the Old and New Testaments in Verse, in three volumes, which he dedicated to Queen Anne. This, like his Life of Christ, was illustrated with numerous and costly engravings. In 1705 he pub. a poem of nearly 600 lines on the "Battle of Blenheim," entitled Marlborough, or The Fate of Europe. For this he was rewarded with the Chaplaincy of Colonel Lepell's regiment; but his political enemies at Epworth soon succeeded in getting him deprived of this office. In 1707 appeared A Reply to Mr. Palmer's Vindication of the Learning, Loyalty, Morals, and most Christian Behaviour of the Dissenters towards the Church of England. This originated in the publication, without his consent or knowledge, of a Letter he wrote to a friend Concerning the Education of the Dissenters in their Private Academies. The letter was attacked anonymously and defended by Mr. Wesley in a pamphlet (1704). The pamphlet was answered by Mr. Palmer. After this, Mr. Wesley's pen seems to have rested for some time; but during the last ten years of his life he was engaged in his elaborate Dissertation on the Book of Job, his incessant labours upon which are said to have hastened his end. This work was dedicated to Queen Caroline, the wife of George II., and presented to her by John Wesley some months after the author's death.

Thus Samuel Wesley had the honour of dedicating works to three Queens. There is yet one more poem attributed to Mr. Wesley, but it seems very doubtful whether he was the real, or at any rate, the sole author. It is entitled Exposit's Hymn to the Creator, and is a sort of Christian Pindaric Ode of considerable length, written in the classical style affected in the 18th century. Dr. Adam Clarke tells us that the ms. is partly in the hand-writing of Mehetabel Wesley; and internal evidence certainly points to her as the chief author; for it bears traces of a far more delicate and elegant touch than Mr. Wesley ever showed that he possessed; while Mehetabel's other writings are fully equal, if not superior, to it. In fact, it must be confessed that the bulk of Mr. Wesley's poetical writings are tedious and prosaic. He had the disadvantage of being over-praised at the outset, and of winning a reputation which he was unable to sustain. Nahum Tate, the Laureate, and others lauded his Heroic Poem in absurdly extravagant terms; Ralph Thoresby refers to him as "that noted poet Mr. Wesley," and Thomas Hearne alludes to him in similar terms. The reaction was sure to come, and his poetry began to be laughed at. Swift and Pope thought very slightly of it, and he appears to have narrowly escaped being pilloried in the Dunciad. But all that he wrote was in the service of virtue and religion; to use the words of his relative, Thomas Fuller,* he "had drunk more of Jordan than of Helicon." Perhaps if he had written less, and spent more time in elaborating what he did write, he might have been more successful; but, after all, the "Divine afflatus" must have been wanting; and the best service which he rendered to sacred poetry was in being father of his children.

ii. Samuel Wesley, M.A., the younger, was the eldest child of Samuel and Susanna Wesley, and was born in or near London in 1691. He received his early education from his mother, who always took a special interest in him as her first-born. In 1704 he went to Westminster School, where he was elected King's Scholar in 1707. Westminster had, under the mastership of Dr. Busby for 55 years, attained the highest reputation for scholarship, and Samuel Wesley, as a classical scholar, was not unworthy of his school. In 1709, Dr. Spratt, Bishop of Rochester, patronised the young scholar, and frequently invited him to Bromley. In 1711 he went with a Westminster student-ship to Christ Church, Oxford, and having taken his degree, returned to Westminster as an Usher. He then received Holy Orders and became an intimate friend of Bishop Atterbury, who was then Dean of Westminster. His intimacy with this prelate was a bar to his advancement, and he was bitterly disappointed at not being appointed under-master at Westminster when that post was vacant. But he was faithful to his friend in his adversity, and the banished prelate warmly appreciated his attachment. In 1732 he was invited, without solicitation, to accept the head-mastership of the Free School at Tiverton, and here he spent the remainder of his life. He strongly disapproved of John and Charles Wesley's proceedings; but though the brothers expressed their opinions to one another with characteristic frankness, the disagreement did not cause any interruption in the friendly relations between them. Samuel Wesley was universally acknowledged to be an honest, conscientious and deeply religious man. He was a most uncompromising High Churchman both in the political and the theological sense of that term; and there is no doubt that he was the mainstay of the Wesley family at Epworth. His kindness to his father and mother was unbounded, and he acted like a father to his younger brothers and sisters. He also took a great interest in works of charity, and was one of the first promoters of the Westminster Infirmary. He died at Tiverton in the 49th year of his age, Nov. 6, 1739. His epitaph in Tiverton Churchyard does not exaggerate his merits, when it describes him as—"a man for his uncommon wit and learning, For the benevolence of his temper, and simplicity of manner, Deservedly loved and esteemed by all: An excellent Preacher; but whose best sermon Was the constant example of an edifying life: So continually and zealously employed in acts of beneficence and charity, That he truly followed His blessed Master's example In going about doing good: Of such scrupulous integrity, That he declined occasions of advancement in the world,

* Fuller, the Church historian, was Mr. Wesley's great uncle on the maternal side.

Through fear of being involved in dangerous compliances; And avoided the usual ways to preferment As studiously as many others seek them."

Samuel Wesley pub. in 1736 A Collection of Poems on several occasions, some of which are full of a rather coarse humour, but all of a good moral and religious tendency. This work was reprinted in 1743, and again by W. Nichols in 1862. Dr. Adam Clarke specifies eight hymns of S. Wesley's composition which were in use among the Methodists of that time (1823). The Wesleyan Hymn-book of the present day contains five, the best-known of which is "The Lord of Sabbath let us praise." His other writings are scarcely of sufficient importance to claim a notice in this brief sketch.

iii. John Wesley, M.A. The life of the next brother is, or easily might be, so familiar to every one in its every detail that it will suffice to give the barest outline of his career. John Wesley was b. at Epworth Rectory in 1703, and, like the rest of the family, received his early education from his mother. He narrowly escaped perishing in the fire which destroyed the rectory house in 1709, and his deliverance made a life-long impression upon him. In 1714 he was nominated on the foundation of Charterhouse by his father's patron, the Duke of Buckingham, and remained at that school until 1720, when he went up, with a scholarship, from Charterhouse to Christ Church, Oxford. Having taken his degree, he received Holy Orders from the Bishop of Oxford (Dr. Potter) in 1725. In 1726 he was elected Fellow of Lincoln College, and remained at Oxford until 1727, when he returned into Lincolnshire to assist his father as curate at Epworth and Wroot. In 1729 he was summoned back to Oxford by his firm friend, Dr. Morley, Rector of Lincoln, to assist in the College tuition. There he found already established the little band of "Oxford Methodists" who immediately placed themselves under his direction. In 1735 he went, as a Missionary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, to Georgia, where a new colony had been founded under the governorship of General Oglethorpe. On his voyage out he was deeply impressed with the piety and Christian courage of some German fellow-travellers, Moravians. During his short ministry in Georgia he met with many discouragements, and returned home saddened and dissatisfied both with himself and his work; but in London he again fell in with the Moravians, especially with Peter Böhler; and one memorable night (May 24, 1738) he went to a meeting in Aldergate Street, where some one was reading Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans. There, "About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given me, that He had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death." From that moment his future course was sealed; and for more than half a century he laboured, through evil report and good report, to spread what he believed to be the everlasting Gospel, travelling more miles, preaching more sermons, publishing more books of a practical sort, and making more converts than any man of his day, or perhaps of any day, and dying at last, March 2, 1791, in harness, at the patriarchal age of 88.

In this sketch we are only concerned with one of the many phases of his infinitely varied life; but that, by no means the least important phase. The popular conception of the division of labour between the two brothers in the Revival, is that John was the preacher, and Charles the hymn-writer. But this is not strictly accurate. On the one hand Charles was also a great preacher, second only to his brother and George Whitefield in the effects which he produced. On the other hand, John by no means relegated to Charles the exclusive task of supplying the people with their hymns. When he speaks of the Evangelistic work, his general expression is, "My brother and I;" and when he speaks of the hymns, it is still, "My brother and I." John Wesley was not the sort of man to depute any part of his work entirely to another; and this part was, in his opinion, one of vital importance. With that wonderful instinct for gauging the popular mind, which was one element in his success, he saw at once that hymns might be utilized, not only for raising the devotion, but also for instructing, and establishing the faith of his disciples. He intended the hymns to be not merely a constituent part of public worship, but also a kind of creed in verse. They were to be "a body of experimental and practical divinity." "In what other publication," he asks in his Preface to the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (Preface, Oct. 20, 1779), "have you so distinct and full an account of Scriptural Christianity; such a declaration of the heights and depths of religion, speculative and practical; so strong cautions against the most plausible errors, particularly those now most prevalent; and so clear directions for making your calling and election sure; for perfecting holiness in the fear of God?" The part which he actually took in writing the hymns, it is not easy to ascertain; but it is certain that more than thirty translations from the German, French and Spanish (chiefly from the German) were exclusively his; and there are some original hymns, admittedly his composition, which are not unworthy to stand by the side of his brother's. His translations from the German especially have had a wide circulation. Although somewhat free as translations they embody the fire and energy of the originals. (For further information see the article on Methodist Hymnody.)

iv. Charles Wesley, M.A. But, after all, it was Charles Wesley who was the great hymn-writer of the Wesley family,—perhaps, taking quantity and quality into consideration, the great hymn-writer of all ages. Charles Wesley was the youngest son and 18th child of Samuel and Susanna Wesley, and was b. at Epworth Rectory, Dec. 18, 1707. In 1716 he went to Westminster School, being provided with a home and board by his elder brother Samuel, then usher at the school, until 1721, when he was elected King's Scholar, and as such received his board and education free. While he was at Westminster, his father received a letter from a wealthy Irishman, asking him if he had a son named Charles, and if so offering to adopt him and make him his heir. The acceptance of the offer was left to Charles himself, who declined it. In 1726 Charles Wesley was elected to a Westminster studentship at Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his degree in 1729, and became a college tutor. In the early part of the same year his religious impressions were much deepened, and he became one of the first band of "Oxford Methodists." In 1735 he went with his brother John to Georgia, as secretary to General Oglethorpe, having before he set out received Deacon's and Priest's Orders on two successive Sundays. His stay in Georgia was very short; he returned to England in 1736, and in 1737 came under the influence of Count Zinzendorf and the Moravians, especially of that remarkable man who had so large a share in moulding John Wesley's career, Peter Böhler, and also of a Mr. Bray, a brazier in Little Britain. On Whitsunday, 1737, he "found rest to his soul," and in 1738 he became curate to his friend, Mr. Stonehouse, Vicar of Islington, but the opposition of the churchwardens was so great that the Vicar consented that he "should preach in his church no more." Henceforth his work was identified with that of his brother John, and he became an indefatigable itinerant and field preacher. On April 8, 1749, he married Miss Sarah Gwynne. His marriage, unlike that of his brother John, was a most happy one; his wife was accustomed to accompany him on his evangelistic journeys, which were as frequent as ever until the year 1756, when he ceased to itinerate, and mainly devoted himself to the care of the Societies in London and Bristol. Bristol was his head-quarters until 1771, when he removed with his family to London, and, besides attending to the Societies, devoted himself much, as he had done in his youth, to the spiritual care of prisoners in Newgate. He had long been troubled about the relations of Methodism to the Church of England, and strongly disapproved of his brother John's "ordinations." Wesley-like, he expressed his disapproval in the most outspoken fashion, but, as in the case of Samuel at an earlier period, the differences between the brothers never led to a breach of friendship. He d. in London, March 29, 1788, and was buried in Marylebone churchyard. His brother John was deeply grieved because he would not consent to be interred in the burial-ground of the City Road Chapel, where he had prepared a grave for himself, but Charles said, "I have lived, and I die, in the Communion of the Church of England, and I will be buried in the yard of my parish church." Eight clergymen of the Church of England bore his pall. He had a large family, four of whom survived him; three sons, who all became distinguished in the musical world, and one daughter, who inherited some of her father's poetical genius. The widow and orphans were treated with the greatest kindness and generosity by John Wesley.

As a hymn-writer Charles Wesley was unique. He is said to have written no less than 6500 hymns, and though, of course, in so vast a number some are of unequal merit, it is perfectly marvellous how many there are which rise to the highest degree of excellence. His feelings on every occasion of importance, whether private or public, found their best expression in a hymn. His own conversion, his own marriage, the earthquake panic, the rumours of an invasion from France, the defeat of Prince Charles Edward at Culloden, the Gordon riots, every Festival of the Christian Church, every doctrine of the Christian Faith, striking scenes in Scripture history, striking scenes which came within his own view, the deaths of friends as they passed away, one by one, before him, all furnished occasions for the exercise of his divine gift. Nor must we forget his hymns for little children, a branch of sacred poetry in which the mantle of Dr. Watts seems to have fallen upon him. It would be simply impossible within our space to enumerate even those of the hymns which have become really classical. The saying that a really good hymn is as rare an appearance as that of a comet is falsified by the work of Charles Wesley; for hymns, which are really good in every respect, flowed from his pen in quick succession, and death alone stopped the course of the perennial stream.

v. Mahetabel Wesley. Here, strictly speaking, the list of hymn-writers in the Wesley family ends; but the sketches would scarcely be complete without some mention of one who, if she did not write hymns, showed plainly that she could have done so with a success which might have rivalled Charles's own. Mahetabel Wesley had an exquisite poetic genius, which was cultivated by a careful study of the best models—Latin and Greek, as well as English, for she was an accomplished scholar. Like all the Wesleys, except Samuel and Charles, she was most unfortunate in her marriage; her husband, Mr. Wright, a plumber and glazier, was quite incapable of appreciating her refined mind, and, being a man of no principle, sought relief from society in which he must have felt uncomfortable in low company and pursuits. The neglected Hetty was most unhappy, but her very unhappiness lent a pathetic tenderness to her poetry, which is one of its chief charms. As her name is unknown among hymn-writers, one or two extracts from her poetry seem necessary to justify the mention of her in this connection at all. What glorious hymns might have been written by the author of the following exquisite lines!

A Mother's Address to her Dying Infant.

"Tender softness! infant mild!
Perfect, parent, brightest child!
Transient lustre! beautiful clay!
Smiling wonder of a day!
Ere the last convulsive start
Rende thy unresisting heart,
Ere the long enduring swoon
Weigh thy precious eyelids down;
Ah regard a mother's moan,
Anguish deeper than thy own,
Fairest eyes, whose dawning light
Late with rapture blest my sight,
Ere your orbs extinguish'd be:
Bend their trembling beams on me!
Drooping sweetness! verdant flower!
Blooming, withering in an hour!
Ere thy gentle breast sustains
Lazest, fiercest, mortal pains,
Hear a suppliant! let me be
Partner in thy destiny!
That where'er the fatal cloud
Must thy radiant temples shroud,

When deadly damps, impending now,
Shall hover round thy destined brow,
Diffusive may thy influence be,
And with the blossom binet the tree!"

It is a great temptation to go on quoting this exquisite writer. Her "Lines written when in deep anguish of spirit"; her "Epitaph on herself"; "The Resignation; a penitent heart hoping in God" (which really might be used as a hymn); her "Farewell to the world"; her "Address to a Husband"—all maintain the same high level. But it must be remembered that Mehetabel Wesley was a hymn-writer only "in posse," not "in esse," and can therefore only claim a passing notice.

[J. H. O.]

The hymns by the Wesley family are naturally most extensively used in the Methodist Societies throughout the world. Usually they are given in the hymn-books with little or no alteration. The American Methodist Episcopal Hymns of 1849 is an exception. The texts in that collection are more mutilated than in all other Methodist hymn-books put together. A large number of the Wesley hymns are annotated under their respective first lines. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) The following lists will complete the number in C. U.:- i. Samuel Wesley, the Elder. Two of his hymns are in C. U. and are annotated as follows:—

1. Behold the Saviour of mankind, p. 130, i.
2. O Thou Who, when I did complain, p. 332, i.

ii. Samuel Wesley, the Younger. Six of his hymns are in C. U., and are annotated as follows:—

1. From whence these dire portents around, p. 406, ii.
2. Hail, Father, Whose creasing call, p. 477, ii.
3. Hail, God the Son in glory crowned, p. 477, ii.
4. Hail, Holy Ghost, Jehovah, Third, p. 477, ii.
5. The Lord of Sabbath, let us praise, p. 1153, ii.
6. The morning flowers display their sweets, p. 1155, i.

John and Charles Wesley. In the article on Methodist Hymnody, p. 795, ii., a full and detailed account of the hymns published by the two brothers is given. As a guide in indicating the sources of their hymns now in common use, and not annotated under their own first lines, we subjoin a Table of Titles, Dates, and Contents of their works which was compiled by the writer of the article on Methodist Hymnody. The Title-pages of those works which contain hymns by writers other than J. & C. Wesley are printed in italics.

It must be noted that the Wesleyan authorities, in the revised edition of their Coll. of Hys. for the Use of the People called Methodists, 1875, decline to distinguish the hymns which appeared in the joint works of the two brothers. They say:—

"The letter W. is affixed to those hymns which first appeared in publications for which the Wesleys were jointly responsible; in this case it cannot be determined with certainty to which of the two brothers a hymn should be ascribed." (Preface to the "Index to the Hymns.")

It has been the common practice, however for a hundred years or more to ascribe all translations from the German to John Wesley, as he only of the two brothers knew that language; and to assign to Charles Wesley all the original hymns except such as are traceable to John Wesley through his Journals and other works. In this Dictionary this course has been adopted throughout.

Two works remain to be noted: (1) Collection of Psalms and Hymns, Charles Town. Printed by Lewis Timothy, 1737; and (2) The Poetical Works of John and Charles Wesley: Reprinted from the Originals, with the last corrections of the Authors; together with the Poems of Charles Wesley not before Published. Collected and Arranged by G. Osborn, D.D. Lond.: Wesleyan-Methodist Conference Office, 1868-72. In 13 vols. The first of these works has been reprinted in facsimile from the only known copy now existing, together with a Preface by Dr. Osborn. Lond.: T. Woolmer, 1882. The second contains facsimile reprints of the titles of the above Table of Titles; Introductions and notes by Dr. Osborn; the usual Index of first lines to vols. i-viii.; and an Index to the first line of every verse (except the first in vols. i-viii.), extending to 299 pages, the joint work of the Rev. Julius Brigg, then of Hawes, Yorkshire, and Mr. William Sugden, B.A., Head Master of the Wesleyan Normal Training Institution, Westminster. The accuracy and completeness of the latter Index merit the highest praise.

In addition to a large number of hymns from the above works which are annotated elsewhere in this Dictionary (see Index of Authors and Translators) the following are also in C. U. The sublines indicate altered texts of or centos from the hymns:—

The translations by John Wesley from the German are given in vols. i. ii. of the Poetical Works, and number 32. They can be easily identified and their history, together with the history of the originals, traced through the Index of Authors and Translators.

The foregoing list of original hymns, in addition to those by the Wesleys annotated elsewhere, all of which are in O. U. at the present time, and most of which have formed an important part of Methodist hymnody for more than a hundred years, shows the enormous influence of the Wesleys on the English hymnody of the nineteenth century. West, Robert Athow, an editor and author, was b. in England in 1802. In 1843 he went to America, and was the official reporter of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844. He was also one of the committee appointed by that Conference to prepare a Standard edition of the Methodist Hymn Book. That collection appeared as Hymns for the Use of The Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1849. To it West contributed two hymns—(1) "Come, let us tune our loftiest song" (Praise of Jesus), and (2) "Now, Lord, fulfil Thy faithful word" (On behalf of Ministers). Wetzel, Johann Caspar, s. of Johann Michael Wetzel, shoemaker at Meiningen, was b. at Meiningen, Feb. 22, 1691. He matriculated, at Easter, 1711, as a student of theology at the University of Jena, and afterwards went to Halle. After varied tutorial work, &c., he was appointed, in 1727, diaconus at Römbild, where he eventually became archidiaconus. While returning from a visit to the Bad Liebenstein he was unable to proceed further than Meiningen, where he d. Aug. 6, 1755 (Koch, v. 507, &c.).

Wetzel claims notice here as the best of the earlier German hymnologists. His two most important works, in which he gives notices of more than 1200 hymn-writers; are (1) Hymnopoecographia, pub. at Herrstadt, pt. I. 1719, II. 1721, III. 1724, iv. 1729; and (2) Analecra Hymnica, pub. at Gotha, vol. i. pts. 1-3 in 1781, pts. 4-6 in 1782; vol. II. pt. I in 1783, pts. 2-4 in 1784, pts. 5, 6 in 1785. The style of these works is execrable, but they contain much useful matter, and still rank as standard authorities.

Of Wetzel's original hymns, 62 in all, the most important appeared as his Heilige und dem Herrn gewidmete Andachts-Früchte, in 5 pts., each with 10 hymns, pub. at Coburg; i., II. in 1718; III., iv., in 1721; v. in 1722. One of these hymns has been tr., viz. :—

Gott sorgt für mich, was soll ich sorgen. Trust in God, 1st pub. in pt. v., Coburg, 1722 as above, as No. vii., entitled a "Devotional hymn on the Providence of God," and in 9 st. of 6 l., each stanza beginning and ending with the words, "Gott sorgt für mich." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 41 erroneously ascribed to B. Schmolck. Tr. as "God cares for me; why need I sorrow," by Miss Montgton, 1863, p. 20. [J. M.]

What ails my heart, that in my breast? G. Withers. [Sleeplessness.] 1st pub. in his Hallelujah; or, Britain's Second Remembrance. London, 1641, Pt. i., No. 20, in 4 st. of 8 l. It is introduced by the following note :—

"When we cannot sleep at reasonable times, vain musings and want of right meditating on God, is frequently chief cause of unrest. Therefore this meditation directeth to the remedy of such untimely watchfulness."

The hymn is included in Farr's reprint of the Hallelujah in 1857, and thence it passed, with slight alterations, into Kennedy, 1863, No. 845. [W. T. B.]

What are these in bright array? J. Montgomery. [All Saints.] Pub. in his Greenland and other Poems, 1819, p. 185, in 8 st. of 8 l., and headed "Saints in heaven." It was repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 204; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 559; and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 237. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and America, and sometimes as, "Who are these in bright array?" In B. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, it is rendered into Latin as "Quid sint cohortes lucidæ." [J. J.]

What care the saints of God, if they. G. Moultrie. [Confessors.] Pub. in his Hymns and Lyrics, 1867, p. 150, in 9 st. of 6 l., and headed "Hymn for Festival of Confessors." In an abbreviated form it is found in the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

What countless crowd on Zion stands. J. Austin. [All Saints.] 1st pub. in his posthumous Hymns, 1836, p. 37, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in The Child's Christian Year, 1841. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, st. i.-iii., vi., iv. are re-written (from S.S.S.G.) in 6 st. [J. J.]

What grace, O Lord, and beauty shone. Sir E. Denny. [The love of Jesus.] Appeared in his Sel. of Hys., 1639, No. 32, in 5 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1848, p. 71, and later editions. It has passed into most of the hymn-books of the Plymouth Brethren, and also into several other collections. [J. J.]

What is earth with all its treasures?

[Missions.] Appeared anonymously in W. Urwick's Coll. of Hys. adapted to Cong. Worship, Dublin, 1823, No. 843, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The dark world enlightened by the Saviour's glory." In addition to an abbreviated form beginning with st. i. there are also "Earth is but the land of shadows" (st. ii.), and "O Thou Sun of glorious splendour" (st. iii.) in C. U. [J. J.]

What is the thing of highest [greatest] price? J. Montgomery. [The Soul.] Pub. in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 504, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Original Hymns, 1853. It is found in a few modern books in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

What is the world? a wildering maze. J. Montgomery. [Holy Scripture a Light.] In his Poetical Works, 1851, p. 304, Montgomery dates this hymn "1815"; but in his newspaper, the Sheffield Iris, of 1817, he printed it in 3 st. of 6 l., and dated it "February, 1817." Under these circumstances it is difficult to say which of these dates is correct. The hymn was repeated in Montgomery's Greenland and Other Poems, 1813, p. 187; his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 548; his Poetical Works, 1828, and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 26. It is also found in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and in several of the older and modern hymn-books. It is not, however, a good example of Montgomery's powers as a writer of hymns. [J. J.]

What liberty so glad and gay? J. Keble. [Forgiveness of Enemies.] Written Feb. 7, 1826, on the words "Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him?" St. Matt. xviii. 21, and pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 12 st. of 4 l. as the poem for the 22nd S. after Trinity. In Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835, st. x.-xii. were given as "Thou ransom'd sinner, wouldst thou know?" This has been repeated in later collections, but is not in extensive use. [J. J.]

What! never speak one evil word? C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] This cento is thus composed: St. l., ii. are from Wesley's Short Hymns, 1762, vol. ii., No. 753, on James iii. 2; and st. iii., iv. from the same, vol. i., No. 854, on Ps. ciii. 8. In this form it appeared in the Wes. II. Bk., 1780, No. 353, and has been repeated in several collections. Original texts in P. Works, 1868-73, vols. xiii. and ix. [J. J.]

What shall we ask of God in prayer? J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] Written in 1818, and first printed on a broadsheet with Montgomery's "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," "Lord, teach us how to pray," and "Thou, God, art a consuming fire," for use in the Nonconformist Sunday schools in Sheffield and the neighbourhood. It was included in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 281, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed, "Ask and ye shall receive that your joy may be full." In Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 483, and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 64, it was given with the change, in st. iv., l. 1 of "with" to "by," and in 8 st. of 4 l. It is usually given in an abbreviated form. In some American hymn-books a cento from this hymn is given as "Father of all our mercies, Thou." [J. J.]

What shall we render. E. Parson, née Hooker. [Praise.] 1st pub. in J. Curwen's Child's Own H. Bk., 1840; and subsequently in Mrs. Parson's Willing-Class Hymns. It was composed for the Air by Mozart, commonly known as "Life let us cherish," and is given in several collections. [J. J.]

What sudden blaze of song. J. Keble. [Christmas.] Pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 6 l., as the poem for Christmas Day. In the American Church Pastorals, Boston, 1864, st. i., v., ix. are given in an altered form, but beginning with the same first line. [J. J.]

What tho' my frail eyelids refuse. A. M. Toplady. [At Night.] Pub. in the Gospel Magazine, Dec. 1774, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled "A Chamber Hymn," and signed "Minimus." Also in Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns, &c., 1860. It was given in its original form in several of the older hymn-books, but in Collyer's Coll., 1812, it was divided into two parts, Pt. i. being composed of st. i.-iii., and Pt. ii., beginning, "Inspirer and Hearer of prayer," of st. iv.-vi. From that date the first part fell gradually out of use, whilst the second part rose to great popularity, and has been rendered into several languages. The tr. into Latin by R. Bingham in his Hymns. Christ. Latina, 1871, begins, "O Tu precum inspirator." [J. J.]

What various hindrances we meet. W. Cowper. [Exhortation to Prayer.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 60, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Exhortation to Prayer." It has passed into numerous collections, and sometimes in an abbreviated form. Dr. Hatfield, in his Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, dates it 1772. By this he probably means the date of its composition. We cannot, however, find any authority for that date. In R. Bingham's Hymns. Christ. Latina, 1871, 5 stanzas are rendered into Latin as "Si precibus solium Genitoris adire velimus." [J. J.]

What'er to Thee, our Lord, belongs. [Holy Baptism.] This is the first of 19 "Single Verses on Baptism" given in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, Nos. 455-476. The authors of these stanzas are: st. l., iii.-v., B. Beddome; ii. xi., J. Stennett; vii.-ix., H. F.; x., H.; xii., G.; and vi. and xiii. anonymous, but possibly by Rippon. The object of this arrangement of these stanzas is thus stated by Rippon in a note:—

"As it is now pretty common to sing by the water side, and as some of our brethren in the country give out a verse or two, while they are administering the ordinance, it is hoped these single verses will be acceptable."

In the American Bap. Hymn (and Tune) Bk., Philadelphia, 1871, st. iii., iv. and vi. are given as "Behold the grave where Jesus lay." The same arrangement with the addition of st. vii. had previously appeared in the Baptist edition of the Sabbath H. Bk., 1858. [J. J.]

When at this distance, Lord, we trace. P. Doddridge. [Transfiguration.] This hymn is No. 90 in the v. ms., but is undated. It was included, without alteration, in J. Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 188, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again, but with alterations, in J. D. Humphreys's edition of the same, 1839, No. 204. The original text is that in C. U. [J. J.]

When bending o'er [on] the brink of life. W. B. Collyer. [Death anticipated.] Pub. in his Coll., &c., 1812, No. 827, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is found in several modern hymnals, but usually in an abbreviated form. It presents death in its saddest form, and embodies a prayer for divine assistance. In several American collections, including the Meth. Episc. Hymns, 1849; their new Meth. Hymnal, 1878; and others, it is rewritten in a. n. as, "When on the brink of death." [J. J.]

When blooming youth is snatched away. Anne Steele. [Death and Burial of a Young Person.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i. p. 106, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "At the Funeral of a Young Person." Also given in the 1780 ed. of the Poems, and in D. Sodgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 66. The form of the text usually found in American hymn-books is "When those we love are snatched away." This was given in the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, in 5 st., and is found in later hymnals. Another arrangement in 8 st. is in use in G. Britain. It appeared in Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833, as "When youth or age is snatched away." The text in Common Praise, 1879, is in 5 st., the last of the original being omitted, and the rest somewhat altered. [J. J.]

When brothers part for manhood's race. J. Koble. [St. Andrews.] Written Jan. 27, 1822, and included in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 4 l. Two centos from it are in C. U.; the first beginning with the opening stanza, and the second with st. vi., "First seek thy [the] Saviour out, and dwell." Their use is limited. [J. J.]

When came in flesh the Incarnate Word. J. Anstee. [Christmas.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, 1836, p. 17, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is given in Hys. for the Use of the University of Oxford in St. Mary's Church, 1872, and several other modern collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

When Christ His body up had borne. H. More. [Whitsuntide.] This is the opening line of a hymn in 14 st. of 4 l., entitled "An Hymn upon the Descent of the Holy Ghost at the Day of Pentecost," which appeared in More's Divine Hymns appended to his Divine Dialogues, &c., Lond. 1668. This hymn was rewritten in 15 st. by J. Wesley, and included in the Wesley Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739, beginning "When Christ had left his flock below." From this revision, st. vi.-xv., slightly altered, were given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as, "Father, if justly still we claim" (No. 444); and "On all the earth Thy Spirit shower" (No. 445). These hymns have been repeated in many collections in G. Britain and America. Wesley's full revised text is in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 165. The first stanza of "Father, if justly still we claim" is by J. Wesley (1739). Dr. More's original text of the remaining stanzas of the two hymns is:—

- vi. "The Spirit of holy Zeal and Love
And of Discerning give us, Lord;
The Spirit of Power from above,
Of Unity and good Accord:
- vii. "The Spirit of convincing Speech,
Such as will every Conscience smite,
And to the heart of each man reach,
And sin and Error put to flight:
- viii. "The Spirit of refining Fire,
Searching the inmost of the mind,
To purge all foul and fell desire,
And kindle Life more pure and kind.
- ix. "The Spirit of Faith in this thy Day
Of Power against the force of Sin,
That through this Faith we ever may Against our Lute the Conquests win.
- x. "Pour down thy Spirit of inward Life,
Which in our hearts thy laws may write,
That without any pain or strife
We naturally may do what's right.
- xi. "On all the Earth thy Spirit pour,
In righteousness it to renew:
That Satan's Kingdom 's may o'repow'r,
And to Christ's Sceptre all subdue.
- xii. "Like mighty Wind or Torrent fierce
Let it Withstanders all o'errun,
And every wicked law reverse,
That Faith and Love may make all one.
- xiii. "Let Peace and Joy in each place spring,
And Righteousness, the Spirits fruits,
With Meekness, Friendship, and each thing
That with the Christian Spirit fits.
- xiv. "Grant this, O holy God and true,
Who th' ancient Prophecs didst inspire:
Haste to perform thy Promise due,
As all thy Servants thee desire."

A comparison of Wesley's version with this original shows most forcibly how a well conceived but indifferently executed composition may be turned to good account by an experienced hand. The rest of More's hymns, six in all, are worthy of attention. [J. J.]

When Christ the Lord would [shall] come on earth. H. Alford. [St. John Baptist.] In the Author's Hys. for the Sundays and Festivals throughout the Year, 1836, this hymn was appointed for St. John Baptist's Day; but on its transference to his Ps. & Hys., 1844, it was given for the 3rd S. in Advent, No. vi., and marked in error as having been pub. in that collection for the first time. It is found in his Year of Praise, 1867, and Poetical Works, in the 8th ed. of which it is dated 1835. Orig. text, in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It is in somewhat extensive use, and sometimes in an altered form, as in the Murray's Hymnal, 1852, with the same first line, but much altered and with the addition of a new stanza. [J. J.]

When darkness long has veiled my mind. W. Cooper. [Peace.] 1st pub. in B. Conyer's Coll., 1772, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Trials overcome by Hope." When included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 23, it was expanded into 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Peace after a Storm." In its full, or in an abbreviated form, it is found in several hymn-books in G. Britain and America, both old and new. Although not referred to, so far as we can find, in Cowper's Memoirs, it was evidently written at or about the same time as his "God moves in a mysterious way" (p. 432, l.). [J. J.]

When gathering clouds around I view. Sir R. Grant. [In Trial and Temptation.] Appeared first in the Christian Observer, Feb. 1806, in 6 st. of 6 l., and signed "E. Y. D. R."; and again in the same maga-time in Feb. 1812, accompanied with a letter explaining that it had been sent in an altered form, and signed as before. In 1835, Elliott included it in his Ps. and Hys., No. 342, with a note in the Preface to the effect that it had been revised by the Author for that Collection. It was also given in the Author's Sacred Poems (pub. by his brother) in 1839, p. 3, the text being that of 1812. Three texts of this hymn thus exist, and all by the author: (1) the first in the Christian Observer, 1806; (2) the second in the same, 1812, and in the Sacred Poems, 1839; (3) and the third in Elliott's Ps. and Hys., 1835. Of these the second text is that usually received as authorized, and is given us such in Lyra Britannica, 1867, and in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862. The hymn is based on Heb. iv. 15, "For we have not a High Priest," &c., and is often given in an abbreviated form. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, 4 stanzas are rendered into Latin as: "Quum circumcirca glomerantis nubila cornam." [J. J.]

When God of old came down from heaven. J. Kelle. [Whitsuntide.] 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 4 l., as the poem for Whitsunday. In an abbreviated form it is in extensive use. A cento therefrom is given in a few American hymn-books as "Lo, when the Spirit of our God." In Bp. Wordsworth's (St. Andrews) Series Collectarium, &c., 1890, sta. i., iii., iv., vi., vii., ix., and xi. are rendered into Latin as "Olim cum Dominus superâ descendit ab arce." [J. J.]

When His lost sheep the Shepherd finds. [The Lost Sheep.] This appeared in the Uttoxeter Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1805 (p. 1084, ii.), and is also in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and later hymnals, and is sometimes given (but in error) as an altered form of J. Needham's "When some kind shepherd from his fold" (p. 799, ii.). [J. J.]

When I can read my title clear. I. Watts. [Assurance of Faith and Hope.] Appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is headed "The Hopes of Heaven our Support under Trials on Earth." Its use in G. Britain and America is very extensive. The text has undergone several alterations at the hands of Bickersteth in his Ps. & Hys., 1833; Elliott in his Ps. & Hys., 1835, and others. The most important is Bickersteth's rendering of st. iv.:-

"There, anchor'd safe, my weary soul
Shall find eternal rest,
Nor storms shall beat, nor billows roll,
Nor fears assail my breast."

It is hard to see that this is an improvement upon Watts's original:-

"There shall I bathe my weary soul
In seas of heavenly rest,
And not a wave of trouble roll
Across my peaceful breast."

The original text of the whole hymn, as in the Hy. Comp., is that most commonly used. Miller (Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 140) points out that the opening lines of the hymn,-

"When I can read my title clear To mansions in the skies," are used by Cowper in his poem on Trust (pub. in 1782), in his comparison of the lot of Voltaire and that of the poor and believing cottager, who

'Just knows, and knows no more, her Bible true-
A truth the brilliant Frenchman never knew';
And in that charter reads with sparkling eyes,
Her title to a treasure in the skies." [J. J.]

When I can trust my all with God. J. Conder. [Resignation.] Written on the death of one of his children, Jan. 1818, and included in his Star in the East, &c., 1824, p. 113, in 5 st. of 6 l., headed "On the death of an Infant Son," and accompanied with the footnote "C. J. C. ob. Jan. 1818." In Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1836, 3 st. were given as No. 311; and these were repeated in his posthumous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856. This form of the hymn is that in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

When I resolved to watch my thoughts. Anne Steele. [Pa. xxxix.] Pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. ii., p. 168, in 13 st. of 4 l.; in the 2nd ed. of the Poems, 1780; and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 171. It is not in C. U. in its original form; but from it the following are taken:-

1. Almighty Maker of my [our] frame. This cento, composed of st. iv.-vii. was given in Rippon's Bp. Sel., 1787, as a hymn on "The Shortness of Life." It is found in many hymnals in G. Britain and America.
2. O God, to Whom my life I owe. This, in the Primitive Methodist Hymnal, 1887, is the above cento with the opening stanza rewritten. [J. J.]

When I survey life's varied scene. Anne Steele. [Resignation.] 1st. pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i., p. 134, in 10 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Desiring Resignation and Thankfulness." It was repeated in the new ed. of her Poems, &c., 1780; and again in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. As a whole it is not in C. U. From it, however, the following centos are found in modern hymn-books:-

1. When I survey life's varied scene, in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1875, is composed of st. i., ii., viii. and ix., slightly altered.
2. Father, whate'er of earthly bliss. This was given in Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 214, and thus came into use in the Church of England. From Thyglady it passed into Rippon's Bp. Sel., 1787, and thence into modern Nonconformist collections. Its use is extensive. It is composed of st. viii., ix., slightly altered. A Latin rendering, "Quidquid optatum famulo precant," by the Rev. R. Bingham, was pub. in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871.
3. Lord, teach me to adore Thy hand. No. 179, in the Scottish Pres. Hymnal, 1876, is composed of st. ii., viii., ix. and x. unaltered.
4. My God, whate'er of earthly bliss. In T. Darling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, 1887. It is composed of st. viii.-x., and a doxology not in the original.

Taking these centos together this hymn has a wider circulation than any other of Miss Steele's compositions. [J. J.]

When I survey the wondrous Cross. I. Watts. [Good Friday.] This, the most popular and widely used of Watts's hymns, appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, and in the enlarged ed. 1709, as:-

"Crucifixion to the World, by the Cross of Christ. Gal. vi. 14.

1. "When I survey the wondrous Cross
On which the Prince of Glory dy'd,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour Contempt on all my Pride.
2. "Forbid it, Lord, that I should boast
Save in the Death of Christ my God;
All the vain Things that charm me most,
I sacrifice them to his Blood.

3. * See from his Head, his Hands, his Feet,
Sorrow and Love flow mingled down!
Did e'er such Love and Sorrow meet,
Or Thorns compose for rich a Crown!
4. * [His dying Crimson, like a Robe,
Spreads o'er his Body on the Tree;
Then am I dead to all the Globe,
And all the Globe is dead to me.]
5. * Were the whole Realm of Nature mine,
That were a Prefate far too small;
Love to amaze, to divine,
Demands my Soul, my Life, my All."

The first to popularize the four-stanza form of the hymn (st. iv. being omitted) was G. Whitefield in the 1757 Suppl. to his Coll. of Hymns. It came rapidly into general use. In common with most of the older hymns a few alterations have crept into the text, and in some instances have been received with favour by modern compilers. These include:

- St. ii. l. 2. "Save in the Cross," Madon, 1760.
St. iii. l. 2. "Love flow mingling," Salisbury, 1857.
St. iv. l. 2. "That were a tribute," Cotterill, 1819.
"That were an offering," Stowell, 1821.

The most extensive mutilations of the text were made by T. Cotterill in his Sel., 1819; E. Bickersteth in his Christian Psalmody, 1833; W. J. Hall in his Mitre H. Bk. 1836; J. Keble in his Salisbury H. Bk. 1857; and T. Darling in his Hym. for the Church of England, 1857. Although Mr. Darling's text was the only one condemned by Lord Selborne in his English Church Hymnody at the York Church Congress in 1866, the mutilations by others were equally bad, and would have justified him in saying of them all, as he did of Mr. Darling's text in particular:—

"There is just enough of Watts left here to remind one of Horace's saying, that you may know the remains of a poet even when he is torn to pieces."

In the 1857 Appendix to Murray's Hymnal; in the Salisbury H. Bk. 1867; in H. A. & M. 1861 and 1875; in the Hymnary, 1872; and in one or two others a doxology has been added, but this practice has not been received with general favour. One of the most curious examples of a hymn turned upside down, and mutilated in addition, is Basil Woodd's version of this hymn beginning "Arlae, my soul, with wonder see," in his undated Ps. of David, &c. (circa 1810), No. 198.

The four-stanza form of this hymn has been translated into numerous languages and dialects. The renderings into Latin include: "Quando admirandam Crucem," by R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871; and "Mirabilem videns Crucem," by H. M. Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876. The five-stanza form of the text as in H. A. & M. (st. v. being by the compilers) is tr. in Bp. Wordsworth's (St. Andrews) Series Collectarum, 1890, as "Cum miram intueor, de qua Præstantior omni." In popularity and use in all English speaking countries, in its original or in a slightly altered form, this hymn is one of the four which stand at the head of all hymns in the English language. The remaining three are, "Awake, my soul, and with the sun;" "Hark! the herald angels sing;" and "Rock of Ages, cleft for me." (See English Hymnody, Early, §§ XII. XIII., and the NEW SUPPLEMENT.) [J. J.]

When Israel freed from Pharaoh's hand. I. Watts. [Ps. cxiv.] Written in 1712, and sent by Watts, with a letter, to the Spectator, in which it appeared on "Tuesday, August 19, 1712," No. 461, in 6 st. of 4 l. as a rendering of Ps. cxiv. In the letter Watts explained the origin of his rendering, it being to show the force and wisdom of retaining the Name of God to the end of the paraphrase as in the Psalm, and not to introduce it at the beginning as had been previously done by others. The paraphrase was given in Watts's Ps. of David, 1719, with the alteration of st. ii. ll. 3, 4 from—

"The streams of Jordan saw, and fled With backward current to their head," to—

"Jordan beheld their march, and fled
With backward current to his head."

The New Cong., 1859, and others give the text of 1719. [J. J.]

When Israel, of the Lord beloved.
Str. W. Scott. [Omnipresence.] This hymn appeared in Scott's Iwashek, 1817, Chap. 40. It is thus introduced:—

"It was in the twilight of the day when her trial, if it could be called such, had taken place, that a low knock was heard at Rebecca's prison-chamber. It disturbed not the inmate, who was then engaged in the evening prayer recommended by her religion, and which concluded with a hymn we have ventured thus to translate into English,

"When Israel, of the Lord beloved,
Out of the land of bondage came," &c.

The hymn extended to 4 st. of 8 l. The imaginary trial referred to was that of Rebecca the Jewess by a court of the Order of the Templars for sorcery, the charge being that she had bewitched one Brian de Bois-Guilbert, one of the Knights, into breaking several of the rules of the Order. When stripped of these romantic surroundings, it yet remains a striking hymn. It is based on Ps. cv. It is found in several modern collections; and has been rendered into Latin by H. M. Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, as "Exeunte Israele Servitute de crudeli." In the American Unitarian Hym. of the Spirit, pt. iii., is given as, "O present still, though still unseen." [J. J.]

When Israel press'd by Pharaoh, stood.
J. Montgomery. [Thanksgiving on being rescued from Drowning.] Pub. in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 529, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "For a Sermon before a Society for the Recovery of persons apparently Drowned." It was repeated in his Orig. Hym. 1853, p. 308. [J. J.]

When Jesus left His Father's throne.
J. Montgomery. [Child's Hymn.] From a flyleaf preserved with the "a. ms." we find this hymn was written for the Hallam Sunday School, near Sheffield, and is dated as having been used there on Oct. 26, 1816. In 1819 it was given in Cotterill's Sel., No. 258, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Children Praising Christ." In 1825 it was republished in a re-written and extended form of 8 st. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 537, with the new title, "Children recalling Christ's Example and His Love." This text and title were repeated in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 326, the added stanzas being iii., iv., and v. In Cotterill's Sel. the opening line is "When Jesus left the throne of God." In some collections the opening line is "When Jesus left His heavenly home." [J. J.]

When languor and disease invade.
A. M. Toplady. [Affliction and Death.] In the Lady Huntingdon Coll. of Hys., 1780, there is as No. 288, "When languor and disease invade," in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Meditation on God's Love," and as No. 263 "Sweet to rejoice in lively hope," in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Funeral," the two hymns thus making 14 st. of 4 l. These two hymns, with an additional stanza (x.), were given in the Gospel Magazine, Oct. 1793, as a single poem, with this note appended thereto:—

"This hymn was written for the late Countess of Huntingdon, at her request, when in illness, by the Rev. Mr. Toplady, and kindly given to the publisher as it originally stood, by the Right Hon. Lady Ann Erskine."

From the poem as thus printed we find that No. 288 above was composed of st. i.—vii. and xiv., and No. 263 of st. viii., ix., xi.—xiii. and xv. Stanza x. was not used. The centos from this poem now in C. U. are:—

1. How blest to rest in lively hope (st. viii.). In Windle's Met. Psalter and Hym.
 2. Sweet to reflect how grace divine (st. iv.). In some American collections.
 3. Sweet to rejoice in lively hope (st. viii.). In a few American collections.
 4. 'Tis sweet to rest in lively hope (st. viii.). In C. U. in G. Britain and America.
 5. When languor and disease invade (st. i.). In extensive use in most English-speaking countries.
- The full text of the poem is in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1890. [J. J.]

When like a stranger on our sphere.
J. Montgomery. [Public Hospitals.] Of this hymn there are two texts, details of which are as follows:—(1) It was written for the opening of the Sheffield Infirmary, October, 1797, and printed in Montgomery's Iris newspaper, Oct. 6, 1797. In 1819 it was included in Cotterill's Sel., No. 246, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled "At a Sermon for an Infirmary." In 1825 this text was repeated, with slight alterations, in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 531, broken into 8 st. of 4 l., entitled "For a Public Hospital." (2) Amongst the M. MSS. there is a MS. of this hymn in 10 st., and thus dated: "Revised, June 2, 1844." It is this revised text which was given by Montgomery in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 286, under the heading "Hymn for the Opening of the Sheffield Infirmary, October, 1797," and from which Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymns, Christ., 1863, and other modern editors have taken their text. The older hymn-books have the text as in Cotterill's Sel., whilst most of the modern collections follow that of the Original Hymns, 1853. [J. J.]

When marshall'd on the nightly plain. H. K. White. [The Star of Bethlehem.] Appeared in Collyer's Sel., 1812, No. 862, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Star of Bethlehem." It has much biographical interest, in that it gives a poetical version of the author's change of mind from a species of scepticism to the faith of Christ. The special personal interest is introduced with st. iii., "Once on the raging seas I rode." This also forms the beginning of a cento from this hymn given in one or two American hymn-books. [J. J.]

When my love to Christ [God] grows cold [weak]. J. R. Wreford. [Pasientide.] Contributed to J. R. Beard's Unitarian Coll. of Hys. 1837, No. 140, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Christ's Agony and Crucifixion." In the American Unitarian Bk. of Hys. 1848, No. 144, it was given in a rewritten form of 5 st. The alterations were made by S. Longfellow, one of the editors. This text has passed into several hymn-books in G. Britain, as in Thring's Coll., 1882; with a doxology. Horner's Cong. Hys. 1884, &c.; and as "When my love to God grows weak," in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873. [J. J.]

When on her Maker's bosom. Bp. R. Heber. [Epiphany.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 33, in 6 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the 2nd S. after Epiphany. It is found in a few modern hymn-books only. [J. J.]

When on the giddy cliff I stand.
T. Haweis. [The Sea in the hands of God.] Pub. in his Carmena Christo, 1792, in 6 st. of 4 l., and based on Jeremiah v. 22. It passed into Collyer's Coll., 1812; H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855; and a few hymnals in G. Britain of a later date. [J. J.]

When our heads are bowed with woe. H. H. Milman. [Litany in Lent. Burial.] Appeared in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 114, in 6 st. of 3 l., and the refrain, "Gracious Son of Mary, hear." It was appointed for the 16th S. after Trinity, and is based on the Gospel of that day, the raising of the widow's son at Nain, but deals only with the sad side of that event. Although it has become one of the most popular and widely used of Milman's hymns, yet it was not included by him in his Po. and Hys., 1837, nor in any subsequent edition. In Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, enlarged ed., 1841, No. 122, the hymn begins with st. v., "When the heart is sad within," and the text is re-arranged thus, st. v., vi., i., ii., iii., and a new stanza. This last stanza is repeated in Bp. Bickersteth's H. Comp., 1870. The refrain "Gracious Son of Mary, hear," has exercised the ingenuity of many editors of hymn-books. The following list of changes in that one line, although not complete, is yet sufficiently long to illustrate the difficulty of maintaining unity in these matters.

1. "Gracious Son of David, hear." Elliott. 1835.
2. "Jesus, Son of David, hear." Bickersteth. 1841.
3. "Son of Man, O Jesus, hear." English Hym. 1853.
4. "Jesus, Son of Mary, hear." Murray's Hym. 1862.
5. "Gracious Lord of Mercy, hear." T. Lowe's Hys. 1854.
6. "Jesus, born of Woman, hear." S. P. C. K. ed. 1863.
7. "Jesus, Man of Sorrows, hear." Aiford. 1867.
8. "Jesus, Loving Saviour, hear." Windle. 1864.
9. "Gracious Saviour, hear." Scottish U. P. C. 1852.
10. "Gracious Son of David, hear." Horner. 1884.

The text of this hymn as in H. A. & M., 1861, has been tr. into Latin by the Rev. O. B. Pearson in Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, as "Tristes, orbis lacrymantia." [J. J.]

When spring unlocks the flowers.
Bp. R. Heber. [Spring.] 1st pub. in the Christian Observer, 1816, p. 27, in 4 st. of 8 l., headed "Spring," and signed "R." In Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 98, it was repeated, after revision by himself, in 4 st. of 4 double lines, and appointed, without any apparent reason, for the 7th S. after Trinity. The text in C. U. is that of 1827. [J. J.]

When the Architect Almighty fashioned had the heaven and earth. Bp. C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [Consecration of a Church.] Appeared in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 221, in 10 double st. of 4 l., and headed "Consecration of Churches, or Laying the First Stone." In the 3rd ed. of the Holy Year it was repeated in two parts, Pt. ii. beginning "O'er the Font's baptismal waters may the Holy Spirit move." Usually this hymn is given in an abbreviated form, that adopted by the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, being the most popular. For its special purpose, for use at the Consecration of a Church, it is one of the finest hymns in C. U. [J. J.]

When the earth was full of darkness. J. M. Neale. [St. Margaret.] Written for the use of the Sisters of St. Margaret's, East Grinstead, as a hymn for St. Margaret's Day, at Lauds, probably for the Festival of July 20, 1865, and first printed in the Church Times, July 15, 1865, where it is signed "J. M. N." In 1866 it was included, with slight alterations, in Dr. Neale's Original Sequences, Hymns, and Other Ecclesiastical Verses. With further alterations and the omission of st. v. it was also given in the People's H., 1867, No. 263. [J. J.]

When the Lord of Hosts ascended. Bp. C. Wordsworth. [Whitunday.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 103, in 9 st. of 8 l. In the 3rd ed. of the Holy Year, 1863, it was given in two parts, Pt. ii. being "Not in fire from heaven descending," the text throughout being revised by the author. Three centos therefrom are in C. U.: (1) Opening with st. i.; (2) "Guide of sinners, go before us;" (3) "Holy Ghost, Divine Creator." [J. J.]

When the wild [dark] waves round us roll. Bp. W. W. How. [St. Peter.] Pub. in the enlarged ed. of Morrell and How's Ps. and Hys., 1864, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, Thring's Coll., 1882, and others, it reads, "When the dark waves round us roll." It is a very popular hymn and is found in many collections. [J. J.]

When this passing world is done. R. M. McCheyne. [Debtor to Christ.] Printed in the Scottish Christian Herald, May 20, 1837; and repeated, in his Songs of Zion appended to his Memoir and Remains, 1844, in 9 st. of 6 l., and headed "I am Debtor." As a whole it is not in C. U.; but the following centos therefrom are in C. U.:—

1. When this passing world is done. Various centos of unequal length, with this as the opening stanza are in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

2. When I stand before the throne. This cento, in Kennedy, 1863, and others begins with st. iii.

3. Chosen not for good in us. This cento is in extensive use. It begins with st. vi.

4. Oft I walk beneath the cloud. In use in G. Britain and America. It opens with st. vi.

When these centos are taken into account it is found that this is the best known and most widely used of the author's hymns. Original text in Lyra Brit., 1867. [J. J.]

When thy faith is sorely tried. J. Conder. [Divine Footprints.] This hymn appeared in his posthumous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Divine Footprints." The idea is to devote a stanza to events which took place at "Jehovah-jireh," "Bethel," "Mahanaim," "Peniel," "Jehovah-nisi," &c. Each stanza is headed with the name of the place, and a reference to the passage in Holy Scripture which is dwelt upon by the writer. The cento, "God is in the loneliest spot," in the American Church Pastorals, 1864, is from this hymn. [J. J.]

When waves of trouble [sorrow] round me swell. Charlotte Elliott. [In Affliction.] This hymn, based upon St. Matt. xiv. 27, appeared in the 1834 Appendix to the Invalid's H. Bk., No. v., in 4 st. of 4 l. Subsequently it was given in the body of that collection; and is also found, unaltered, in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. [J. J.]

When, within sight of danger's hour. H. Alford. [St. Peter.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, No. 85, in 3 st. of 4 l., and appointed for St. Peter's Day. It was repeated in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 257, and is also found in other collections. [J. J.]

When wounded sore the stricken soul. Cecil F. Alexander. [Passiontide.] Appeared in her Hys. Descriptive and Devotional, &c., 1858, No. 12, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Passion Week." It was repeated without alteration in her Legend of the Golden Prayers and Other Poems, 1859, p. 141, with the new heading "Touched with the feeling of our infirmities." It is found in many hymn-books in G. Britain and America, and usually in an unaltered form. [J. J.]

Whence do our mournful thoughts arise? I. Watts. [Consolation.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon Is. xi. 27-30 (ed. 1709, Bk. i. No. 32). Another form of this hymn was given in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. xvi., in 7 st. of 4 l. as "Why pour'st thou forth thine anxious plaint?" In the Drafts of 1751 and 1781 further alterations were introduced until it assumed the authorized form as in the Trs. and Paraphs. of 1781. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ll.) the alterations of 1781 are said to be by him. The designation of the hymn is I. Watts, 1707; Trs. & Paraphs., 1745; W. Cameron, 1781. In the American Prayer Book Coll., 1826, and several inter hymnals it begins "Why mournest thou, my anxious soul?" Sometimes st. iv.-viii. are found as a separate hymn, beginning, "Supreme in wisdom as in power," as in W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for the Church and Home, 1873. In one or two American Unitarian hymnals a cento therefrom is also given as "Merc human power shall fast decay." In Jane E. Leason's Paraphrases and Hys., 1853, the 1781 text is rewritten in three parts as:—(1) "Thus saith the Holy One, to Whom"; (2) "O Jacob and O Israel"; (3) "God giveth power unto the faint." [J. J.]

Where God doth dwell, sure heaven is there. J. Mason. [Praise to, and Joy in God.] This cento in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, is compiled from Mason's Spiritual Songs, or Songs of Praise, 1683, thus:—st. 1, ll. from Song 23, st. v.; at. iii.-v. from Song 24, st.

i. ii.; st. v. from Song 27, st. iv., ll. 5-8 re-written. The result is a pleasing hymn of Praise and Joy. [J. J.]

Where high the heavenly temple stands. M. Bruce. [The Divine Mediator.] This hymn, which we have ascribed to M. Bruce on evidence given in his Memoir in this work (p. 187, l.) was written probably about 1761-65, for a singing class in Kinnesswood, Scotland, and was first published by J. Logan in his Poems, 1781, p. 117, No. 9, as his own. In the same year (1781) it was given, with slight alterations, in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. 58, as a second rendering of "Heb. iv. 14 to the end." The alterations extended only to the following:—

St. l., l. 4, "The Guardian," for "The Patron." St. ll., l. 1, "thine rarely," for "in mercy stood;" l. 2, "his mighty plan," for "his plan of grace;" l. 4, "The Saviour and the friend of man," for "The Guardian God of human race."

In the markings of the Trs. and Paraphs. by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ll.), the text of 1781 is ascribed to J. Logan. The hymn is found in numerous collections in G. Britain and America, and is of great merit. The hymn "He, Who for men their Surety stood," in Kennedy, 1863, No. 953, is st. ii., iv.-vi., in a re-written form. [J. J.]

Where shall my wondering soul begin? C. Wesley. [Praise for Pardon and Peace.] Written in May, 1738, together with the hymn, "And can it be that I should gain?" (p. 64, l.), on the occasion of the great spiritual change which the author then underwent. Minute details of the event are given in the author's Diary, May 21-23, 1738. Its biographical interests, together with that of "And can it be," &c., are not inconsiderable, showing as they do the struggles and triumphs of a sincere and cultured man. This hymn was 1st pub. in the Hym. and Sacred Poems, 1739, in 8 st. of 6 l., and again, with the omission of st. vi., in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 29, from whence it has passed into other collections. Original text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 91. Dr. Osborn's note on this hymn, vol. i. p. 91, is:—

"Probably the hymn written on his conversion by Charles Wesley. Compare his Journal, under date May 23, 1738: 'Least of all would he [the enemy] have us tell what things God has done for our souls. . . . In His name, therefore, and through His strength, I will perform my vows unto the Lord, of not hiding His righteousness within my heart, if it should ever please Him to plant it there' (vol. i. p. 94). The same hymn was probably sung next day, when his brother John was able to declare, 'I believe' (ib. p. 95)."

Further extracts from the Journal are given in G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 40, together with other comments which are worthy of attention, but are too lengthy to transcribe. [J. J.]

Where'er have trod Thy sacred feet. [Lent.] In the "Notes and Illustrations" to Church Hym., 1881, Mr. Ellerton says of this hymn, "It is hymn 205 in the enlarged edition of Morrell & How's Psalms and Hymns, 1861. Bishop How found it in a small hymnal compiled for All Saints' Church, Blackheath, where it is attributed to 'Neale.' But it is not in any publication of Dr. Neale's."

Beyond this we have no information, and the hymn must remain "Anon." [J. J.]

Where'er the Patriarch pitch'd his tent. J. Montgomery. [Abraham, the Father of the Faithful.] Written "Jan. 5, 1834" [n. mss.], and pub. in Leifchild's Original Hymns, 1843, No. 23, in 4 st. of 4 l.; and again in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 39. It is given in a few modern hymn-books only. [J. J.]

Wherefore so heavy, O my soul? E. Caswall. [Resignation.] Pub. in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 226, and again in his Hym. and Poems, 1873, p. 255, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Resignation." In some hymn-books it is given as, "O why so heavy, O my soul?" Its use is limited. [J. J.]

Wherefore, we sinners mindful of the love. W. Bright. [Holy Communion.] This hymn was pub. in The Monthly Packet for October 1873, in 6 st. of 6 l. without signature, and entitled "The Eucharistic Presentation." In the following year Canon Bright included it in his Hymns and Poems, 2nd ed., 1874. From thence st. iii.-vi. passed as, "And now, O Father, mindful of the love," into the revised ed. of H. A. & M. in 1875. Full original text as above. [W. T. B.]

Wherewith, O God, shall I draw near? C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in the Hym. & Sacred Poems, 1739, p. 88, in 13 st. of 4 l., and based on Micah vi. 6, &c. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 276). It is given in centos in the hymn-books as follows:—

1. Wherewith, O God, shall I draw near? In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 123, and several modern collections. It is composed of 16 stanzas, st. iv., vii. and xi. being omitted.

2. Wherewith, O Lord, shall I draw near? In A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hym., 1776, No. 47, and later hymn-books in the Church of England. It embodies st. l.-lii., viii.-xiii. slightly altered.

3. Jesus, the Lamb of God, hath bled. In several modern collections. It begins with st. x.; but the choice of stanzas varies.

4. See, where before the throne He stands. Usually composed of st. xli. xlii. [J. J.]

Which of the [mighty] petty kings of earth? C. Wesley. [Guardian Angels.] Given from the Wesley mss. in Dr. Leifchild's Original Hym., 1842, and again in the Wesley P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xiii., in 6 st. of 8 l. It is based on Heb. i. 14. A cento therefrom is sometimes found beginning with st. iii., "Angels, where'er we go, attend." [J. J.]

While carnal men, with all their might. B. Beddome. [Zeal and Diligence.] This hymn appeared in Rippon's Baptist Sel., 1787, in two parts as follows: Pt. i. consisted of 3 st. of 4 l.; Pt. ii., beginning "If duty calls and suffering too," in 7 st. of 4 l. From Pt. ii. the hymn "Alike in happiness and woe," in the Bap. Ps. & Hym., 1858, is taken, the stanzas having been re-written throughout. In Beddome's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1817, portions of the hymn as in Rippon are given as Nos. 161 and 216. [J. J.]

While conscious sinners tremble. W. Jowett. [The Judgment.] This is in Verses written on Various Occasions for Friends. London, 1843. Printed for Private Distribution, p. 4, in 2 st. of 4 l. In a note to four hymns, of which this is the last, reads:—

"The four preceding hymns were written [by William Jowett] at the request of the late Dr. Jowett, to accompany some selections made by his dear and intimate friend, the Rev. C. J. Lestrange, from compositions of Michael Haydn."

This hymn has appeared in a few collections, as Kemble's Ps. & Hys., 1853, and others. The Verses, &c., 1843, also include "Thoughts suggested by the Collects." [J. J.]

While for Thy saints who poured abroad. Ep. R. Mant. [Thanksgiving for the Church Reformers.] Appeared in his Annoted Hymns, &c., 1837, p. 138, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "Hymn of Thanksgiving for the Church's Reformers" (ed. 1871, p. 233). In Common Praises, 1879, No. 364, "Lord, in Thy truth Thy church delights," is a cento from this hymn. [J. J.]

While health and youth and strength remain. [Early Piety.] This hymn appeared with three others including "Praise the Lord, ye heav'n's adore Him," on a supplementary sheet appended to the musical ed. of the Foundling Coll., 1796, and to the book of words issued in 1801. In the 1809 ed. of that Coll. it was included in the body of the work, and thence passed, in 1810, into J. Kemphorne's Ps. & Hys., No. cxviii. in 4 st. of 4 l., and somewhat considerably altered. Although still retained in the Foundling Coll., it has almost altogether fallen out of common use. On the authority of D. Sedgwick this hymn is usually ascribed to J. Kemphorne, but there is no evidence whatever in his favour. Its ascription is Anon. Foundling Coll., 1796. [W. T. B.]

While in sweet communion feeding. Sir E. Denny. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in his Sel. of Hys., 1839, No. 292, in 2 st. of 8 l. It was repeated in his Hys. and Poems, 1848, and 1870, and has also passed into several collections in G. Britain and America, including Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872; Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and others. [J. J.]

While justice waves her vengeful hand. Anne Steele. [National Humiliation.] This hymn was written for the National Fast of Feb. 11, 1757, and pub. in her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. p. 250, in 9 st. of 4 l., and headed "National Judgments deprecated. On the Fast, Feb. 11, 1757." It was also given in D. Sedgwick's ed. of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 116. This hymn is usually given in an abbreviated form as in the American Presby. Sel. of Hymns, Philadelphia, 1861. [J. J.]

While midnight shades the earth o'erspread. C. Wesley. [Midnight.] Pub. in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1789, p. 35, in 6 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 49), and entitled "A Hymn for Midnight." In the P. Works, Dr. Osborn adds this note on the title:—

"In some editions this title was changed to 'A Midnight Hymn for one under the Law.' Wesley saw how this phrase had been misapprehended; and in a copy of the 5th edition now before me, it is corrected with his own hand to 'A Midnight Hymn for one convicted of Sin.'"

The hymn was written about 1787, and sets forth the unsettled state of his mind at that time. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 148,

J. Wesley gave it with the omission of sts. i., ii., and a few verbal changes. T. Jackson in his Memoirs of C. Wesley (small ed. 1848, p. 51) says:—

"On the 19th December, 1736, he [Wesley] says, 'I began my twenty-seventh year in a murmuring, discontented spirit; reading over and over the third of Job.' While in this state of mind, he wrote the 'Hymn for Midnight,' which is strikingly descriptive of his defective creed and gloomy feelings. He had no hope of permanent happiness, but by the dissolution of his earthly frame. [St. i. and iii. quoted: then he proceeds.] To this fine composition his brother afterwards gave an evangelical character [in the Wes. H. Bk. as above] by substituting the word 'faith' for 'death' in the line 'Since death alone confirms me His'. Thus altered, it no longer appears as the desponding language of a Christian, expecting to be made free from sin and its attendant misery only by the body's dissolution; but as the prayer of a weeping penitent, who is convinced of his guilt and corruption, and is looking for a present deliverance from them through faith in the blood of the atonement."

The Wes. H. Bk. form of the hymn begins with st. iii., "Pain would I leave the world below," and is that which is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

While my Jesus I'm possessing. [Good Friday.] This hymn appeared in The Kendal H. Bk., edited by J. Allen (p. 50, l.), 1757, No. 54, in 6 st. of 8 l. In its original form it has almost entirely passed out of C. U. From this hymn 24 lines were re-written by W. Shirley, and included in the 1770 ed. of the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll. of Hymns, as—"Sweet the moments rich in blessing," in 3 st. of 8 l. The original lines are:—

- St. ii. "O how happy are the moments
Which I here in transport send!
Life deriving from His torments
Who remains the sinner's Friend.
Here I'll sit, for ever viewing
How the blood flows from each vein;
Every stream, my soul bedewing
Mortifies the carnal flame.
- St. iii. "Really blessed is the portion Destined me by sovereign grace;
Still to view divine compassion
In the Saviour's bruised face.
'Tis my fixed resolution,
Jesus Christ, my Lord, to love;
At His feet to fix my station,
Nor from thence a hair's-breadth move.
- St. iv. "Filled with sinner-like contrition,
With my tears His feet I'll bathe;
Happy in the sweet fruition
Of my Saviour's painful death.
- St. v. "May I still enjoy this feeling,
In all need to Jesus go;
Prove His wounds each day more healing,
And from hence salvation draw."

These lines were manipulated by W. Shirley into the following hymn:—

"Sweet the moments, rich in blessing
Which before the Cross I spend;
Life, and health, and peace possessing
From the sinner's dying Friend.
Here I'll sit for ever viewing
Mercy's streams in streams of blood;
Precious drop my soul bedewing
Plead and claim my peace with God.

"Truly blessed is this station
Low before the Cross to lie;
While I see divine compassion
Flooding in His languid eye;
Here it is I find my heaven,
While upon the Lamb I gaze;
Love I much? 'Tis much forgiven,
I'm a miracle of grace.

"Love and grief my heart dividing,
With my tears His feet I'll bathe;
Constant still in faith abiding,
Life deriving from His death.

May I still enjoy this feeling,
In all need to Jesus go;
Prove His wounds each day more healing,
And His more deeply know!"

In Cooke and Denton's Church Hymnal, 1853, No. 72, Shirley's st. i. and ii., ll. 1-4 were given, with slight alteration, and the following lines were added to complete the hymn in 3 st. of 8 l. :—

"Lord, in ceaseless contemplation
Fix our hearts and eyes on Thee,
Till we taste Thy whole salvation,
And unveil'd Thy glories see.
"For Thy sorrows we adore Thee,
For the griefs that wrought our peace;
Gracious Saviour I we implore Thee,
In our hearts Thy love increase.
Unto Thee, the world's Salvation,
Father, Spirit, unto Thee,
Low we bow in adoration,
Ever-blessed One and Three."

This text, with one or two slight alterations, was repeated in the Hymnary, 1872. The alterations and additions in 1853, and the changes in 1872, were by Canon William Cooke and Mr. Webb. In H. A. & M., 1861, Canon Cooke's arrangement, reduced to 4 st. of 4 l. was given as No. 95, st. i.-iii. being from Shirley, and st. iv. part of the additions by Canon Cooke as above. This text was repeated, with slight changes and the addition of st. iii., ll. 1-4, from Shirley as above, in the Hy. Comp., 1870; in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; Thirring's Coll., 1882, and many others. Other arrangements from Shirley's text are in C. U. in G. Britain and America, and can be tested by Shirley as above. The H. A. & M. text has been rendered into Latin by the Rev. R. Thornton, D.D., in Gittler and Thornton's Fasciculus, 1866, and L. C. Bigga's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, as "Sæve tempus et serenum;" and by Hodges in his The County Palatine, &c., 1876, as "Ter beatus dulces hors;" and the Hy. Comp. text, with the omission of st. iii., by the Rev. R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, as, "O quam dulces et beatum." Both these forms have also been rendered into other languages. The full original text by J. Allen of "While my Jesus I'm possessing," is in Lyra Britannica, 1867. [J. J.]

While saints and angels, glorious King. J. Montgomery. [Charitable Objects.] Pub. in Dr. Sutton's Ps. & Hys., . . . , Sung at the Parish Church, Sheffield, 2nd ed., enlarged, 1816, No. 102, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Cotterill's Sol., 1819, No. 255; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 540, and in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 345. In the last two works it is headed "For the Children in a Charity School." It was probably written to be sung at an anniversary of one of the Sheffield Charity Schools. Sometimes it begins with st. iv. as "Father Thy heavenly gifts afford." [J. J.]

While shepherds watched their flocks by night. N. Tate. [Christmas.] Appeared in the Supplement to the New Version (p. 301, l.), in 1702, in 6 st. of 4 l., and in all later editions of the same. In full, or in an abbreviated form, it is found in most hymn-books in English-speaking countries. Original text in the Hy. Comp. In addition to the original, two additional versions are in C. U. :—

1. While humble Shepherds watched their flocks. This was given in the 1746 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, the opening stanza reading :—

"While humble Shepherds watch'd their Flocks
In Bethleh'ms Plains by Night,
An Angel sent from Heav'n appear'd
And fill'd the Plains with Light."

The alterations were confined to this stanza. On its adoption in the revised Draft of 1761, and again in the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphs., 1761, the concluding lines of the last stanza read :—

"Good-will is shown by Heav'n to man, and never more shall cease."

This arrangement of the text has been in C. U. for more than 100 years.

2. On Judah's plains as Shepherds kept. This is found in one or two American collections only.

The original has been fr. into several languages. Those in Latin include: (1) "Pastorum in pœcudes noctu vigilante catervâ," by Lord Lyttelton, 1806; and (2) "Noctivagos, acclinis humo, pastoria pœba," by C. S. Calverley, both in L. C. Bigga's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867; (3) "Oves dum custodientes," by R. Bingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871; and (4) "Pro grege Pastores vigilabant nocte silenti," by Bp Wordsworth (St. Andrews) in his Series Collectarum, &c., 1890. [J. J.]

While with ceaseless course the sun. J. Newton. [New Year.] Pub. in his Twenty Six Letters on Religious Subjects, &c., by Omseron, 1774, in 3 st. of 8 l., and headed, "For the New Year." It was repeated in R. Conyer's Ps. & Hys. the same year, and again in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 1. It is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. In some collections st. ii., iii. are given as, "As the winged arrow flies," but this is not so popular as the full text. [J. J.]

White, Henry Kirke, remarkable both for the early development of his genius and for the untimely termination of his brief life of splendid promise, was b. at Nottingham, March 21, 1785. His father was a butcher, but his mother must have been a superior woman, since for a number of years she successfully conducted a boarding-school for girls. The writing-master in her establishment was for some time Henry's teacher, and under his instruction he made remarkable progress in Latin and other subjects. At the age of 13 he composed the lines "To an early Primrose," which were subsequently printed with his poems. At 14 he left school, and was put to the stocking-frame in order to learn practically the business of a hosier; but, disliking the employment, he was removed to an attorney's office in Nottingham, with a view to the legal profession. All his spare time was now devoted to literary pursuits, the acquisition of languages, and the composition of poetical and other contributions for the periodicals of the day. At the age of 15 he obtained from the Monthly Preceptor a silver medal for a translation from Horace, and a pair of globes for the best description of an imaginary tour from London to Edinburgh. When only 17 he was encouraged to publish his Clifton Groves and other Poems, which were certainly excellent as the compositions of a mere boy. About this time he was inclined to scepticism, but, through the perusal of Scott's Force of Truth and the arguments and appeals of a young friend, R. W. Almond (afterwards Rector of St. Peter's, Nottingham), he was led to earnest faith in Christianity. His well-known hymn "When Marshall'd on the nightly plain" is understood to be a figurative description of his spiritual experience at this period. He now desired to become a Christian minister, and through the generosity of his employers he was released from his articles in 1804. With the help of the Rev. C. Simeon and other friends, he became a student of St. John's College, Cambridge. There he speedily distinguished himself, and the highest honours seemed within his grasp; but over application to study destroyed his health, and he fell ill and d. Oct. 19, 1806, in the 22nd year of his age. Universal regret was expressed at his untimely end. Southey published his Remains, accompanied by a short memoir. Lord Byron composed some beautiful lines on the sad event. Josiah Conder and others wrote commemorative verses. The entire literary young manhood of England and America seemed moved with sympathy. A monumental tablet, with a medallion by Chantrey, was erected in All Saints Church, Cambridge, at the expense of a citizen of Boston, in the United States. Ten hymns are ascribed to H. K. White, which were printed by the Rev. Dr. W. B. Collyer in his Suppl. to Dr. Watts's Psalms & Hymns Lond. 1812. Of these four of the most popular are annotated as follows: "Awake, sweet harp of Judah, wake," p. 104, ii.; "Christians, brethren, ere we part," p. 221, ii.; "Mush in sorrow, oft in woe," p. 773, ii.; "When Marshall'd on the nightly plain," p. 1271, i. These are all in extensive use. The rest, all in C. U. at the present time, are:—

1. O Lord, another day has flown. Evening. From this the hymn "O let Thy grace perform its part" is taken.
2. O Lord, my God, in mercy turn. Penitence and Faith.
3. The Lord our God is full [clothed in] of might. Divine Sovereignty.
4. The Lord our God is Lord of all. Divine Sovereignty.
5. Through sorrow's night and danger's path. The Resurrection. Sometimes given as "When sorrow's path and danger's road."
6. What is this passing scene? Human Frailty. This hymn consists of selected stanzas from his "Ode on Disappointment." [W. B. S.]

Whitfield, Frederick, B.A., s. of H. Whitfield, was b. at Thrapwood, Shropshire, Jan. 7, 1829, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his B.A. in 1859. On taking Holy Orders, he was successively curate of Otley, vicar of Kirby-Bavensworth, senior curate of Greenwith, and Vicar of St. John's, Bexley. In 1875 he was preferred to St. Mary's, Hastings. Mr. Whitfield's works in prose and verse number upwards of thirty, including Spiritual unfolding from the Word of Life; Voices from the Valley Testifying of Jesus; The Word Unveiled; Gleanings from Scripture, &c. Several of his hymns appeared in his Sacred Poems and Prose, 1861, 2nd Series, 1864; The Casket, and Quiet Hours in the Sanctuary. The hymn by which he is most widely known is "I need Thee, precious Jesu" (p. 487, l.). Other hymns by him in C. U. include:—

1. I have a Great High Priest above. Christ the High Priest.
2. I saw the Cross of Jesus. The Cross.
3. In spirit, Lord, we meet Thee now. Missions. This was written at the request of the Committee of the Irish Church Missions for one of their annual meetings in London.
4. Jesus, Thou Name of magic power. The Name of Jesus. Sometimes given as "Jesus, Thou Name of power divine."
5. The sprinkled blood is speaking. The Blood of Christ.
6. There is a day I long to see. Heaven Anticipated.
7. There is a Name I love to hear. The Name of Jesus. Pub. in 1855 in hymn-sheets and leaflets in various languages. From this the hymn "Jesus, the Name I love so well" is taken.
8. There's naught on earth to rest upon. God Unchangeable.
9. When dead in sin and far from God. Redemption.

All these hymns, with the exception of No. 3, are in his Sacred Poems and Prose, 1861, and several of them have been printed as leaflets, and set to special music. The Sacred Poems, &c., contains 26 hymns, some of which are of considerable merit. [J. J.]

Whiting, John Bradford, M.A., s. of the Rev. James Whiting, M.A., Chaplain under the Hon. E. I. C., was b. at Cawnpore, India, and educated at Caius College, Cambridge, where he held a Scholarship and an Exhibition, and graduated B.A. 1850, and M.A. 1853. On taking Holy Orders he became Curate of Saffron Walden, 1851; Vicar of Bloomfield, 1861; and Vicar of St. Luke's, Ramsgate, 1875. He was also Chaplain to Bp. Wigram (Rochester), 1864-67, and Commissary to the Bishop of Niger, 1881. His Hymns for the Catholic Church was pub. in 1882. It contains 510 hymns, a few of which are new, but none are of his composing. (See England, Hymnody, Church of.) [J. J.]

Whiting, Mary Bradford, was b. at Bloomfield, Essex. She is daughter of the Rev. J. B. Whiting, Vicar of St. Luke's, Ramsgate. To her father's Hymns for the Church Catholic, 1882, she contributed:—

1. Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile. The way is weary, &c. Holy Communion.
2. O Sun of truth and glory. Morning.
3. O word of love! O word of life. Holy Scripture.
4. There was beauty on the sea. Creation.
5. Time is swiftly passing o'er us. New Year.
6. To Thee, Creator, in Whose love. Holy Trinity.
7. What was the holy joy, O Lord. Work.

The best of these hymns are Nos. 1 and 7, and all are worthy of attention. [J. J.]

Whiting, William, was b. in Kensington, London, Nov. 1, 1825, and educated at Clapham. He was for several years Master of the Winchester College Choristers' School. His Rural Thoughts and other poems were pub. in 1851; but contained no hymns. His reputation as a hymn-writer is almost exclusively confined to his "Eternal Father, strong to save" (p. 358, l.). Other hymns by him were contributed to the following collections:—

- i. To the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.
 1. O Lord the heaven Thy power displays. Evening.
 2. Onward through life Thy children stray. Changing Scenes of Life.
- ii. To an Appendix to H. A. & M. issued by the Clergy of St. Philip's, Clerkenwell, 1868.
 3. Jesus, Lord, our childhood's Pattern. Jesus the Example to the Young.

4. Lord God Almighty, Everlasting Father. Holy Trinity.
 5. Now the harvest toil is over. Harvest.
 6. O Father of abounding grace. Consecration of a Church.
 7. We thank Thee, Lord, for all. All Saints Day.
 iii. To The Hymnary, 1872.
 8. Amen, the deed in faith is done. Holy Baptism.
 9. Jesus Christ our Saviour. For the Young.
 10. Now the billows, strong and dark. For Use at Sea.
 11. O Father, Who the traveller's way. For Travellers by Land.
 12. When Jesus Christ was crucified. Holy Baptism.

Mr. Whiting's hymns, with the exception of his "Eternal Father," &c., have not a wide acceptance. He d. in 1878. [J. J.]

Whitmore, Lady Lucy E. G. [Starbuck Hymn-books, § v.]

Whittier, John Greenleaf, the American Quaker poet, was b. at Haverhill, Massachusetts, Dec. 17, 1807. He began life as a farm-boy and shoemaker, and subsequently became a successful journalist, editor and poet. In 1828 he became editor of the American Manufacturer (Boston), in 1830 of the New England Review, and in 1836 (on becoming Secretary to the American Anti-Slavery Society) of the Pennsylvania Freeman. He was also for some time, beginning with 1847, the corresponding editor of the National Era. In 1840 he removed to Amesbury, Massachusetts, where most of his later works have been written. At the present time [1890] he lives alternately at Amesbury and Boston. His first poetical piece was printed in the Newburyport Free Press in 1824. Since then his publications have been numerous, including:—

Voices of Freedom, 1833; Songs of Labour, and other Poems, 1850; Ballads and other Poems, Lond., 1844; The Panorama, and other Poems, 1856; In War Time, 1863; Occasional Poems, 1865; Poetical Works, 1869; Complete Poetical Works, 1876; The Bay of the Seven Islands, and other Poems, 1878, &c.

From his numerous poems the following hymns have been compiled, and have come into C. U., more especially amongst the American Unitarians:—

1. All as God wills, Who wisely leads. Trust. This begins with st. xl. of Whittier's poem, "My Psalm," in his work The Panorama, and other Poems, 1856 (Complete P. Works, Boston, 1876, p. 179), and is given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1848; Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884, &c.
 2. All things are Thine; no gift have we. Opening of a Place of Worship. Written for the Opening of Plymouth Church, Minnesota, 1872 (Comp. P. W., p. 281). In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.
 3. Another hand is beckoning us. Bersecment. From his poem "Gone," written in 1848 (Comp. P. W., p. 108). In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.
 4. Dear Lord and Father of mankind. Quintessence in God desired. From his poem "The Brewing of Some," beginning with st. xli. (Comp. P. W., p. 246). In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.
 5. God giveth quietness at last. Death and Burial. This begins with st. xvii. of his poem, "The Singer," written in 1871 (Author's MS.), and included in the Comp. P. W., 1876, p. 266. In Martineau's Hymns, 1875.
 6. Hast thou, 'midst life's empty noisance. The Purpose of Life. Written in 1842. It is in Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Bk. of Hys., Boston, 1842, and several other later American collections. Also in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1864.
 7. I ask not now for gold to gild. Resignation. From his poem "The Wish of To-day," written in 1848 (Author's MS.). In Hodge and Huntington's Unitarian Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, 1853; the Laudes Domini, 1864, and other collections.
 8. Immortal love, for ever full. The Love of Jesus. This poem, entitled "Our Master," appeared in Whittier's work, The Panorama, and other Poems, 1856, in 35 st. of 4 l.; in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869-70, p. 117; and in the Comp. P. W., 1876, p. 231, and others. From this poem the following centos have come into C. U.:—

- (1) Immortal love for ever full. In the 1890 ed. of the Hys. Comp. and others.
 (2) O Lord and Master of us all. Begins with st. xvi.
 (3) O Love! O Life! our faith and sight. Begins with st. xxiv. In several American hymnals, including the Unitarian Hymn (and Tune Bk.), Boston, 1868, and others.
 (4) Our Friend, our Brother, and our Lord. Begins with st. xxxiv. In Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884, &c.
 (5) We faintly hear, we dimly see. Begins with st. xxvi. In Barrett's Cong. Church Hys., 1887.
 (6) We may not climb the heavenly steep. Begins with st. v. In Laudes Domini, 1864; the Princ. Meth. Hys., 1887, &c.

The use of these centos shows that the hymnic element in the original poem is of a high and enduring order.

9. It may not be our lot to wield. Duty and its Reward. This begins with st. lv. of his poem "Seed-time and Harvest." Written circa 1830 (Author's MS.). Given in his Comp. P. W., p. 114. The hymn is in Laudes Domini, 1864, and other American collections.

10. May freedom speed onward, wherever the blood. Freedom. In the 1848 Supplement to the Boston Bk. of Hys., Boston, No. 592. Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, and other collections. In Whittier's Poetical Works, Boston, 1869, p. 68. It is given as, "Right onward, O speed! Whichever the blood."

11. Now is the seed-time; God alone. Self-Sacrifice. In the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 683.

12. O backward-looking son of time. New and Old. This begins with st. xix. of his poem "The Reformer," and is given in this form in the Boston Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853, No. 836, and again in later collections. In full in the Comp. P. W., p. 58.

13. O beauty, old yet ever new. The Love of Love. This in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, begins with st. xli. of his poem on "The Shadow and the Light," given in full in the Comp. P. W., p. 173.

14. O fairest-born of love and light. American National Hymn. This is from his poem "Democracy," which is dated "Election Day, 1843," and is in his Ballads and other Poems, Lond., 1844, p. 214, and his Comp. P. W., p. 82.

15. O, be whom Jesus loves has truly spoken. True Worship. This in the 1848 Supplement to the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1848, No. 576, begins with st. xl. of his poem on "Worship," given in full in his Comp. P. W., p. 95. The poem is dated by the Author, 1848 (Author's MS.).

16. O holy Father, just and true. Freedom. "Lines written for the Celebration of the third Anniversary of British Emancipation at the Broadway Tabernacle, N. Y., First of August, 1837." (Comp. P. W., p. 47). It was included in the Unitarian Christian Hys., Boston, 1844, and has been repeated in later collections.

17. O Maker of the Fruits and Flowers. Flower Services. This begins with st. lv. of his "Lines for the Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibition at Amesbury and Salisbury, Sep. 22, 1862," as given in his Comp. P. W., p. 183. It is in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, and as "O Painter of the fruits and flowers," in Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884.

18. O not alone with outward sign. Divine Participation. This begins with st. ii. of his poem, "The Call of the Christian," given in his Ballads and other Poems, Lond., 1844, p. 185, and his Comp. P. W., p. 75. The hymn appeared in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1844, and again in later collections.

19. O pure Reformers, not in vain. Freedom. This begins with st. xii. of his poem "To the Reformers of England," as given in his Comp. P. W., p. 77. The hymn was included in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1844, and has been repeated in later collections.

20. O sometimes gleams upon our sight. Old and New. This is taken from his poem "The Chapel of the Hermits," 1852 (in 94 st. of 4 l.), and begins with st. xi. (Comp. P. W., p. 115). The cento was given in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, and repeated in later collections.

21. O Thou, at Whose rebuke the grave. Affray. This was given in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1848, No. 441.

22. O (God) Thou, Whose presence went before. National Hymn. This hymn is dated by the author 1834 (Author's MS.), and was written for the Anti-slavery Meeting at Chatham Street Chapel, New York, "on the 4th of the 7th month, 1834." It is No. 750 in the Unitarian Christian Hys., 1844. It is sometimes given as "O God, whose presence went before."

23. O, what though our feet may not tread where Christ trod, Presence of Christ's Spirit. The author dates this 1837 (Author's MS.). It is No. 150 in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1846. In their Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 652, it begins: "O, wherefore the dream of the earthly abode." Both centos are from his poem "Poledon."

24. Shall we grow weary in our watch? Patience, or Resignation. This begins with st. x. of his poem "The Cypress-Tree of Cayton." (Comp. P. W., p. 84.) This form of the text was given in the Boston Bk. of Hys., 1846, No. 278, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in Horde's Cong. Hys., 1864, in 3 st.

25. Sport of the changeable multitudes. Persecution. This begins with line 3 of st. x. of his poem "Ezekiel," and was given in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 651. In full in Comp. P. W., p. 67.

26. The green earth sends its incense up. Worship of Nature. The author dates this 1845 (Author's MS.). It is from his poem "The Worship of Nature," and was given in this form in the Boston Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, No. 193. The cento "The harp at Nature's advent strung," in the Unitarian Hymns [and Tunes] Bk., Boston, 1868, No. 195, is from the same poem. The cento No. 321 in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, is also (altered) from this poem.

27. The path of life we walk to-day. The Shadowing Rock. This in the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, begins with st. xi. of his poem on "The Rock in El Gh'or," which the author dates 1859 (Author's MS.). In full in Comp. P. W., p. 130.

28. Thine are all the gifts, O God. Children's Missions, or Ragged Schools. Written for the Anniversary of the Children's Mission, Boston, 1878. It is given in Horde's Cong. Hys., 1884.

29. Thou hast fallen in thine armour. Death. From his poem "To the memory of Charles B. Storrs, late President of Western Reserve College," pub. in his Sonnets and other Poems, Lond., 1844, p. 84. Dated by the author 1835 (Author's MS.). Abridged form in the Hys. of the Spirit, 1864.

30. To-day, beneath Thy chastening eye. Seeking Rest. This begins with st. iv. of his poem, "The Wish of To-Day," dated by the author 1847 (Author's MS.), and given in full in his Comp. P. W., p. 114. The cento is in Martineau's Hymns, 1873, and others.

31. We see not, know not; all our way. Resignation. "Written at the opening of the Civil War, 1861" (Author's MS.), and included in his In War Time, 1863, and his Comp. P. W., p. 199. In full in the Prism. Meth. Hymnal, 1887.

32. When on my day of life the night is falling. Old Age. Written in 1862 (Author's MS.), and included in his work The Bay of the Seven Islands, and other Poems, 1863. In Horde's Cong. Hys., 1884.

33. With silence only as thy benediction. Death. "1845. Written on the death of Sophia Sturge, sister of Joseph Sturge, of Birmingham, Eng." (Author's MS.). It is in several collections, including Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873; Horde's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others.

Notwithstanding this extensive use of portions of Mr. Whittier's poems as hymns for congregational use, he modestly says concerning himself: "I am really not a hymn-writer, for the good reason that I know nothing of music. Only a very few of my pieces were written for singing. A good hymn is the best use to which poetry can be devoted, but I do not claim that I have succeeded in composing one." (Author's MS.) We must add, however, that these pieces are characterized by rich poetic beauty, sweet tenderness, and deep sympathy with human kind. (See also Index of Authors and Translators.) Whittingham, William. [Old Version, § ix. 8.]

Whittingham, William Rollinson, D.D., LL.D., was b. in New York, Dec. 2, 1805. He received his early education from his mother, and subsequently graduated at the General Theological Seminary, New York, 1825. He was for some time Rector of St. Mark's, Orange, New Jersey; then of St. Luke's, New York; and afterwards Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the General Seminary, N. Y., 1835. In 1840 he was consecrated Bishop of Maryland, and d. in 1879. For talent, learning, and character, Bishop Whittingham is allowed to be one of the great American Bishops, if not the greatest. His contributions to hymnology were Specimens of a Church Hymnal, Baltimore, Dec. 1865, and two trs. from the German, which appeared in Hys. for Church and Home, 1859. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) [F. M. B.]

Who are these that come from far? T. Kelly. [Triumphs of the Gospel.] This hymn in Hatfield's Church Hymns, N. Y., 1872, and others, is composed of st. iii., iv. (re-arranged) v., vi. of Kelly's "Hark! what sounds salute our ears," which appeared in the 1806 ed. of his Hymns, in 6 st. of 4 l. (ed. 1858, No. 6). [J. J.]

Who but Thou, Almighty Spirit? [Missions.] This hymn appeared in The Evangelical Magazine, 1821, in 5 st. of 6 l., and signed Eriphue. It was repeated in Nettleton's American Village Hymns, 1825, and subsequently in numerous collections in that country and elsewhere, as in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, &c. [J. J.]

Who can resist the Almighty arm? J. Logan. [God Omnipotent.] Pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraph., 1781, as a paraphrase of Job xxvi. 6, &c., in 9 st. of 4 l. It is rarely found outside of the Trs. and Paraphs. We have ascribed it to J. Logan on evidence given under Bruce, M., p. 185, ii. [J. J.]

Who is this so weak and helpless? Bp. W. W. How. [Life and Death of Jesus.] This very beautiful hymn in the form of question and answer, on the Life and Death of our Blessed Lord, was pub. in the 1867 Supplement to Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., in 4 st. of 8 l. It was revised by Bp. How for the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It is found in a large number of modern hymnals. [J. J.]

Who says, the wan autumnal sun? J. Keble. [Burial. The Widow at Nara.] Dated Sep. 27, 1822, and pub. in the 4th ed. of the Christian Year, 1828, in 13 st. of 5 l., and based upon St. Luke vii. 13, 14, "And when the Lord saw her, He had compassion on her," &c. In R. T. Lowe's Hys. for Christian Seasons, Gainsburgh, 1854, st. iv.-vi., ix. and x., were given as "Who says the widow's heart must break?" In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1328, there is another hymn from this poem and beginning with the same opening line. It is composed of st. iv.-viii. Each of these arrangements forms a good hymn. [J. J.]

Why dost thou beat so quick, my heart. F. W. Faber. [Prayer.] Pub. in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 12 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Sweetness in Prayer." It was also given in his Hymns, 1862. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, the cento, "Thy home is with the humble, Lord," is composed of st. viii., ix., and xii. Sometimes it is given as "Thy home is with the humble soul." [J. J.]

Why march ye forth with hymn and chant? J. M. Neale. [Burial—Burial at Sea.] This appeared in his posthumous Ori- genial Sequences, Hymns, and other Ecclesiastical Verses, 1868, p. 75, in 4 st. of 9 l., and headed, "At a Funeral." The hymn for Burial at Sea, "We give his body to the surge," No. 516, in the Hymnary, 1872, is based thereupon. It is one of a very limited number of hymns adapted to that occasion. [J. J.]

Why should I fear the darkest hour? J. Newton. [Jesus All and in All.] Printed in the Gospel Magazine, June, 1771 in 8 st. of 8 l., headed "In uno Jesu omnia," and signed "Omicron." It was included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 46, with the heading "Jesus my All." It has passed into a large number of hymn-books both old and new. It is usually abbreviated. [J. J.]

Why should I sorrow more? [Confidence in the Promise.] This hymn in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1856, is W. Williams's hymn "My God, my Life, my All," rewritten for that collection by Mr. Spurgeon. Williams's original appeared in his Gloria in Excelsis, or Hys. of Praise to God and the Lamb, Carmarthen, 1772, No. 67, in 4 st. of 8 l. [J. J.]

Why should our tears in sorrow flow? [Death of a Minister.] Appeared in the Missionary Minstrel, Lond., 1826. It was by "O. P.," the anonymous compiler of that collection of missionary hymns. It was reprinted in Pratt's Ps. & Hys., 1829, No. 569, in 6 st. of 4 l. From that collection it passed into many hymn-books, especially in America, and is in somewhat extensive use. [W. T. B.]

Why should the children of a [the] King. J. Watts. [Assurance through Faith.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. I., No. 144, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The Witnessing and Sealing Spirit." It was adopted by G. Whitefield in his Coll. of Hys., &c., 1753; A. M. Toplady in his Ps. & Hys., 1776, and others amongst the older compilers. It is also widely used in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Why will ye lavish out your years. P. Doddridge. [Care of the Soul.] In the p. ms. this hymn is undated, but is placed between two hymns which are dated respectively Oct. 29, 1735, and November 16, 1735. It was pub. in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 206, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 229. It is given in most American hymn-books as "Why will ye waste in trifling cares?" [J. J.]

Whytehead, Thomas, M.A., s. of H. R. Whytehead, Rector of Crayke, and Prebendary of Lincoln, was b. at Thormanby, Nov. 30, 1815. He was educated at Beverley Grammar School, and St. John's College, Cambridge. He was Bell University Scholar; he also won the Chancellor's medal for English Verse twice; the Hulseian prize of 1835; and other distinctions. He was also twenty-second senior optime in the Mathematical Tripos, and second in the first class in the Classical Tripos; B.A. in 1837, and Foundation Fellow of his college the same year. In 1838 he was classical lecturer at Clare College, but left the University for the Curacy of Freshwater, Isle of Wight, on taking Holy Orders in 1839.

In 1841 he was appointed Chaplain to Dr. Selwyn, Bishop elect of New Zealand, and sailed for that country in 1842. He was appointed the first Principal of the College which the Bishop established in New Zealand; but owing to the rupture of a blood vessel shortly after landing in New South Wales, he never took any duty in New Zealand. The little time and strength which remained to him he spent in correcting the Maori translation of the Bible and Prayer Book. The oed came, however, only too soon, and he d. at Waimate, N. Zealand, March 19, 1843. The esteem in which he was held is emphasised by the fact that "When the new chapel of his college [St. John's Cambridge] was erected and the vaulted roof was enriched with a series of figures, beautifully executed, according to the several successive centuries of the Christian era, the five which received the distinguished honour of being selected to represent the nineteenth century, all members of his college, were Henry Martyn, William Wilberforce, William Wordsworth, James Wood, and Thomas Whytehead."—(Mission Life, July 1873, p. 396.)

Whytehead's Poems were pub. by Rivingtons in 1842, and his College Life, posthumously in 1845. In the former there are seven "Hymns towards a Holy Week." Of these "Last of creation's days" (Sixth day) and the widely known "Sabbath of the saints of old" (q.v.). Five days before he died he wrote to a friend:—

"I took up the translation of the Evening Hymn (four verses for service) into Maori rhyming verse; the first of the kind of the same metre and rhythm as the English. Two hundred and fifty copies have been printed, and sung in church and school by the natives, and several of them came and sang under my window. They call it the 'new hymn of the sick minister.' Bishop Ken's lines [Glorio to Thee, my God, this night] it is very hard for one to compress within the same bounds in a rude language. However it is done, and people seem pleased with it; and it is a comfort to think one has introduced Bishop Ken's beautiful hymn into the Maori's evening worship, and left them this legacy when I could do no more for them."

A life so short and holy could have had no more beautiful ending. [J. J.]

Wie ein Vogel lieblich singet. [Morning.] This hymn, which Miss Winkworth appropriately entitles "A Morning Song of Gladness," is included as No. 207 in the Geistreiche Psalmen und Gesänge, Marburg, 1722, in 6 st. of 8 l. It had previously appeared in the ed. of 1690 [Marburg University Library]. In J. Köbner's Christliche Harfentöne, Hamburg, 1840, p. 289, st. I., iv., vi. are given, marked as "from the year 1580"; and this text is in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 2265 (1865, No. 2823). We have failed to trace the hymn earlier than 1690. The tr. in G. U. is:—

As a bird in meadows fair. A good tr. from Knapp, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 73; repeated in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861, beginning, "As the bird in meadows fair." In her G. S. for England, 1863, No. 101, Miss Winkworth wrote it to the original metre, and there it begins, "As a bird at dawning singeth." [J. M.]

Wie gross ist des Allmächtigen Güte. C. F. Gellert. [Praise.] A beautiful hymn of thanksgiving for the goodness of God, one of the finest and most popular of Gellert's productions. First pub. in his Geistliche Oden und Lieder, Leipzig, 1757, p. 84, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "The Goodness of God." Included in the Berlin G. B., 1765, No. 20, in almost all subsequent collections, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

How bounteous our Creator's blessing! A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 204 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

Other trs. are: (1) "How great the goodness of the Lord," in Madame de Ponsie's Poets and Poetry of Germany, 1859, vol. i. p. 473. (2) "How great Jehovah's love, how tender," by Mrs. Fluidater, in H. L. L., 1862, p. 47 (1884, p. 212). (3) "My God, how boundless is Thy love," in the Day of Rest, 1877, p. 408, marked as by "A. B. H." [J. M.]

Wie soll ich dich empfangen? P. Gerhard. [Advent.] 1st pub. in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 77, in 10 st. of 8 l., reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhard's Geistl. Lieder, No. 3, Bachmann's ed., No. 22, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 21. It is founded on St. Matt. xxi. 1-3, the Gospel for the first 8. in Advent. The allusions in st. vi.-ix. would suggest that it was written during the Thirty Years' War. It is one of Gerhard's finest productions, and is probably the best German Advent hymn. Tr. as:—

1. How shall I meet my Saviour. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, 1722, p. 3 (1732, p. 3, slightly altered). Included in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, and repeated, altered, in later eds. (1886, No. 33). Varying centos under the original first line, but from the Moravian text, are found in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841, and Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860. Other forms are (see also No. 3):—

(1) We go to meet Thee, Saviour (st. i. alt.), in Beld's Praise Bk., 1872, mainly from the Moravian H. Bk., 1801.

(2) Love caused Thine Incarnation (st. v. alt.), in Walker's Coll., 1855, and Snapp's Songs of G. & U., 1872, from the Moravian H. Bk., 1801.

2. Oh, how shall I receive Thee. A good tr. of st. i., ii., vii., viii., x., by A. T. Russell, as No. 36 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. Repeated in Kennedy, 1863, and the People's H., 1867; and abridged in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, H. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, &c.

3. Oh! how shall I receive Thee. This is No. 5 in the ed., 1857, of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. St. i., ii., are based on Russell, and st. iii.-v. (representing iv.-vi.), are based on Jacobi, as altered in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801. Slightly altered in Mercer, 1859, and thence in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868; and (omitting tr. of st. iv.) in Mercer's Ox. ed., 1864.

4. Ah! Lord, how shall I meet Thee. A tr. of st. i., ii., v., vi., viii., x., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 21.

5. Say with what salutations. In full, by J. Kelly, in his P. Gerhard's Spir. Songs, 1867, p. 10; repeated, abridged, in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880.

Other trs. are: (1) "Lord, how shall I be meeting," by Dr. J. W. Alexander, in Schatz's Kirchenfreund, 1860, p. 178, and his Christ in Song, 1868, p. 20, and his own Breaking Crucible, 1861, p. 11. (2) "How shall I meet Thee! How my heart," by Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 7. (3) "How shall I come to meet Thee," by Miss Winkworth, 1863, p. 66. (4) "Lord, how shall I receive Thee," by R. Massie, 1864, p. 93. [J. M.]

Wigner, John Murch, second s. of J. T. Wigner (see below), was b. at Lynn, June 19, 1844. He was educated at the Grammar School of Lynn, and afterwards graduated B.A. and B.Sc. in the London University. Mr.

J. M. Wigner now resides near London, and has been for many years in the India Home Civil Service. He is connected with his father's church, and has done much to promote the spiritual welfare of the young. He is the author of several hymns, three of which are in the Baptist Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882:—

1. "Come to the Saviour now!" Invitation.
2. "Lost one! wandering on in sadness." Return to God.
3. "Lo, a loving Friend is waiting." The Call of Jesus.

The first of these is in the Bap. Ps. and Hys., 1880, and is dated 1871. [W. R. S.]

Wigner, John Thomas, was b. at Harwich, in or about the year 1815. When a youth he removed to Burnham, in Essex, where he became a member of a Baptist church. In 1836 he entered Stepney College as a student for the ministry, and in 1840 became pastor at Lynn, in Norfolk. From Lynn he removed in 1866 to Brockley, near London, where very shortly a new chapel was built for him, in which he continues to minister. Mr. Wigner was one of the committee which brought out, in 1858, the well-known Baptist Hymn-book Ps. & Hys. He was the editor of the Supplement to that book, which appeared in 1880, and was also editor of the Baptist Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882. In these books two of his hymns were included: (1) "Hark! 'tis the song of heaven" (The Angels' Song at the Birth of Christ), and (2) "O Lord, revive Thy work" (Prayer for a Revival). A third, which appears in the above-named School H. Bk. is an adaptation by Mr. Wigner of a well-known hymn by Mrs. Reed, "O do not let the word depart" (Exhortation with the Awakened). [W. R. S.]

Wilhelm (II. or IV.), Duke of Saxe-Weimar, s. of Duke Johann of Saxe-Weimar, was b. in the castle of Altenburg, April 11, 1598. He studied for some time at the University of Jena, devoting himself especially to music and mathematics. On the outbreak of the Thirty Years' War he espoused the cause of Friedrich v. of the Palatinate. At the battle of the Weisse Berg, near Prague (see p. 153. 1), he was severely wounded, and at the battle fought near Stadtlohn, in Westphalia (Aug., 1623), he was at first left for dead, and then taken prisoner by Tilly. In 1625 the Emperor allowed him to go free, and he assumed the government of Weimar. When Gustavus Adolphus came to Germany (1630), Wilhelm did not join him till after the battle of Breitenfeld (Sept., 1631), and in July, 1635, he was one of the consenting parties to the Peace of Prague, between Saxony and the Emperor, in consequence of which the Swedish troops made various inroads on his territory. When the final partition took place, in 1644, between himself and his surviving brother (Saxe-Weimar fell to Wilhelm, and Gotha to Ernst) he set himself earnestly to restore prosperity and godliness in the regions under his rule. He also found more time (especially after the peace of Westphalia, 1648), to devote to his studies in poetry and music, and to the adornment of Weimar. He d. at Weimar, May 17, 1662 (Koch, iii. 110; Wetzol, iii. 426; Bode, p. 172, &c.).

Wilhelm joined, in 1817, in founding the Fruitbearing Society, the great German Literary and Patriotic Union of the 17th cent., and, after the death (1856) of Ludwig, Prince of Anhalt-Cöthen, became its head. Wilhelm thus became the centre of its operations, in the direction of which the Duke was assisted by Georg Neumark (p. 786, l.). Neumark, in his Palmboom, 1830, p. 449, speaks of the Duke as having "composed several hymns, as well-known in this place, especially the short Hymn of Peace 'Gott der Friede hat gegeben.'"

Besides this hymn on Peace only one other is known as Wilhelm's, viz. —

Herr Jesu Christ, dich zu uns wend. Public Worship. This was included as No. 124 in the 2nd ed., 1851, of pt. i. of the Cantionale Sacrum, Gotha (1st ed. 1846), in 4 st. of 4 l., entitled "To be sung before the Sermon." As no author's name is there given, and as it did not appear in any of the three parts of the original ed. of 1646-48, the Duke's authorship is decidedly doubtful. So far as yet traced the Duke's name was not attached to it until in the Aldorf Liederfraud of 1676 (Fischer's Supplement, p. 71). In J. Niedling's Handbüchlein, 4th ed., 1855, p. 746, it appears without author's name (Niedling, be it observed, was living at Altenburg), and entitled "A heartfelt petition of pious Christians for grace and the help of the Holy Spirit, during Divine Service, before the Sermon." Koch says it was in the 1st ed., 1638, of Niedling, but this appears to be merely a guess, for the earliest ed. of Niedling which he describes at iii., 109, is that of 1655; and if it were in Niedling's 1638 ed., this circumstance would make the Duke's authorship still more unlikely. Whoever the author was the hymn soon became justly popular, and in 1678 was formally directed to be sung in all the churches in Saxony on all Sundays and festivals. It is a simple and forcible hymn, which survived the Rationalistic period, and is found in all recent German hymn-books, e.g. in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 356. Tr. as:—

1. Lord Christ, reveal Thy holy Face. In full by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Ger., 1723, p. 42 (1732, p. 69). Repeated as No. 322 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1886, No. 724), and as No. 54 in J. F. Thrupp's Ps. & Hys., 1853.

2. Lord Jesu, to our prayer attend. This is a good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 12 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

3. Lord Jesus Christ, be present now! This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, as No. 13 in her C. B. for England, 1863; repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, No. 48.

4. Christ Jesus Lord, to us attend. In full by L. Heyl, as No. 3 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Lord Jesus, turn to us, and down," by Dr. G. Walker, 1869, p. 48. (2) "Lord Jesus Christ, in mercy bend," by Miss Wainwright, 1863, p. 19. (3) "Lord Jesus Christ, now towards us bend," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 221. [J. M.]

Willard, Emma C. [see Hart]. A teacher and educational writer, b. at Berlin, Connecticut, 1787; resided in 1838 and sometime after at Hartford, and for many years conducted a well-known school at Troy, New York. She d. at Troy, 1870. Her hymn—

Rocked in the cradle of the deep (Sailor's Hymn), is sometimes said to have been pub. in 1830. It is found in Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1856, No. 1286. Its earlier appearance has not been verified. It is a successful sailor's hymn. It is included in several modern collections. [F. M. B.]

Williams, David, a contemporary of William Williams (1717-1791) and author of numerous Welsh hymns. He also wrote English hymns, some of which were pub. in a small tract of 24 pp., entitled, Joy in the Tents of Zion, or a Few Gospel Hymns, Brecknock, 1779. These hymns are rough, and in the style of W. Williams. There is a wild Welsh beauty about them which makes itself felt under the restraints of a gloomy Calvinism and a half foreign language. The original tract is very rare. [W. T. B.]

Williams, David, of Bethesda's Frô, was a minister with the Independents in South Wales. He was b. at a farm-house, called Trehedyn, near Cowbridge, Glamorganshire. In 1812 he published a collection of hymns, which he called Llais y Durtur, or The Voice of the Turtle Dove. In 1824 he published a new edition under the title of Dyffroedd Bethesda, containing 133 hymns and 16 songs. Many of his hymns are still used by all denominations in Wales. [W. G. T.]

Williams, Edward, or Iolo Morganwg, the greatest Welsh scholar of his time, published two vols. of hymns under the title Sainau yr Eglwys yn yr Antiaeth, "The Psalms of the Church in the Wilderness." He is the chief author of the Myrryrian Archaeology of Wales. His hymns were chiefly used by the Unitarians. [W. G. T.]

Williams, Helen Maria, daughter of Charles Williams, an officer in the Army, was b. in the North of England in 1762. Through the influence of Dr. A. Kippis (p. 622, l.) whose help she sought in London, her first poem, Edwin and Eltruda, a legendary tale, was pub. in 1782. This was followed by An Ode on the Peace, 1783, and Pern, a Poem. These were all included in her Poems, 2 vols., 1786, 2nd ed. 1791. Being connected by her sister's marriage with a French Protestant family, she resided in Paris during the period of the Revolution and the reign of Terror. There she became well known as a political writer of strong republican sympathies, but her too independent expressions of opinion led to her temporary imprisonment by Robespierre. Her Letters from France, 1790, were pub. in England and America, and in a French translation, in France. She also pub. Letters containing a Sketch of the Politics of France from the 31st May, 1793, till the 28th of July, 1794, 2 vols., 1795, and other works of a like kind; some additional Poems, and a tr. of Humboldt's Personal Narratives of his Travels, 1815. The closing years of her life were spent at Amsterdam, in the house of her nephew, Athanasæ Coquerel, a pastor of the Reformed Church there. Miss Williams d. in 1827. From her Poems, 1786, the following hymns have come into C. U.:—

1. My God, all nature owns Thy way. Nature speaks of God. In Martineau's Hymns, 1840.

2. While Thee I seek, protecting Power. Safety in God. This hymn was in Dr. Priestley's Birmingham Coll., 1780; in Kippis's Coll., 1795; the Essex Coll., 1801; and almost every other Unitarian collection to the present time. In the New Cong. H. Bk., 1839, it begins "While Thee I seek, Almighty Power;" and in several collections a cento beginning "Father, in all our [my] comforts here," is given as in Stowell's Po. & Provs., 1831 and 1877, and several others. [V. D. D.]

Williams, Isaac, B.D., was b. at Cwmeinfelin in Cardiganshire, Dec. 12, 1802, where his mother happened to be staying at her father's house at the time of his birth. But his parents' house was in Bloomsbury, London, his father being a Chancery barrister at Lincoln's Inn. He received his early education from a clergyman named Polehampton, with whom he was at first a day pupil in London, but whom he afterwards accompanied to a curacy at Worplesdon, near Guildford. All Mr. Polehampton's pupils (15), with the exception of Isaac Williams and his two older brothers, were being prepared for Eton, where great stress was laid upon Latin versification; and it was in these early years that Isaac Williams acquired his fondness for, and proficiency in, this species of composition. In 1814 he was removed to Harrow, where Mr. Drury was his private tutor. He gained several school prizes, and became so used, not only to write, but to think, in Latin, that when he had to write an English theme he was obliged to translate his ideas, which were in Latin, into English. In 1821 he proceeded to Trinity College, Oxford, that college being chosen on the advice of Mr. Drury; and in his second term he was elected scholar of Trinity. In 1823 he won the University Prize for Latin Verse, the subject being Ars Geologica. The gaining of this prize was indirectly the turning point of his life, for it brought him into close relationship with John Keble, who may be termed his spiritual father. He had been previously introduced to Mr. Keble by the Vicar of Aberystwith, Mr. Richards, whom he had met at his grandfather's house. But there was no intimacy between them until he had won the Latin Verse Prize, when Mr. Keble came to his rooms and offered to look over the poem with him before it was recited and printed. This led to an intimate acquaintance which ripened into a warm friendship of infinite benefit to Isaac Williams's spiritual life. Mr. Keble offered to take him with him into the country and read with him during the Long Vacation, without any payment. Robert Wilberforce, then an undergraduate of Oriol, was also to be of the party. They settled at Southrop, near Fairford, a name familiar to the readers of Keble's Life. Here Isaac Williams made the acquaintance of Hurrell Froude, who was also reading with Mr. Keble, and this acquaintance also ripened into a friendship which was terminated only by death. Keble was like a boy with his pupils, entering with zest into all their amusements, but he also exercised a deep influence over their religious characters, especially that of Isaac Williams. Williams spent this and all his subsequent Long Vacations at Southrop, and became more and more influenced for good by Mr. Keble. He also became a great friend of Sir George Prevost, then an undergraduate of Oriol, who afterwards married his only sister. During one of these sojourns at Southrop, Keble showed Williams and Froude a ms. copy of the Christian Year, but, strange to say, the young men did not appreciate its beauties. Williams's intimacy with Keble caused alarm to Mr. Hughes, the successor of the Vicar of Aberystwith who had first brought the two together; Mr. Hughes was greatly shocked to hear that he was a friend of Mr. Keble of Oriol, and said he would introduce him to a most excellent and promising person there, a Mr. Newman, whom the evangelical vicar knew in connexion with the Church Missionary Society, and who would, he doubtless thought, supply an antidote to Keble's High Church opinions. While Williams was an undergraduate at Oxford, though he was a member of Trinity College, he spent much of his time at Oriol, attracted thither, not only because it was Keble's college, but also because he had many friends there, the chief of whom were the Wilberforces, Ryder, Anderson (now Sir C. Anderson), Hurrell Froude, and Sir G. Prevost. As an accomplished scholar who had the benefit of Keble's tuition, it was naturally expected that he would take a high degree; and so, no doubt, he would have done, had he not attempted too much. In spite of the warnings of friends, he resolved to aim at a "double first," and, as mathematical studies were not to his taste, the labour over this uncongenial work in addition to the necessary preparation for the classical school was too severe for him; his health broke down, and he was obliged to be content with a pass degree. In 1829 he was ordained to the curacy of Windrush, about twelve miles from Fairford where Keble then lived, and about twenty from Bisley, where his brother-in-law, Sir George Prevost, who was now married, was curate. But he did not stay long at Windrush. Passman though he was, he competed successfully for a Trinity Fellowship, and had to return to Oxford the same year as college tutor. He lived on terms of great intimacy with Hurrell Froude, then Fellow of Oriol, and was introduced by him to J. H. Newman, to whom he was much attracted, like almost all who were brought into contact with that remarkable man. The attraction appears to have been mutual, and Williams became Newman's curate at St. Mary's, Oxford, which then included the village or rather hamlet of Littlemore. In 1842 he married Caroline, the third daughter of Arthur Champenown, of Dartington Hall, Devon, left Oxford, and went to Bisley as curate to Mr. T. Keble. So far as his outer life went, little more need be said. Nothing seems to have occurred to ruffle its placid course, except one episode which occurred in 1841-2. When John Keble resigned the Poetry Professorship at Oxford, he was naturally anxious that his friend Williams should be his successor. Not only was there a warm personal friendship and an entire sympathy of opinion on the most important of all matters between the two men, but on the score of poetical merit, Williams seemed to him obviously the proper person. He had already published several of his poetical works, and his reputation as a sacred poet was second only to that of Keble himself. But he was also identified in a peculiar way with the Tract writers. He had actually written that Tract which, next to the memorable Tract 90, had given the greatest offence of all, viz.: Tract 80, on Reserve in the Communication of Religious Knowledge, and he was also known as the especial friend and late coadjutor of Newman. It is not, therefore, surprising that vehement opposition was raised against his election. A rival candidate was found in the person of Mr. Edward Garbett, of Brasenose, a First Classman, but quite unknown in the domain of poetry. There was really no comparison whatever between the fitness of the two candidates, but that counted for little when men's minds were heated by the "odium theologium." It became simply a party question; but a public contest was happily averted by a private comparison of votes, when it was found that there was a large majority of votes in favour of Mr. Garbett. Mr. Williams was much hurt—not by the opposition of the Low Churchmen, for he expected that,—but by the desertion of several whom he counted upon as friends. He withdrew from Oxford and from public life (which had never possessed much attraction to a man of his retiring and studious habits) altogether. He remained at Bisleigh until 1848, when he removed to Stinchcombe; and there he lived until his death. From time to time some cultured and thoughtful work from his pen was given to the world, but that was all; and when the announcement that he had quietly passed away on SS. Philip and James' Day, May 1, 1865, appeared, the outer world had almost forgotten that he was still living, though it had not forgotten, and will not, it is hoped, while the English language lasts, ever forget his writings. He died of a decline, the seeds of which had long been sown.

As a devotional writer both in prose and verse the name of Isaac Williams stands deservedly high, but as a writer of hymns for congregational use, he does not, either for quantity or quality, at all reach the first rank. Indeed, it would have been very distressing to him if he had done so, for he shared the distaste which most of the early leaders of the Oxford movement felt for the congregational use of any metrical hymns apart from the Psalter, and it is said that he purposely made his translations of the Hymns from the Parisian Breviary rough, in order to prevent them from being so used. His poetical works are:—

(1.) The Cathedral, his first publication in verse, issued in the early part of 1838. It was written about the same time as the famous Tract on Reserves, and "in pursuance of the same great object we had undertaken" (in the Tracts for the Times). What that object was is intimated in the alternative title, The Cathedral, or the Catholic and Apostolic Church in England. It followed very much the same lines as George Herbert's Temple, only it worked out the ideas far more in detail, connecting each part of the edifice with some portion of church doctrine or discipline. The whole volume is written in the true spirit of poetry, and some of the sonnets in it are good specimens of that difficult form of composition; but it contains scarcely any verses out of which even centos of hymns can be formed.

(2.) Later on in the same year (1838) he published a volume, entitled Thoughts in Past Years, though, as the title implies, many of its contents were written at an earlier date. In fact the composition ranged over a period of at least twelve years. In the writer's own opinion there was more true poetry in this volume than in The Cathedral, but the latter had the advantage of being written on one systematic plan, while the Thoughts was a collection of detached poems. The connexion between the four divisions of the volume was, that they were all suggested by the writer's surroundings. Thus the "Golden Valley" was the beautiful district in the neighbourhood of Stroud known by that name; "The Mountain Home" was the writer's own birthplace, Cwmeynfein in Cardiganshire; "The River's Bank" was the River Windrush, on the banks of which was the writer's first curacy; "The Sacred City" is Oxford. In a later edition (1862) there is an additional division entitled "The side of the Hill," that is, Stinchcombe Hill, Gloucestershire. Like The Cathedral, this is rather a volume of sonnets and sacred poems for private use, than of hymns in the popular sense of the term. The same volume contains his Reliquiae Latine; or Harrow School Exercises, and his Oxford Prize Poem, Ara Cœlogica. The Latinity of these poems fully bears out the writer's own remark, that in his early years he was more at home in Latin than he was in his own language. It also contained a translation of the "Dies Irae, Dies Illa," to which, in the revised and enlarged edition of 1848, were added, under the title of Lyræ Ecclesiasticae, a number of translations from other Latin and Greek Hymns. These translations are for the most part very free, and are not adapted, as they were certainly not intended, for congregational use.

(3.) His next publication was Hymns translated from the Parisian Breviary, 1839. He thought that "the ancient Latin hymns were the best source from which our acknowledged deficiency in metrical psalmody should be supplied, as being much more congenial to the spirit of our own liturgy than those hymns which are too often made to take part in our ancient services;" and he had already published many of the translations which appear in this volume, at intervals from 1833 to 1837, in the British Magazine, the church organ which was edited by Hugh James Rose. A few hymns from this volume, e.g. "O Heavenly Jerusalem," "Disposer Supreme," "O Word of God above," have been adopted for congregational use, but most of these are, perhaps purposely, done into such irregular metres, that they are not available for the purpose. Indirectly, however, they have been highly serviceable to the cause of congregational psalmody, for Mr. Chandler tells us in the Preface to his Hymns of the Primitive Church that Mr. Williams's translations in the British Magazine led him to produce that work.

(4.) The next little volume, Hymns on the Catechism, was written at Bisleigh and published in 1842. Its object was strictly practical; it was intended as "an aid towards following out that catechetical instruction which is so essential a part of the church system." It cannot be said that these hymns are likely to be so attractive to children, as, for example, those of Mrs. Alexander, but they are suitable for congregational, or at any rate, for Sunday school use, and one of them, "Be Thou my Guardian and my Guide," has found its way deservedly into most collections.

(5.) In the same year (1842) a much more ambitious work, The Baptistery, also saw the light. One seems to recognize in this work the pupil of John Keble, for its leading idea is very much the same as that of Tract 89, viz.: that earthly things are a shadow of heavenly. It is divided into thirty-two "Images," as the author terms them; it is not easy reading, but it well repays the careful attention which it requires, for both in form and matter it is the product of a true poet. One of the "Images," the 20th, "The Day of Days, or the Great Manifestation," has supplied our well-known hymn, "Lord, in this, Thy mercy's day," but the general tenour of the work is quite apart from hymnody.

(6.) The same may be said of The Altar, published in 1847, which takes the second great Sacrament of the Gospel, as The Baptistery took the first, for the basis of a series of devout meditations, 84 in number. The 1st ed. was illustrated by 84 pictures, one to each meditation, after the fashion of a foreign book which the writer had seen; but the illustrations were thought unworthy of the subject, and the later editions appeared without them. The object of the work was to connect the various events which occurred at the time of our Blessed Lord's Passion with the Eucharistic Service. It consists exclusively of a series of sonnets, and supplies no hymns for congregational use.

(7.) In the same year (1849) appeared another work of a very different type. It is entitled The Christian Scholar, and its object is "to render the study of the classics subservient to a higher wisdom." It incidentally gives us an interesting insight into the author's own training under Mr. Keble, for he tells us in the Preface that he himself "derived, not merely moral benefit, but actual religious training from this indirect mode of instruction in another to whom he owes everything that renders life valuable." The plan of the book is, in a word, to take passages from all the chief classical authors, and to give Christian comments on each.

(8) His only other poetical work was Ancient Hymns for Children, 1842, which consisted of a reprint, with slight alterations, of 50 of his trs. from the Latin, previously published in 1839 and 1839 as above.

Although Isaac Williams's prose writings are as valuable, and perhaps more popular than his verse, yet from the point of view of this article it will suffice to enumerate the principal of them. They include—

Several reviews for The British Critic at various dates; Thoughts on the Study of the Gospels, 1842; Sermons on the Characters of the Old Testament, 1856; The Beginning of the Book of Genesis, with Notes and Reflections, 1861; The Psalms interpreted of Christ, vol. 1, 1864 (no other volumes were published); A Memoir of the Rev. R. A. Suckling, late Perpetual Curate of Bussage, 1859; A Harmony of the Four Gospels, 1859; Sermons on the Epistles and Gospels, 3 vols., 1853; Sermons on the Female Characters of Holy Scripture, 1859; The Apocalypse, 1851, and many other minor works.

Besides these, he edited a large number of Plain Sermons at different dates by various writers, and he also wrote some of the Tracts for the Times, notably Tract 80 (1838), and 87 (1840), on Reserve in Communicating Religious Knowledge. It is difficult to see why these should have given so much offence. The principles on which the conclusion is based are obviously correct. Perhaps the title Reserve was alarming when men's minds were excited by the fear that they were being led by the new Oxford school they knew not whither. These two Tracts, with Tract 86, also by Isaac Williams, would fill an octavo volume of more than 200 pages. Both the character and the writings of Isaac Williams are singularly attractive. They both present a striking combination of qualities which are not often found in union. He was as firm as a rock in the maintenance and expression of his principles, but so quiet and retiring that his personality came far less before the public than that of any of the other leaders of the Oxford movement. His writings are so Christian and unaggressive in their tone that we are won over to his side almost without knowing it. He was a most valuable ally on this very account to his party, and the hymnologist may well regret that he did not devote his exquisite poetical taste, his refined culture, and his ardent piety more to hymn-writing than he did. [J. H. O.]

Isaac Williams's position in hymnody does not lie so much in the actual work which he did, as in the influence he had over others. His trs. from the Latin, mainly through the metres which he deliberately adopted, have not had a wide acceptance in the hymnody of the Church. J. Chandler, however, has left it on record that Williams's trs. in the British Magazine led him to undertake kindred work, and Chandler's trs. are amongst the most popular in the English language. Williams's Hymns on the Catechism, 1842, were with Dr. Neale's Hymns for Children of the same year the forerunners of the more popular productions on the same lines by later writers. Williams's trs. together with the more important of his original hymns may be traced through the Index of Authors and Translators. Of his original hymns the following are also in C. U. :—

1. How solemn, silent, and how still. Obedience. (1842.)
2. Jesus, most loving Lord. Hymn to Christ. (1844.)
3. Lord, Thou dost abhor the proud. Humility.
4. Members of Christ are we. Members of Christ.
5. The child leans on its parent's breast. Trust in God. (1842.)
6. The High Priest once a year. Ascension. (1842.)

The dates here given indicate the works in which these hymns appeared. [J. J.]

Williams, John, D.D., LL.D., was b. at Deerfield, Massachusetts, Aug. 30, 1817; graduated at Trinity College, 1835, and was ordained in 1838. From 1842 to 1848 he was Rector at Schenectady, New York, and President of Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, from 1848 to 1853. In 1861 he was consecrated Assistant Bishop of Connecticut, taking, in 1865, the full charge of that diocese. Bishop Williams is an eminent scholar. His contributions to hymnology were Ancient Hymns of Holy Church, Hartford, 1845, being trs. from the Latin; the "Additional Hymns," pp. 81-127, were selected from the trs. from the Latin by Isaac Williams. A few of Bp. Williams's trs. have come into C. U. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) [J. J.]

Williams, William, of Pantycelyn, was the Sweet Singer of Wales. He was b. at Cefn-y-Coed, in the Parish of Llanfair-y-bryn, near Llandoverly, in 1717. He was ordained a deacon of the Established Church in 1740, by Dr. Claget, Bishop of St. Davids, and for three years he served the Curacies of Llanwrtyd and Llanddewi-Abergweysyn. He never received Priest's Orders. He became early acquainted with the revivalist Daniel Rowlands, and for thirty-five years he preached once a month at Llanillan and Caio and Llanawel, besides the preaching journeys he took in North and South Wales. He was held in great esteem as a preacher. In 1744 his first book of hymns appeared under the title of Halleluiahs, and soon ran through three editions. In 1762, he published another book under the title of Y Môr o Wydr, which soon went through five editions. His son John pub. an excellent edition of his hymns in the year 1811. In addition to his Welsh hymns Williams also pub. several in English as:—

(1.) Hosannah to the Son of David; or, Hymns of Praise to God, For our glorious Redemption by Christ. Some few translated from the Welsh Hymn-Book, but mostly composed on new Subjects. By William Williams. Bristol: Printed by John Grabham, in Narrow-Wine Street, 1759. This contains 51 hymns of which 11 are trs. from his Welsh hymns. This little book was reprinted by D. Sedgwick in 1869.

(2.) Gloria in Excelsis: or, Hymns of Praise to God and the Lamb. By W. Williams . . . Carmarthen. Printed for the Author by John Root, removed to Priory Street, near the Church, M.DCC.LXXI. This contains 70 hymns, not including parts.

From these volumes the following hymns are in C. U. :—

- i. From the Hosannah, 1759 :—
 1. Jesus, my Saviour is enough. Jesus, All in All.
 2. My God, my God, Who art my all. Communion with God desired.
 3. The enormous load of human guilt. God's love unspeakable.
- ii. From the Gloria in Excelsis, 1772.
 4. Awake, my soul, and rise. Passiontide.
 5. Beneath Thy Cross I lay me down. Passiontide.
 6. Hark! the voice of my Beloved. The Voice of Jesus.

7. Jesus, lead us with Thy power. Divine Guidance Desired. Sometimes given as "Father, lead us with Thy power."

8. Jesus, Whose Almighty sceptre. Jesus as King.

9. Saviour, look on Thy beloved. The Help of Jesus desired.

10. White and ruddy is my Beloved. Beauties of Jesus.

Williams is most widely known through his two hymns, "Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah," and "O'er those gloomy hills of darkness." Williams d. at Pantycelyn, Jan. 11, 1791. [See Wales Hymns.] [W. G. T.]

Willis, Nathaniel Parker, was b. at Portland, Maine, Jan. 20, 1807, and educated at Yale College, graduating in 1826. After writing for a time for the American Monthly Magazine, which he established, and the New York Mirror, into which the former was merged, he was attached to the American Legation at the French Court. His stay in Europe extended from 1831 to 1837. On his return he became in 1839 one of the editors of The Corsair. His works are numerous, and include Sacred Poems, 1843. He d. Jan. 29, 1867. His sister, Mrs. Parton, is the well-known "Fanny Fern." His hymn—"The perfect world by Adam trod" (Dedication of a Place of Worship), was "Written to be sung at the Consecration of Hanover Street [Unitarian] Church, Boston," in 1826, and since then has been widely used, although of no exceeding merit. [F. M. B.]

Willkommen unter deiner Schaar. N. L. von Zinzendorf. [Christian Church.] The origin of this hymn was somewhat remarkable. On May 10, 1737, Zinzendorf had been consecrated, at Berlin, by Daniel Ernst Jablonsky (see p. 764, H.), as Bishop and Ordinary of the Moravian Brethren's Unity. In 1741 J. L. Dober, who had officiated as General-Elder (General-Aelteste) of the entire Moravian connexion, resigned his office. Zinzendorf then held (from Sept. 11 to Sept. 23, 1741) a noteworthy synodical conference at London at which the assembled brethren agreed that no suitable successor to Dober could be found in their midst. On Sept. 16, 1741, they therefore resolved to beseech the Lord Jesus Christ Himself to take the office of General-Elder of the entire Unity, and, as on casting lots the result was favourable to their wishes, they took for granted that He had assumed this position, and appointed 12 Assistant-Elders (Vice-Aelteste) to form the directing General Conference of the Unity, Zinzendorf's power of general superintendence being abolished (see Koch, v. 264). It was on this occasion that Zinzendorf wrote this hymn. Albert Knapp in his ed. of Zinzendorf's Geistliche Gedichte (1845, p. 288), entitles it "When Jesus assumed the position of General-Elder," and dates it Sept. 16, 1741. It was included in Appx. xl., circa 1743, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1778, and in 14 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1099, st. vi.-viii. were omitted, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (ed. 1851, p. 168) it is dated "In London, 16 Sept., 1741." Ty. as:—

1. Welcome among thy flock of grace. This is a somewhat free tr. of st. i., H., iv., v., ix.-xiii., as No. 529 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1769 (1866, No. 834). It was adopted, slightly altered and beginning, "We hail Thee, Lead, thy Church's Rock," as No. 278 in the 1867 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 423, in 6 st.). From Mercer st. l., v., viii., passed into the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868, No. 272.

2. Welcome among thy human flock. This is No. 234 in the Appx. of 1743 to the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (ed. 1784, pt. ii., No. 223). [J. M.]

Wilson, Caroline, née Fry, daughter of a farmer, was b. at Tunbridge Wells, Dec. 31, 1787. In 1831 she was married to a Mr. Wilson, and d. at Tunbridge Wells, Sept. 17, 1846. Her publications were somewhat numerous, and included a History of England in Verse, 1801; a Poetical Catechism, 1821; Serious Poetry, 1822; Death, and other Poems, 1823, &c. Her Autobiography, Letters, and Remains were pub. in 1843, and her Table of the Lord in 1859. Her best known hymns are:—

1. For what shall I praise Thee, My God and my King? Thanksgiving in Affliction. In C. U. in G. Britain and America.

2. Often the clouds of deepest woe. Affliction leading to Glory. From her Poetical Catechism, 1821, p. 26. In Kennedy, 1853, it begins "Fall oft the clouds of deepest woe." [J. J.]

Wilson, Jane, known as Sister Beatrice, the Mother Superior of the Sisterhood of St. Thomas the Martyr, Oxford, was the daughter of a clergyman, and d. in 1872 aged 36 years. She pub. Legenda Monastica, and other Poems (Oxford: Mowbray), which has passed through several editions. This work includes 16 hymns, originally written for Hymns used at the Church of St. Thomas the Martyr, Oxford, edited by the Vicar, the Rev. T. Chamberlain, 1861; enlarged ed., 1870, as follows:—

1. A Fast before a Feast. Shrove Tuesday.
2. A virgin heart she brought to Christ. St. Bride's side.
3. Again our Lent has come to us. Lent.
4. At eventide was light. Evening.
5. Behold, she comes, in silence. Conception of B. V. M.
6. Calm the saint's slumber. St. Peter ad Vincula; or, Lazarus Day.
7. Deep thoughts were in her breast. Visitation of B. V. M.
8. I love the courts of Jesus. Love for the House of God.
9. Jesus, ever present With Thy Church below. Holy Communion.
10. Loud in exultation. St. George.
11. Love and death have wrestled fiercely. St. Mary Magdalene.
12. 'Midst the bitter waters Moses. The Holy Cross.
13. The Church and world for once. St. Philip and James.
14. 'Tis good, O Jesu, that alone with Thee. Advent.
15. We hail renowned Alban. St. Alban.
16. We cry to Thee, O Jesu. Evening. [J. J.]

Wilt Thou forgive that sin when I began. John Donne. [Lent.] Concerning this hymn, to which special reference is made in the article on Early English Hymnody, Isaac Walton says, in his Life of Donne, after quoting the hymn in detail:—

"I have the rather mentioned this hymn for that he caused it to be set to a most grave and solemn tune, and to be often sung to the organ by the Choristers of St. Paul's (Cathedral) Church in his own hearing, especially at the evening service, and at his return from his customary devotions in that place, did occasionally say to a friend, 'the words of this hymn have restored to me the same thoughts of joy that possessed my soul in my sickness, when I composed it. And, O the power of Church-music! that harmony added to this hymn has raised the affections of my heart, and quickened my grace of zeal and gratitude: and I observe that I always return from paying this public duty of prayer and praise with an unexpressible tranquillity of mind, and a willingness to leave the world.'"—Walton's Lives, 1670.

The special sickness during which this hymn was composed fell upon the author during the earlier part of his life. It was sung at St. Paul's Cathedral, at intervals from 1621 to 1631, when Donne died. It was published subsequently in Donne's Poems in 1633; again in 1635, and in later editions, and is usually entitled, "A Hymn to God the Father." Orig. text in Walton's Lives, 1670 (1850), pp. 53-4. [English Hymns, Easy, § VII.] [J. J.]

Winchester, Caleb Thomas, M.A., was b. in 1847. He is Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut. His hymn, "The Lord our God alone is strong" (Dedication of a Science Hall), was written for the opening of the Orange Judd Hall of Natural Science, Wesleyan University, Middletown. It was included in the Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878 (Natter's Hymn Studies, 1884). [J. J.]

Winckler, Johann Joseph, s. of Gottfried Winckler, town clerk of Lucka, Sachsen-Altenburg, was b. at Lucka, Dec. 23, 1670. He became a student of Theology at the University of Leipzig, during the time when A. H. Francke and J. C. Schade were holding their Bible readings, and his sympathies henceforth were with the Pietistic movement. In 1692 he was appointed preacher to the St. George's Hospital at Magdeburg, and afternoon preacher at St. Peter's Church there. He became chaplain to the Prince Christian Ludwig regiment in 1695, and went with it to Holland and Italy. After the Peace of Ryswijk (Oct. 30, 1697) he made a tour in Holland and England. Returning to Magdeburg, he was appointed, in 1698, diaconus of the Cathedral, and in 1703 also inspector of the so-called Holzkreis. Finally, in 1714, he became chief preacher at the Cathedral, and in 1716, also Consistorialrath. He d. at Magdeburg, Aug. 11, 1722 (Wetzel, iii. 437; Grisehew-Kirchner Nachricht to Freylinghausen, p. 53; Koch, iv. 983; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1888, p. 170, &c.).

Winckler was a man who had the courage of his opinions, and his hymn No. iv. below is a picture of the stand he was willing to make when conscience bade him. Not that he was fond of controversy, but rather the reverse. Twice however he raised considerable feeling against himself in Magdeburg, first by the position he took up against theatre going, and afterwards by his well-meant attempt to bring about a closer union between the Lutheran and Reformed churches in Prussia. But the opposition he encountered he bore patiently, and in the spirit of his hymn No. i. below. His hymns, some 27 in all, appeared mostly in the Appr. to the 2nd ed., 1703, of H. G. Neuss's Heb-Opfer (p. 798, il.), in Forst's G. B., Berlin, 1708,* and in Freylinghausen's Neues gestrichenes G. B., 1714. They rank among the better productions of the earlier Pietistic writers, and are distinguished by firm faith, earnestness, and picturesqueness; but are somewhat lengthy and frequently in unusual metres.

Those of Winckler's hymns which have passed into English are:—

i. Meine Seele senket stoh. Resignation. 1st pub. in the 1703 ed. of Neuss's Heb-Opfer,

* Dr. J. F. Bachmann in his Zur Geschichte der Berliner Gesangbücher, 1866, was only able to describe the 3rd ed. of 1713. The present writer has examined the 2nd ed. of 1711 (Neu-ermähltes gestrichenes G. B.). The references to the 1st ed. of 1708 are from the markings by Professor Müntzell, in a copy of the 1856 presented to him by Dr. Bachmann, and now in the possession of the present writer.

p. 248, in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled "Ps. 62 v. 1. My soul is still towards God." Repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 511, and in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 714. It is a fine hymn on patient waiting upon God's will. Tr. as:—

Yes, my spirit faint would sink. In full, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 198. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 138, it is greatly altered, beginning "In Thy heart and hands, my God"; and this form is No. 419 in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880.

Another tr. is: "Wearily my spirit sinketh," by Mrs. Bevan, 1858, p. 68.

ii. O sterner Stand, o salig Leben. Christian Simplicity, in Forst's G. B., 1708, p. 519 (1711, No. 642), in 8 st. of 8 l., repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 322, and in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 331. The trs. are:—

1. O sweet condition, happy living. This, omitting st. iii., is No. 658 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

2. O best condition, happy living. This is a tr. of st. i., ii., vi., viii., based on the 1754 version, as No. 441 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1888, No. 584).

iii. Ringe recht, wean Gottes Gnade. Christian Warfare. A thoughtful and powerful hymn, included as No. 359 in Freylinghausen, 1714, in 23 st. of 4 l., and thence in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 336. Wetzel, iii. 437, says it was written as a hymn on the three favourite Scripture passages of Ursula Maria Zorn, of Berlin, and was 1st pub. at the end of her funeral sermon by Johann Lysius, pastor of St. George's Church, Berlin. Thus st. i.-v. are founded on St. Luke xiii. 24; vi.-xv. on Philipp. ii. 12; and xvi.-xxiii. on Gen. xix. 15-22. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Strive, when thou art call'd of God. This is a good tr. of st. i., iii.-viii., xii., xiii., xv., xvi. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 46. Repeated, abridged, in Kennedy, 1863; the Harrow School H. Bk., 1866, and Rugby School H. Bk., 1876.

2. Strive aright when God doth call thee. This is a tr. of st. i., iii., iv., xii., xiii., xv., xvi., by Miss Winkworth, founded on her Lyra Ger. version, as No. 128 in her C. B. for England, 1863. Repeated in the Marlborough College H. Bk., 1869.

3. Thou must wrestle, when God's mercy. This is a tr. of st. i., ii., x., xxii., signed E. T. L., as No. 230, in Dr. Paganstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is: "Wrestle on! for God is pleading," by Miss Boringham in the British Herald, Sept., 1855, p. 137.

iv. Sollt loh aus Furcht vor Menschenkindern. Adherence to Christ. A hymn on constancy, and against cowardice and time-serving. In Forst's G. B., 1708, p. 1135 (1711, No. 701), in 17 st. of 4 l. Repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 541 (entitled "For a Preacher"), in the Univ. L. S. 1851, No. 658, &c. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Shall I for fear of feeble man. This is a vigorous tr. in 10 st. (representing st. i.-lii., xii.-xv., xvii.; st. iv. being freely from vi., vii., and st. v. from viii., xi.), by J. Wesley in the Hym. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1866-72, vol. i. p. 177). Included in full in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1849, No. 875 abridged). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1760, st. i.-vii. were included as No. 270; st. viii.-x. being added in the ed. of 1800 (1875, No. 279). The full form is in the Meth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863, and in Mercer's C. P. & H.

Bk., 1857, and abridged in Mercer's Oxford ed., 1864; Spurgeon's O. C. H. Bk., 1866, and others. It is also found in the following forms:—

(1) Awed by a mermaid's brown, shall I (Weesley's st. li.). In W. Carn Wilson's Ges. Prot., 1842.

(2) Saviour of men, Thy searching eye (Weesley's st. vi.). In J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hym., 1841, and various American collections.

(3) Our Jesus, our Blood, we have present (Weesley's st. lx. alt.). In M. Madan's Ps. & Hym., 1780.

Winkler, Edwin Theodore, D.D., was b. in Savannah, Nov. 13, 1823, and educated at Brown University. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1846, and subsequently filled several important literary and other appointments in addition to his pastorates. He d. at Marion, Alabama, Nov. 10, 1883. He compiled The Sacred Lyre, a Collection of popular Hymns, 1855 (enlarged ed., 1869), to which he contributed 8 hymns, the first lines of which are given in Burrage. (Burrage's Baptist H. Writers, 1888, p. 416.) Some of these have passed into other American collections, including "Our land with mercies crowned." (National Hymn.) [J. J.]

Winkworth, Catherine, daughter of Henry Winkworth, of Alderley Edge, Cheshire, was b. in London, Sep. 13, 1829. Most of her early life was spent in the neighbourhood of Manchester. Subsequently she removed with the family to Clifton, near Bristol. She d. suddenly of heart disease, at Monnetier, in Savoy, in July, 1878. Miss Winkworth pub.:

Trs. from the German of the Life of Pastor Fiechter, the Founder of the Sisterhood of Protestant Deaconesses at Kaisersworth, 1861; and of the Life of Amelia Stewing, 1863.

Her sympathy with practical efforts for the benefit of women, and with a pure devotional life, as seen in these tra., received from her the most practical illustration possible in the deep and active interest which she took in educational work in connection with the Clifton Association for the Higher Education of Women, and kindred societies there and elsewhere. Our interest, however, is mainly centred in her hymnological work as embodied in her:

(1) Lyra Germanica, 1st Ser., 1856. (2) Lyra Germanica, 2nd Ser., 1858. (3) The Chorale Book for England (containing tra. from the German, together with music), 1863; and (4) her charming biographical work, the Christian Singers of Germany, 1869.

In a sympathetic article on Miss Winkworth in the Inquirer of July 20, 1878, Dr. Martineau says:—

"The translations contained in these volumes are invariably faithful, and for the most part both terse and delicate; and an admirable art is applied to the management of complex and difficult versification. They have not quite the fire of John Wesley's versions of Moravian hymns, or the wonderful fusion and reproduction of thought which may be found in Coleridge. But if less flowing they are more conscientious than either, and attain a result as poetical as severe exactitude admits, being only a little short of 'native music.'"

Dr. Percival, then Principal of Clifton College, also wrote concerning her (in the Bristol Times and Mirror), in July, 1878:—

"She was a person of remarkable intellectual and social gifts, and very unusual attainments; but what specially distinguished her was her combination of rare ability and great knowledge with a certain tender and sympathetic refinement which constitutes the special charm of the true womanly character."

Dr. Macneil (as above) says her religious life afforded "a happy example of the piety which the Church of England discipline may implant. . . . The fast hold she retained of her discipleship of Christ was no example of 'feminine simplicity,' carrying on the childish mind into maturer years, but the clear allegiance of a firm mind, familiar with the pretensions of non-Christian schools, well able to test them, and undiverted by them from her first love."

Miss Winkworth, although not the earliest of modern translators from the German into English, is certainly the foremost in rank and popularity. Her translations are the most widely used of any from that language, and have had more to do with the modern revival of the English use of German hymns than the versions of any other writer. [J. J.]

Winter reigneth o'er the land. By W. W. How. [Winter.] Written for and first pub. in the S. F. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 64, and from thence has passed into numerous collections. In a few hymn-books, including Sir Josiah Mason's Birmingham Orphanage Hymnal, st. iii.-vi. are given as a hymn, "Sunny days are past and gone," but this mutilated text is not popular. [J. J.]

Wir glauben all an einen Gott, Schöpfer Himmels und der Erden. M. Luther. [Nicene Creed.] This very free setting of the Nicene Creed was 1st pub. in the Geistliche gesungte Buchlein, Wittenberg, 1524, in 8 st. of 10 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 10. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 53; the Var. L. S., 1851, No. 253, &c. During the Reformation period it was generally sung after the Sermon. Luther included it among the Christliche Geseng . . . zum Begräbnis, 1542. It had been used at the funeral of the Elector Friedrich the Wise of Saxony, on May 9, 1525, and was often in later times sung before funeral sermons. Tr. as:—

1. We all one only God believe. By A. T. Russell, for his Ps. & Hym., 1851, No. 15.

2. We all believe in One true God, Maker of the earth and heaven, Who hath. By R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 59. Repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880.

3. We all believe in One true God, Maker of the earth and heaven; The Father. By Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, Appx., No. vi. Repeated, reconst. by Dr. Bacon, in his Hym. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 47.

Other tra. are:—

(1) "We believe all upon one God." By H. Crockett, 1839 (Remains, 1846, p. 640). (2) "We trow in God allaverle." In the Guide and Guide's Guide, ed. 1668, folio 6, (1868, p. 9). (3) "Believe we all in our Lord God," as No. 185 in part. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1764. (4) "In One God we all believe." By Miss Fry, 1846, p. 50. (5) "We believe in God the Father." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 57 (1847, p. 72). (6) "We all believe in God Most High." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1863, p. 86. (?) "In One true God we all believe." By Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 571. Repeated, altered, in his Devotions, 1876, p. 89. [J. M.]

Wir legen, Herr! in deinem Namen. [Laying the Foundation Stone of a Church.] Included as No. 140 in the Ohio G. B., 1870, in 4 st. of 6 l., entitled, "For the Festival of the Corner Stone laying." No author's name is given. Tr. as:—"In Thy dear name and by Thy favour." in full by C. H. L. Schachtel, as No. 126 in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880. [J. M.]

Wir singen dir Immanuel. P. Gerhardt. [Christmas.] Included in the Berlin

ed. of 1653 of Crüger's Praxis, No. 100, in 16 st. of 4 l. In Ebeling's ed. of Gerhard's Geistliche Andachten, Fünfte Dutzet, 1667, No. 52, four st. were added as iv., viii., ix., xvii. The complete text in 20 st. is in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhard's Geistl. Lieder, No. 10; Bachmann's ed., No. 42, and the Use. L. S., 1851, No. 58. It is a beautiful hymn of praise to Emmanuel, the longed for by the Fathers and the Prophets. Tr. as:—

1. Emmanuel, we sing Thy praise. This tr. of st. i.-iii., v.-vii., xviii.-xx., appeared in the British Magazine, January, 1835, p. 35. Repeated, omitting the tr. of st. xix., and beginning, "Emmanuel, Thy Name we sing," in Kennedy, 1863.

2. Emmanuel, we sing to Thee. A tr. of st. i.-iii., v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 12 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

3. Emmanuel, to Thee we sing, O Hm, &c. A tr. of st. i.-iii., vi., xx., based on the earlier versions, as No. 35 in J. F. Thrupp's Ps. & Hys., 1853.

4. Thee, O Immanuel, we praise. A good tr. of st. i.-iii., v.-vii., xviii.-xx., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 28. In her 2nd ed., 1856, p. 24, she added a tr. of st. ix., and thus in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 35. Repeated, abridged, in the Hyl. for St. John's, Aberdeen, 1870, and Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871; and, beginning, "With all Thy saints, Thee, Lord, we sing" (st. ii.), in Boardman's Sk., Philadelphia, 1861.

5. We sing to Thee, Emmanuel, The Prince, &c. A good tr. of st. i.-iii., v.-vii., xviii.-xx., by Miss Cox, contributed to Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 55, and in her own Hys. from Ger., 1864, p. 35. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1868, p. 58, it is in full, and in Jellicoe's Coll., 1867, omitting the tr. of st. v. In the Amer. Bapt. Hs. & Tune Bk., 1871, it begins, "All glory, worship, thanks and praise" (st. ii., iii., xix., xx.).

6. We sing to Thee, Immanuel! Thou Prince of Life. A tr. of st. i., ii., xix., xx., signed "F. C. C.," as No. 26 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Other tr. are: (1) "We sing to Thee, Immanuel, Thou Prince of Life," &c., as No. 109, in pt. iii., 1748, of the Moravian H. Bk. (1784, pt. i., No. 436). (2) "Immanuel, to Thee we sing, Thou Prince," &c., by L. E. Schlecht, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1799, No. 45 (1829, No. 45). (3) "Immanuel! Thy praise we sing," by Miss Fry, 1859, p. 163. (4) "To Thee, Immanuel, we sing, The Prince," &c., by Miss Manington, 1864, p. 34. (5) "Immanuel! to Thee we sing, The Fount," by J. Kelly, 1867, p. 37. [J. M.]

Wisdom, Robert. [Old Version § ix. 5.]

With heart, and soul, with mind, and might. J. Montgomery. [Sunday Schools.] Printed on a broadsheet for use at a gathering of Sunday schools on Whit Monday, 1851, and included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, in 6 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

With joy we meditate the grace. I. Watts. [Our High Priest.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 125, in 6 st. of 4 l. J. Wesley included it with the omission of st. iii. in his Charlestown Ps. & Hys., 1736-7, and again in the Ps. & Hys., 1748. From the latter it passed into G. Whitefield's Coll. of Hys., 1759; M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, and others. This text, with slight alterations, was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. Another text, found mostly in the Church of England collections, is from Toplady's Ps. and Hys., 1776, with additional alterations of a later date, the principal sources of which are Stowell, 1831; Bickersteth, 1838, and Elliot, 1835. In common with many of Watts's longer hymns, most forms of the text are abbreviated, and the number and arrangement of stanzas vary considerably. These can be tested by any modern edition of the Hys. & Spiritual Songs. In Harland's Ch. Psalter & Hyl., 1876, it begins, "With joy we celebrate the grace"; and in the Down and Connor H. Bk., 1868, "With joy we contemplate the grace."

Another form of this hymn was given in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. 8. This began, "Jesus, the Lord, Who once on earth," and was composed of st. i., ii., new, and the rest from Watts, st. i.-iv. and vi., with st. i. ll. 1, 2, altered. In the 1751 revised ed. of the Draft it was slightly altered, and there began, "Jesus, the Son of God, Who once." Stanza vii. was also rewritten as st. vii., viii. These alterations have been ascribed to Hugh Blair. The 1751 text was given in the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphrases, 1781, with st. v., vii., viii. rewritten. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, l.), the 1781 alterations are ascribed to him. In Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphs. & Hys., 1853, the text is reduced to 4 st., and begins with st. iii., "To human weakness not severe." [J. M.]

With praise to Thee my strain began. I. Williams. [Charity. Lore.] This is the concluding piece of his Hys. on the Catechism, 1842, in 14 st. of 4 l. and is based on the concluding words of the Catechism, "And be in charity with all men." Two centos therefrom are in C. U.:—(1) "All that we know of saints above" (Quinquagesima), and (2) "How shall we shew our love to Thee?" (Brotherly Love). These centos are of merit and will bear wider adoption than is now accorded to them. [J. J.]

With sin I would not make abode. T. H. Gill. [Early Piety.] Written in 1855, and first pub. in his Golden Chain of Praise, 1869, p. 154, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Early Love. 'How good it is to close with Christ betimes!'" Oliver Cromwell. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, six stanzas are given as No. 1184, beginning with st. vi., "Lord! in the fulness of my might." This text is also given in other collections. [J. J.]

With solemn thanksgiving our Lord. H. Blair (?). [Christ's Invitation.] It appeared as No. 26 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of Matt. xi. 25-30, in 8 st. of 4 l. In the Draft of 1781 included, considerably altered, as No. 34, and beginning, "Thus spoke the Saviour of the world," and with st. ii., iii., condensed as ii. Thence with 10 lines altered in the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs., issued in that year by the Church of Scotland and still in use. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, l.) the original is ascribed to Blair, and the alterations in 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781, omitting st. iii., was included as No. 93 in the Eng.

Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and slightly altered, and omitting st. iii., iv., vii., in Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraph. & Hys. for Congregational Singing, 1858, as pt. i. of No. 61. In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 506, and Martineau's Hymns, 1873, No. 122, beginning with st. v. altered, "Come unto me, all ye who mourn." [J. M.]

With thankful hearts our songs we raise. [Holy Baptism.] This hymn is No. 278, in the 4th ed., 1832, of J. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hymns, in 4 st. of 4 l. In common with all the hymns in the collection, it is unsigned, and there is nothing to determine its authorship. It is sometimes attributed to "Bickersteth," but for this ascription we know of no authority whatever. It is in somewhat extensive use in America. [J. J.]

With Thee, Lord, will I walk by day. T. Davis. [Morning.] 1st pub. in his Devotional Verse for a Month, 1855, in 4 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words "When I awake I am still with Thee," Ps. cxxxix. 18. In 1858 it was included, unaltered, in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., No. 911, and continued in later editions. When given in the author's Family Hymnal, 1860, and Hymns Old and New, 1861, st. iv. l. 3, "give" was changed to grant. This rendering was repeated in his Annus Sanctus, 1877, p. 246, as the authorized text. [J. J.]

With years oppressed, with sorrow worn. Sir R. Grant. [Ps. lxxi.] Pub. in his posthumous Sacred Poems, 1859, p. 31, in 5 st. of 6 l. It is in C. U. in its full or abbreviated form, and also as "Thy mercy heard my infant prayer" (st. ii.). [J. J.]

Wither, George, or Wyther—spelled in both ways by himself, the first usually, the second occasionally, e.g. in Prince Henrie's Obsequies (1612), and erroneously Withers, was b. on June 11th, 1588, at Bentworth, near Alton, Hampshire. He was the only son of George Wither, of Bentworth. His early education was at the Grammar School of Colemore or Colemar, under its celebrated master, John Greaves. After thorough training and discipline here he was entered in 1604 at Magdalen College, Oxford. His tutor was John Warner, subsequently D.D. and Bishop of Rochester. He had only been three years at the University when malicious and ignorant persons persuaded his father that more learning was not required. And so, as he modestly tells us in his Abuses Stript and Whipt (1613), he was "withdrawn" "without taking any degree," being now destined, as he moderately puts it, "for the plough," that is, for rustic employment on the paternal estate. This proved utterly un congenial. He is found next at one of the Inns of Chancery, afterwards at Lincoln's Inn, and intimate with William Browne, the poet, of Britannia's Pastorals. His title-pages from 1617 to 1620 self-describe him as "Gentleman," and as "of the Societic of Lincoln's Inne" (Fidella (1617), and 1st Psalme (1620), and Workes (1620)). But Anthony a-Wood informs us:—

"still his gung after things more smooth and delightful, he did at length make himself known to the world (after he had taken several rambles therein) by certain specimens of poetry, which being dispersed in several hands, he became shortly after a public author and most admired by some in that age for his quick advancement in that faculty" (Athenæ Oxon. s. n.).

How uncritical was this miserable criticism, will be understood when it is recalled that amongst these "certain specimens" was the Shepherds Hunting under the first form of "A new song of a young man's opinion of the difference between good and bad women" (Pepysian, ad Percy MS.), Prince Henrie's Obsequies (1612), Epithalamia (1612), and his stinging and patriotically outspoken Abuses Stript and Whipt. The last drew down upon him the wrath of the monarch (James I.) and nobles, and cast him prisoner into the Marshalsea. Four large editions within a year, and numerous others up to 1622 and continually onward (exclusive of the reproductions in his Workes) was the answer of the People to the Upper Ten. While in prison he wrote some of the most delicious of his verse. He likewise composed A Satyre to the King (1615). The wisest fool in Christendom was shrewd enough to perceive that it would be safer to make such a subject a friend than an enemy. He had deftly signed the dedication to the king "his Majesty's most loyal Subject, and yet Prisoner in the Marshalsey." It procured him his release. From this time onward he was perpetually printing something, now in verse and now in prose, until the aggregate exceeded a hundred of books and pamphlets. There are several fairly accurate enumerations of them, e.g. British Bibliographer, i. 174-203, 305-32, 417-40; ii. 17-32, 378-91; Sir Egerton Brydges' Censura and Restituta; Hazlitt's Bibliography (1867). The Spenser Society reprinted a large portion of the Works in prose and verse; but there was really no editing and no annotation. His successive books are the main facts of Wither's life; yet was he an active member of the nation. Spite of his hard usage and imprisonments, he was loyal as any cavalier. When Charles I. proceeded to declare and carry war into his native Scotland against the Covenanters in 1639, George Wither served his Majesty as a captain of horse and quarter-master of his regiment under the Earl of Arundel. How sorrowful the wrong-headedness of the king who compelled such a true man as Wither to forsake him and prefer the kingdom to the king, as many others who with pathetic reluctance became Roundheads! In 1641-2 he sold his hereditary estates and raised a troop of horse for the Parliament, in whose army he was promoted to be major. On his colours he carried this motto, Pro Rege, Legè, Grægæ. Having been taken prisoner by the Royalists, a good-humoured jest of Sir John Denham it is alleged saved his life, to wit, that "his Majesty really must not hang George Wither, for so long as he lives no one will account him [Sir John] the worst poet in England." He was set free. Not long after he was constituted by the Long Parliament a Justice of Peace in quorura for Hampshire, Surrey and Essex. This he held for six years, and afterwards was made by Cromwell Major-General of all the horse and foot in the County of Surrey. On the title-page of his Royal Ominous Votum (1656) in the British Museum there is a contemporary ms. note, "lately made Master of the State Office." At the Restoration he was shamefully dealt with, and by a vote of the Convention Parliament, was committed to Newgate because of his Vox Vulgi—a noble piece of fiery and idiomatic English, and manly pleading for respect to popular rights and liberties. For his Prisoner's Plea humbly offered (1661) he was again imprisoned, this time in the Tower. He married (Aubrey informs us) Elizabeth, eldest daughter of H. Emerson of South Lanuk, who, he says, was "a great wit and could write in verse too," and was of the same English Emersons from whom the great American Ralph Waldo Emerson descended. He had issue. He was at liberty when he died on 2nd May, 1667. Aubrey states that he was buried within the east doorway of Savoy Church in the Strand, having apparently lived near it, and either died in the church or in his own house (the phrasing being ambiguous).

This Dictionary is not a fitting place for any detailed criticism of the superabundant writings of George Wither. James Montgomery, in his admirable Lectures on Poets and Poetry, thus sums up his estimate of him and them:—

"There are scattered throughout his multifarious and very unequal productions, many passages of great beauty and excellence. He was avowedly a Christian poet, though he frequently lost his Christian meekness in the heat of polemics; but his zeal carried with it every evidence of honesty; and he was a sufferer almost to martyrdom, both for his loyalty and his orthodoxy, in the troublous times in which he lived. That he was a poet can never be questioned by any reader who has taste and sensibility enough to understand and enjoy the exquisitely affecting confession of his obligations to the Muse. That he was a Christian will be no little questioned by those who are most extensively acquainted with the character of his religious compositions" (s. n.).

Archbishop Trench, in annotating a charming sacred song entitled Vanished Blessings ("No voice which I did more esteem, Than music in her sweetest key," &c.), thus annotates:—

"I have detached these two stanzas from a longer poem of which they constitute the only valuable portion (?). George Wither (a most profuse power forth of English rhyme; Phillips calls him) was indeed so intolerable a power in verse, so overlaid his good with indifferent or bad, that one may easily forget how real a gift he possessed, and sometimes shewed that he possessed" (Household Book of English Poetry, 1866).

Mrs. Masson says of him—"he is remembered now-a-days as pre-eminently the Puritan poet, whose irrepressible Muse made herself heard even amid the din of civil war" (Three Centuries of English Poetry, p. 375). She quotes his delightful "Christmas" ("So now is come our joyfullest part"), and "Of Poesy" (which Milton did not disdain to utilize), and his "Shall I, wasting in despair." With reference to the "irrepressible Muse" of Wither, it is a felicitous characterisation however regarded, inasmuch as so "irrepressible" was he that he actually set up the types and printed off at least one of his bulkier books. Wither's contributions to hymnology are to be found chiefly in the following:—

(a) Reveries Upon the First Psalm (1620). At the close is a metrical paraphrase of Ecclesiastes xii. 1-5; (b) Paraphrase on the Creed and the Lord's Prayer (in Works 1620; separately 1688 and mis-asserted to be now "first printed"); (c) The Songs of the Old Testament, Translated into English Measures; preserving the Natural Phrase and genuine Sense of the Holy Text To every Song is added a new and easy Tune (1621). This was reprinted in Russell's Library of Old Authors; (d) The Hymns and Songs of the Church (1623). This was published Cum Privilegio Regis Regali. It was reprinted like c.; (e) The Praises of David translated as Lyrick Verse, according to the scope of the Original (1632). Gutch had an autograph ms. of an alleged different text of the versified Psalms which passed into the Cesar Library; (f) A Collection of Emblems, Ancient and Modern, qualified with Metrical Illustrations both Moral and Divine (1636). This was a special favourite of Mia; (g) Salveick; or Britons Second Remembrance, bringing to Remembrance (in praisefull and penitentiall Hymns, Spirituall Songs, and Morall-Odes (1641). This was reprinted like c and d; (h) Three Graines of Spirituall Frankincense infused into Three Hymnes of Praise (1651).

It is discreditable to the Church of England, of whom he was a devoted son to the close of his life, and to Nonconformity alike, that many, very many more of his Hymns and Spirituall Songs have not found their way into their hymnals. A critical yet sympathetic reader would easily find a golden sheaf of musical, and well-wrought sacred song. (See Willmott's Lives of Sacred Poets; Gutch's Collection of Works in 3 vols. (1820); also Sir Egerton Brydges's reprints; Ellis's Holland's Psalmists; Campbell; Allibone, s. v.; and several of his Hymns elsewhere noticed, a. v.

Withington, Leonard, D.D., was b. at Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1789, and graduated at Yale 1814. He was pastor of the First Congregational Church, Newburyport, Massachusetts, from 1816, and d. there, April 22, 1883. His hymn, "O Saviour of a world undone" (Passiontide), appeared in E. Nason's Cong. H. Bk. 1857. [F. M. B.]

Witness Divine, the Just and True. C. Wesley. [Confidence through Faith.] This poem was given in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 34 st. of 4 l., and divided into 4 parts:—

- Pt. I. Witness Divine, the Just and True (9 st.).
- Pt. II. Come, O Thou greater than our heart (8 st.).
- Pt. III. Unchangeable Almighty Lord (9 st.).
- Pt. IV. The Lord is King, the earth submits (9 st.).

From these parts the following centos have come into C. U.:—

1. Come, O Thou greater than our heart. In several American collections.
2. Giver of peace and unity. Also in American hymn-books.
3. The Lord is King, the earth submits. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1786, No. 371, and later collections.
4. Unchangeable Almighty Lord. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 497, and subsequent editions.

This poem is a paraphrase of a part of Isaiah xxviii., and is given in full in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 330. [J. J.]

Witter, Will Ellsworth, was b. Dec. 9, 1854, near La Grange, New York, and educated at the Genesee State Normal School, New York, and the University of Rochester. From the latter he passed in 1880 to the Rochester Baptist Theological Seminary, and in 1884 he entered the Baptist Ministry. He has written several songs and poems, one of which:—

While Jesus whispers to you (The Divine Call) has come into somewhat prominent use. It was written in July 1878, and originated mainly in the great anxiety of the author respecting two of his pupils. In 1879 it was set to music by H. R. Palmer, and included in his Book of Antems, 1878; from whence it passed into Good as Gold, and I. D. Sankey's Sacred S. and Selos, Lond. 1881. [J. J.]

Woher kommt mir doch diese Zeit. [Cross and Consolation.] P. Hommel, in his Geistliche Volkslieder, Leipzig, 1864, No. 147, prints this, in 4 st. of 4 l., from the Neue ausgerichtete Sing-Schul, a Roman Catholic collection which he describes as "apparently of the second half of the 17th cent." It is fr. as "Why is it that life is no longer and?" By Miss Winkworth, in her Christian Singers of Germany, 1869, p. 255 (she quotes the first line as "Woher denn kommt es zu dieser Zeit"). [J. M.]

Wohl dem, der in Gottes Furcht steht. H. Luther. [Ps. cxviii.] This version of Ps. cxviii, was 1st pub. in Eyn Buchdrucken, Erfurt, 1524, in 5 st. of 4 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 8. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 82, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, &c. Being the description of a pious household it was often sung at weddings. Tr. as:—

- (1) "Blessed are all that feare the Lord." By Sp. Chorale, 1638 (Nemesis, 1846, p. 573). He also gives a second version of Ps. cxviii., 3 st. of 9 l., which contains many lines identical, but in form rather follows the version beginning "Wohl dem, der den Herren fürchtet," which Wackernagel, iii., p. 553, gives, in 3 st. of 7 l., from the Nürnberg Buchdrucken of 1527. (2) "Bless'd art they that sit in God's dread." In the Gude and Goddis Ballades, ed. 1668, folio 66 (ed. 1668, p. 113).
- (3) "Blest man! who walks in wisdom's way." By J. Anderson, 1846, p. 51 (1847, p. 66).
- (4) "Blest is the man who walks away." By Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 81.
- (5) "Happy the man who feareth God." By R. Massie, 1864, p. 61. Repeated by Dr. Bacon, in his Hym. of M. Luther, 1884.
- (6) "Happy who in the fear of God." By Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1867. In his Evangelist, 1876, altered and beginning "Happy who in God's fear doth stay." [J. M.]

Wolcott, Samuel, D.D., was b. at South Windsor, Connecticut, July 2, 1813, and educated at Yale College, 1833, and Andover Theological Seminary, 1837. From 1840 to 1842 he was a missionary in Syria. On his return to America he was successively pastor of several Congregational congregations, including Belchertown, Massachusetts; Providence, Rhode Island; Chicago, &c. He was also for some time Secretary of the Ohio Home Missionary Society. He d. at Longmeadow, Massachusetts, Feb. 24, 1886. His hymn-writing began late in life, but has extended to more than 200 hymns, many of which are still in use. Those of his hymns which have come into C. U. include:—

1. All thy realms in midnight shrouded. Missions. In the Oberlin Annual of Praise, 1880.
2. Christ for the world we sing. Missions. Written Feb. 7, 1869. Its origin is thus recorded by the author: "The Young Men's Christian Associations of Ohio met in one of our Churches, with their motto, in ever-green letters over the pulpit, 'Christ for the World, and the World for Christ.' This suggested the hymn 'Christ for the world we sing.'" It was when on his way home from that service that he composed the hymn. It is in several American collections, including Laudes Domini, 1834, &c.
3. Father, I saw Thy voice. Trust and Aspiration. This, his first hymn, was written in 1869, more as an experiment in hymn-writing than anything else. It was pub. in the Rev. Darius E. Jones's Songs for the New Life. Chicago, 1869. It has since passed into other collections.
4. Goodly were thy tents, O Israel. Missions. Written May 31, 1861, and included in Laudes Domini, 1834.
5. Lo! the faith which crossed the ocean. Missions. In the Oberlin Annual of Praise, 1880.
6. O gracious Redeemer! O Jesus our Lord. The Love of Jesus. Written in 1861.
7. On the works of His creation. God the Creator.

In the Ohio Evangelical Association's Hymn Book, 1881.

8. Pitying Saviour, look with blessing. Prayer for the Penitent. In the Ohio Evangelical Association's Hymn Book, 1881.
 9. Tell me Whom my soul doth love. Opening of Divine Service. A paraphrase of Cant. 1. 8. Written Feb. 6, 1874. Included in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884.
 10. To us have distant ages. Saints Days. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874.
 11. This house, most holy Lord, is Thine. Opening of a Place of Worship. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874.
- For most of the information given above we are indebted to Duffield's English Hymns, N. Y., 1886. [J. J.]

Wolfe, Aaron Roberts, was b. at Mendham, New Jersey, Sep. 6, 1821, and educated at Williams College, 1844; and the Union Theological Seminary, New York, 1851. On April 9, 1851, he was licensed by the Third Presbytery of New York. For some time he had charge of a school for young ladies at Tallahassee, Florida; and in 1859 he established "The Hillside Seminary for Young Ladies" at Montclair, New Jersey. In 1858 he contributed 7 hymns under the signature "A. R. W." to Hastings's Church Melodies. These are:—

1. A Parting hymn we sing. Class of Holy Communion.
2. Complete in Thee, no work of mine. Complete in Christ. Pub. in the N. Y. Evangelist, 1850 or 51.
3. Draw near, O Holy Dove, draw near. Holy Communion.
4. How blest indeed are they. In the Likeness of Christ.
5. My God, I thank Thee for the gentle. Conscience.
6. Mysterious influence divine. The Cross of Christ.
7. Thou Maker of our mortal frame. Chief end of Man.

The most popular of these hymns are Nos. 1, 2, and 3. [F. M. B.]

Wolf, Jakob Gabriel, LL.D., s. of Jakob Wolf, sometime corrector at Greifswald, was b. at Greifswald in 1702. He matriculated, in 1702, at the University of Greifswald, as a student of law. In 1705 went to Halle, where he graduated LL.D. In 1716 he was appointed extraordinary, and in 1724, ordinary professor of law at Halle, and afterwards received the title of Hofrath. He resigned his professorship in 1744, and d. at Halle, Aug. 6, 1754 (Koch, iv. 873; Dode, p. 174; the Griechow-Kirchner Kurzegefasste Nachricht, Halle, 1771, p. 54, &c.).

Wolf's hymns were mostly written early in life, principally during his student years at Halle. He was in thorough sympathy with the characteristic teachings of the Halle Pietists, and his hymns share in their excellencies and defects. Some of them are of considerable merit, elegant in style, earnest and glowing in devotion, and have attained considerable popularity in Germany. Nineteen were contributed to Frylinghaus's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714; and these, with nine others, were included in his autograph MS. (see No. iv. below).

Those of Wolf's hymns which have passed into English are:—

- i. Es ist gewiss ein köstlich Ding. Patience. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 491, in 6 st. of 7 l. In the Hannover G. B., 1740, No. 653, with a new et. 25 st. vii. Tr. as "It is, indeed, a precious thing," by Miss Maunington, 1863, p. 59.
- ii. O wie selig ist die Seel. Love to Christ. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 418, in 12 st. of 4 l. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1257. The trs. are: (1) "O how happy is the soul." An No. 688 in pt. I. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (2) "O those souls are highly blest." An No. 294 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In the 1801 and later eds. (1894, No. 290) it begins "Blest are they, supremely blest."

iii. Seels, was ermitet du dick, Heavenly Mindness. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 401, in 12 st. of 6 l., li. 5, 6 of each st. being the popular refrain,

"Suche Jesum und sein Licht, Alles andre bilft dir nicht."

In the Ann. L. S., 1851, No. 538. Tr. as "O soul, why dost thou weary," by Miss Warner, 1866, p. 14.

iv. Wohl dem der sich mit Falsch beunthet, Christian Warfare. On True and False Christianity. This hymn is ascribed to Wolff, by Count Christian Ernst of Stolberg Wernigerode (d. 1771, see p. 546, li.), and by Koch, iv., 270. In the Nachricht as above, p. 64, it is given under Wolff's name; but Kirchner adds that it was not to be found in the autograph ms. of Wolff's hymns which he had bought at Wolff's sale in 1755. It appears in the Berlin G. Z., 1711, No. 828, in 11 st. of 6 l., and was repeated (reading "mit Ernst") as No. 238 in Freylinghausens, 1714 as above. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1843, No. 646. The tr. in C. U. is: "O well for him who all things leaves." This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lays Ger., 1st Ser. 1855, p. 167. Her st. II.-IV., x., xi., beginning, "Who follows Christ, what'er betide," are included in the Bugby School H. Bk., 1816, No. 309. [J. M.]

Woodd, Basil, M.A., was born at Richmond in Surrey, Aug. 5, 1760. The influence of his home and of his widowed mother were most salutary, and produced the best results. As a boy he studied under the Rev. T. Clarke, of Chesham Bois, and at seventeen he entered Trinity College, Oxford. Taking Holy Orders in 1783, he was chosen lecturer of St. Peter's Cornhill, in 1784; morning preacher at Bentinck Chapel, Marylebone in 1785, and Rector of Drayton Beauchamp, Buckinghamshire, in 1808. Bentinck Chapel being a proprietary chapel, he purchased the lease in 1793, and held the incumbency, together with the Rectory of Drayton, from 1808 to his death on April 12, 1831. He took a deep interest in the great religious societies, and in the anti-slavery movement. His prose works were not numerous or important. He is associated with hymnody through the publication of the following:—

(1.) The Psalms of David, . . . Adapted to the Services of the Church of England, &c., 1764. 2nd ed. 1800. (2.) The Psalms of David and other portions of the Sacred Scriptures arranged according to the Order of the Church of England, for every Sunday in the Year, &c., London: Printed and sold by Watts and Bridgewater, K.D. circa 1810-20. The Preface is signed "B. W." (3.) A New Metrical Version of the Psalms of David; with an Appendix of select Psalms and Hymns, adapted to the service of the United Church of England and Ireland. . . . By the Rev. Basil Woodd, M.A., &c., London: Printed and sold by E. Bridgewater, 1821. Dedicated to the Bp. of Durham. A portion of the preface of No. 2 was repeated; but the preface as a whole, was more historical than the preceding. With the exception of 4 hymns, and 4 doxologies at the end, this collection is a reprint of No. 2, with a new title-page, a dedication, and an enlarged preface.

Very few of Basil Woodd's hymns and paraphrases of the psalms are now in C. U. The best known is "Hail, Thou Source of every blessing" (p. 430, l.). The rest include:—

1. Bless be Jehovah, mighty Lord. Ps. calis. 1794.
2. Holy Ghost inspire our praises. Whitsunside. circa 1810-20.
3. In Thee, O Lord, I trust, My hope is in Thy Name. Ps. xxvi. 1794.
4. Lord of glory and salvation. Pratre. circa 1810-20.

A short Memoir of the Rev. Basil Woodd, M.A. By the Rev. S. C. Wilks, M.A., was pub. by Hatchard & Son, London, 1831. [J. J.]

Woodford, James Russell, D.D., was b. April 30, 1820, and educated at Merchant Taylors School, and Pembroke College, Cambridge, of which he was a scholar; B.A. Senior Optime, and 2nd class in the Classical Tripos. He was ordained in 1843, and became second Master in Bishop's College, Bristol; and Curate of St. John the Baptist, Broad Street, in that city. He became Incumbent of St. Saviour's, Coalpit Heath, 1845; of St. Mark's, Easton, Bristol, 1848; and Vicar of Kempeford, Gloucestershire, 1855. In 1868 he was preferred by the Crown to the important vicarage of Leeds on Dr. Atlay's appointment as Bp. of Hereford. He was several times Select Preacher at Cambridge. He was also Hon. Chaplain to the Queen (1867). In 1873 he was consecrated, in Westminster Abbey, Bishop of Ely. He d. at Ely on Oct. 24, 1885. Bp. Woodford pub. Sermons, 1853; Lectures for Holy Week, 1863; Lectures on the Creed, 1853; Sermons, 1864; and Sermons, Charges, &c., at later dates. His Hymns arranged for the Sundays and Holy Days of the Church of England appeared in 1852 and 1855. He also joined H. W. Beadon, and Greville Phillimore in editing The Parish Hymn Book, 1863, and (enlarged) 1875. To these collections his original hymns, and his trs. from the Latin, were contributed. The originals include:—

1. Lamb of God, for sinners slain. Passiontide. 1852.
2. Not by Thy mighty hand. Epiphany. 1863.
3. O come, and with the early morn. Easter. 1852.
4. Within the Father's house. Epiphany. 1863.

Bp. Woodford's trs. are annotated under their respective Latin first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). They are good and popular, the best known being "Thee we adore, O hidden Saviour, Thee." [J. J.]

Woodhouse, Charles Goddard, B.A., son of George Windus Woodhouse, born Aug. 16, 1835, and educated at Albrighton and Christ Church, Oxford, graduating B.A. in 1860. He was for some time Vicar of Minsterley, Diocese of Hereford. He d. Aug. 20th, 1876. He was the author of a very tender hymn for "Institution to a Parish," beginning "By the Cross upon thy brow," and consisting of 3 st. of 8 l. It was printed on a fly-leaf. In 1881, Prebendary G. Thring recast the hymn, added a doxology, and gave it as "Heavenly Shepherd, Thee we pray," in his Church of England Hymn Book, 1882. [J. J.]

Woodhull, Alfred Alexander, M.D., grandson of John Woodhull, D.D., of Freehold, New Jersey; was b. March 25, 1810, educated for the medical profession, and practiced at Princeton, where he d. Oct. 5, 1836. His hymn, "God of the passing year to Thee," appeared as No. 406 in the official edition of Presbyterian Psalms & Hymns, Princeton, in 1829. It has attained to extensive use in the altered form as "Great God of nations, now to Thee." Its authorship was determined by Dr. Hatfield, in his Church Hymn Book, 1872, No. 1295. It is an American National Thanksgiving hymn. [F. M. B.]

Word supreme, before creation. J. Keble. [St. John Evangelist.] This hymn is dated "Hursley, April 19, 1856," and was first pub. in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, No. 43, in 7 st. of 6 l. It was repeated in Keble's posthumous Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, p. 111, and in several hymn-books. Mr. L. C. Biggs, in his annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, has drawn attention to the similarity between this hymn and a Sequence of the 11th cent., "Verbum Dei, Deo natum," which, according to Mr. Keble, "probably suggested some of his ideas." It has also a trace of Adam of St. Victor's "Verbi vere substantivi." In his annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, Mr. Biggs has rendered Keble's hymn into Latin as, "Verbum Dei, Increatum." [J. J.]

Wordsworth, Christopher, D.D., was b. at Lambeth (of which parish his father was then the rector), Oct. 30, 1807, and was the youngest son of Christopher Wordsworth, afterwards Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Priscilla (née Lloyd) his wife. He was educated at Winchester, where he distinguished himself both as a scholar and as an athlete. In 1826 he matriculated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where his career was an extraordinarily brilliant one. He swept off an unprecedented number of College and University prizes, and in 1830 graduated as Senior Classic in the Classical Tripos, and 14th Senior Optime in the Mathematical, won the First Chancellor's Medal for classical studies, and was elected Fellow of Trinity. He was engaged as classical lecturer in college for some time, and in 1836 was chosen Public Orator for the University. In the same year he was elected Head Master of Harrow School, and in 1838 he married Susan Hasley Freere. During his head-mastership the numbers at Harrow fell off, but he began a great moral reform in the school, and many of his pupils regarded him with enthusiastic admiration. In 1844 he was appointed by Sir Robert Peel to a Canonry at Westminster; and in 1848-49 he was Hulsean lecturer at Cambridge. In 1850 he took the small chapter living of Stamford-in-the-Vale cum Goosey, in Berkshire, and for the next nineteen years he passed his time as an exemplary parish priest in this retired spot, with the exception of his four months' statutable residence each year at Westminster. In 1869 he was elevated to the bishopric of Lincoln, which he held for more than fifteen years, resigning it a few months before his death, which took place on March 20th, 1885. As bearing upon his poetical character, it may be noted that he was the nephew of the poet-laureate, William Wordsworth, whom he constantly visited at Rydal up to the time of the poet's death in 1850, and with whom he kept up a regular and lengthy correspondence. Christopher Wordsworth was a very voluminous writer, his principal works being:—

(1) Athens and Attica, 1836; (2) Panthean Inscriptions, 1837; (3) Grace Pictorial and Descriptive, 1839; (4) King Edward VI's Latin Grammar, 1841; (5) Bentley's Correspondence, 1842; (6) Theophilus Anglicanus, 1843; (7) Memoirs of William Wordsworth, 1851; (8) S. Hippolytus, 1853; (9) Notes at Paris, 1854; (10) A Commentary on the whole Bible, 1856-1870; (11) The Holy Year, 1862; (12) Church History, 1861-1863; many volumes of Sermons, and an enormous amount of Pamphlets, Addresses, Letters, Speeches, on almost every subject in which the interests of the church were concerned, and also on subjects connected with classical literature.

Of his many works, however, the only one which claims notice from the hymnologist's point of view is The Holy Year, which contains hymns, not only for every season of the Church's year, but also for every phase of that season, as indicated in the Book of Common Prayer. Dr. Wordsworth, like the Wesleys, looked upon hymns as a valuable means of stamping permanently upon the memory the great doctrines of the Christian Church. He held it to be "the first duty of a hymn-writer to teach sound doctrine, and this to save souls." He thought that the materials for English Church hymns should be sought (1) in the Holy Scriptures, (2) in the writings of Christian Antiquity, and (3) in the Poetry of the Ancient Church. Hence he imposed upon himself the strictest limitations in his own compositions. He did not select a subject which seemed to him most adapted for poetical treatment, but felt himself bound to treat impartially every subject, and branch of a subject, that is brought before us in the Church's services, whether of a poetical nature or not. The natural result is that his hymns are of very unequal merit; whether his subject inspired him with poetical thoughts or not, he was bound to deal with it; hence while some of his hymns (such as "Hark! the sound of holy voices," &c., "See the Conqueror mounts in triumph," &c., "O, day of rest and gladness") are of a high order of excellence, others are prosaic. He was particularly anxious to avoid obscurity, and thus many of his hymns are simple to the verge of baldness. But this extreme simplicity was always intentional, and to those who can read between the lines there are many traces of the "ars celans artem." It is somewhat remarkable that though in citing examples of early hymn-writers he almost always refers to those of the Western Church, his own hymns more nearly resemble those of the Eastern, as may be seen by comparing The Holy Year with Dr. Mason Neale's Hymns of the Eastern Church translated, with Notes, &c. The reason of this perhaps half-unconscious resemblance is not far to seek. Christopher Wordsworth, like the Greek hymn-writers, drew his inspiration from Holy Scripture, and he loved, as they did, to interpret Holy Scripture mystically. He thought that "the dangers to which the Faith of England (especially in regard to the Old Testament) was exposed, arose from the abandonment of the ancient Christian, Apostolic and Patristic system of interpretation of the Old Testament for the frigid and servile modern exegesis of the literalists, who see nothing in the Old Testament but a common history, and who read it (as St. Paul says the Jews do) 'with a veil on their heart, which veil' (he adds) 'is done away in Christ.'" In the same spirit, he sought and found Christ everywhere in the New Testament. The Gospel History was only the history of what "Jesus began to do and to teach" on earth; the Acts of the Apostles and all the Epistles were the history of what he continued to do and to teach from Heaven; and the Apocalypse (perhaps his favourite book) was "the seal and colophon of all." Naturally he presents this theory, a theory most susceptible of poetical treatment, in his hymns even more prominently than in his other writings. The Greek writers took, more or less, the same view; hence the resemblance between his hymns and those of the Eastern Church. [J. H. O.]

During the time that Bp. Wordsworth was Canon of Westminster, and Vicar of Stanford-in-the-Vale cum Goosey, he published his collection of hymns as:—

The Holy Year; or Hymns for Sundays and Holy-days, And other Occasions. Lond. Rivingtons, 1862.

This work contained an extended Preface; a Calendar of Hymns; 117 Original Compositions; and a Supplement of 82 hymns from other sources. In the 3rd ed., 1863, the Supplement was omitted, and the Original hymns were increased to 127. Several of these hymns are annotated under their respective first lines, the rest in C. U. are:—

From The Holy Year, 1st ed., 1862:—

1. Five psalms from the book. Temptation. Stanzas added in 1863.
2. Giver of law is God's [Thy] dear Son. Circumcision. Doxology added in 1863.
3. Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost. Quinquagesima.
4. Holy, holy, holy, Lord, God of Hosts, Eternal King. Holy Trinity.
5. Holy of Holies! awful name. Epistle 5th S. in Lent.
6. How blest are hearts which Christ the Lord, Holy Matrimony. In 1863 in two parts, Pt. ii. being "Bless those Thy servants, gracious Lord."
7. How blessed is the force of prayer. St. Peter. In 1863, in two parts, Pt. i. being "Behold! at hand is Herod's doom."
8. How wondrous and mysterious are. Holy Baptism. In the 1863 ed. it is divided into four parts—Pt. ii. "In Jordan Thou didst sanctify"; Pt. iii. "Thee, risen in triumph from the grave"; Pt. iv. "Baptized in Christ we put on Christ." The cento, "By Water and the Holy Ghost," is also from this hymn.
9. In sorrow and distress. 2d Wednesday.
10. In Thy glorious Resurrection. Easter. In the 1863 ed. it begins, "Lord, Thy glorious Resurrection," and the doxology was added.
11. Lord, may we never, save to One. Against False Worship. Stanzas viii. was added in 1863.
12. Lord not with (my) peer and paltry gifts. Offeratory.
13. Lord, Who didst the Prophets teach. 2nd S. in Advent, or, Holy Scripture. The doxology was added in 1863.
14. Man fell from grace by carnal appetite. Gospel 1st S. in Lent.
15. Mankind in Adam fell. Good Friday. In the 1863 ed. it is divided into three parts: Pt. ii. being "We fell by Adam's sin;" and Pt. iii. "Thy Cross a Trophy is."
16. Not bound by chains, nor pent in cells. The Gifts of the Holy Ghost. This hymn is preceded by a special note on the Holy Spirit and His gifts.
17. Not gifts of prophecy can save. Self Discipline, or, 6th S. after Trinity.
18. O Jerusalem beloved, joyful morn has dawned on Thee. Purification of B. V. M., or, The Presentation. In the 1863 ed. it is divided into two parts, Pt. ii. being "Light the Gentile world to lighten, and thy glory Israel."
19. O Saviour, Who at Nain's gate. The Raising of the Widow's Son.
20. O Son of God, the Eternal Word. The Queen's Accession.
21. Once all the nations were as one. Babel and Sion a Contrast.
22. Sing, O sing this blessed morn. Christmas. In the 1863 ed. a doxology was added, and the hymn was divided into two parts, Pt. ii. being, "God comes down that man may rise."
23. The banner of the Cross. Missions. In the 1863 ed. it is in three parts, Pt. ii., "Now for the Lord our God," Pt. iii. "The earth from East to West."
24. The Galilean Embark told. Collect 4th S. in Advent. From this "O Lord, when storms around us howl" is taken.
25. Thou bidst us visit in distress. The Promise of the Comforter, or, S. before Ascension. In the 1863 ed. it is in two parts, Pt. ii. being "At Thy first Birth, Thou, Lord, didst wait."
26. Thou hast a Temple founded. The Christian Temple; or, Epistle 17th S. after Trinity.
27. To-day, O Lord, the Holy James. St. James. In the 1863 ed. in two parts, Pt. ii. being "God in His word does not display."

28. To-day with bright effulgence shine. Conversion of St. Paul. In the 1863 ed. it begins "To-day in Thine Apostolic shine," and is in two parts, Pt. ii. being "From East to West, from North to South."

29. Upon the sixth day of the week. Easter Eve. Stanzas x. xi. of the 1863 text were added then, and the hymn was given in two parts, Pt. ii. being "By tasting the forbidden fruit."

30. We hear the tolling bell. Burial. The doxology was added in 1863, and the hymn was divided, Pt. ii. being "O gracious Lord, to Thee." The cento "We see the open grave" is from this hymn.

31. When from the City of our God. The Good Samaritans. From this is taken "What beams of grace and mercy, Lord."

32. When Thou, O Lord, didst send the Twelve. St. Simon and Jude. In the 1863 ed. st. x. is new, and Pt. ii. begins, "Zeal, swollen with passion's cloudy smoke."

ii. From the Holy Year, 3rd ed., 1863.

33. Heavenly Father, send Thy blessing. For Schools. In extensive use.

34. Holy, holy, holy Lord, Maker of this worldly frame. Septuagesima. Based on the Epistle and Gospel of the week.

35. Lo He comes! Whom every nation. Advent. This is headed "The First Advent of Christ, coming to save."

36. O fear not though before thee lies. Consolation of the Sick. Pt. ii. begins, "The Resurrection and the Life."

37. On every new-born babe of earth. Churching of Women. Pt. ii. begins, "Bright angels of the King of kings."

38. Peace to this house! O Thou Whose way. Visitation of the Sick. Pt. ii. "O Conqueror by suffering; Pt. iii. "Restore us to Thine house of prayer."

39. The day is gently sinking to a close. Evening. A beautiful hymn.

40. We all, O God, unrighteous are. The Lord our Righteousness. Sometimes "We all, O Lord, unrighteous are." Based upon the Epistle of the 8. next before Advent. Pt. ii. begins "Behold the day, the glorious day."

In addition to many of the hymns in the 1863 ed. of The Holy Year being divided into parts, the texts of most of them were revised by the author, and are authorized. [J. J.]

Wordsworth, William, the poet, the s. of an attorney, was b. at Cockermonth in 1770, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1791. Devoting himself to literature, and especially to poetry, he gradually rose into the front rank of English poets. His works include Lyrical Ballads, 1798; Poems; The Prelude; The Excursion, 1814, &c. All his poetical productions were collected and republished under his own supervision in 7 vols., in 1842. He d. at Rydal Mount, near Grasmere, in 1850. Notwithstanding his rank and reputation as a poet, his pieces used as hymns are limited to the following extracts from his poems:—

1. Not seldom clad in radiant vest. Christ, the Unchangeable. This is No. v. of five "Inscriptions supposed to be found in and near a Hermit's cell, 1818." It is in 6 st. of 4 l., and is given in his Poetical Works, 1837, vol. iii., p. 286. It is in Stowell's Sci. of Hymns, 1831-77; the American Plymouth Coll., 1856, &c.

2. Up to the throne of God is borne. Noonday. This is entitled "The Labourer's Noon-Day Hymn," is dated 1834, and is in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Poem, 1837, vol. v. p. 122.) It is in C. U. in an abridged form, beginning with st. 1., and the latter part is also given in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, as "Look up to heaven, the industrious sun," as No. 535. [J. J.]

Worship, and thanks, and blessing. O. Wesley. [Confidence in Jesus.] This hymn "Written after a Deliverance in a Tumult," first appeared in Hymns for those that Seek, and those that have Redemption, &c., 1747, in 6 st. of 10 l. Of these st. i.-iv. and vi. were given in the Wes. H. Bk. in 1800. In an edition subsequent to that of 1803, st. iv. was also omitted, and in the revised ed., 1875, this form in 4 st. is retained. Orig. text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. pp. 237-9. It has been suggested that the "tamult" referred to was that which took place at Wednesbury, October 26, 1748. Although this is quite probable it yet lacks certain proof. See G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk., Notes, 1888, p. 211. [J. J.]

Worthy the Lamb for sinners slain. [Praises to Jesus.] This cento appeared in the General Baptist New Hymn Book, edited by the brothers J. B. and J. C. Pike [Baptist Hymnody, p. 118. l.] in 1851; and was repeated in the Bapt. Hymnal, 1879, in 5 st. of 4 l. Of the cento st. i., ii. are from J. Montgomery's "Sing we the song of those who stand" (p. 1060. l.), and the rest (iii.-v.) are anonymous. The Rev. W. B. Stevenson, editor of the Bapt. Hymnal, is strongly inclined to think that those stanzas were by the Rev. J. G. Pike, of Derby (with whom he was co-pastor for some time), who was the father of the brothers Pike named above; but he was not quite satisfied with his authority. [J. J.]

Wreford, John Reynall, D.D., b. Dec. 12, 1800, educated at Manchester College, York, and in 1826 succeeded the Rev. James Yates as co-pastor to the Rev. John Kentish at the New Meeting, Birmingham. In 1830 he pub. a tr. of Cellarius's Discourse on the Authenticity and Divine Origin of the Old Testament. In the following year, in consequence of failure of voice, he withdrew from the Ministry, and in conjunction with the Rev. Hugh Hutton, Minister of the Old Meeting, opened a school at Edgbaston. In 1832 he pub. a Sketch of the History of Presbyterian Nonconformity in Birmingham; and in 1837, Lays of Loyalty, in celebration of the Queen's accession. He also contributed, in 1837, to the Rev. J. B. Beard's Coll. of Hys. for Public and Private Worship 35 hymns, of which the following are still in C. U. :—

1. God of the ocean, earth, and sky. God seen in His Works. In various collections, including those by Fage Hopps, G. Dawson, and others.
2. Lord, I believe; Thy power I own. For increase of Faith. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840.
3. Lord, while for all mankind we pray. National Hymn. This is in a large number of collections of various denominations, and is by far the most popular of his hymns. Sometimes it begins with st. iii., "O! guard our shores from every foe."
4. When my love to Christ [God] grows weak. Patristic. In Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S. A., 1864. "When my love to God grows weak." This is repeated in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873 (p. 1271. l.).

Dr. Wreford was also the author of several volumes of verse, chiefly devotional. The latter years of his life he spent in retirement at Bristol, and d. there in 1831. [V. D. D.]

Wretched, helpless, and distressed. C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1742, p. 43, in 8 st. of 8 l., as a second hymn on Rev. iii. 17. In 1780, st. ii. was omitted when the hymn was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 105, and in the same form it is still retained. Orig. text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. pp. 92-94. The somewhat peculiar lines :—

"My whole heart is sick of sin,
And my whole head is faint" is furnished with this note by Dr. Osborn (P. Works as above).

"This singular transposition of the Prophet's words (Isaiah l. 5) though found in all the editions, must still be regarded as an oversight."

No evidence, however, of its being such is forthcoming, and the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, retains the old reading. [J. J.]

Wright, Philip James, was b. in London, May 1, 1810. His parents belonged to the old section of the Methodists, but not agreeing with the form of government he found there, he withdrew, and became a member, and subsequently a minister, with the New Connexion Methodists. After labouring most successfully for several years in various circuits, he d. in 1863. His pub. works include :—The Study of Creation, 1848; The Way of Salvation, 1848; the Gathered Rose, 1858; Revival Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1860, &c. The Revival Hys., &c., is composed of 91 of his original compositions. Of these a few were included in the Meth. New Con. Hys. for Divine Worship, 1863. "The Lord of glory left His throne" (Redemption), and "Soldiers of the Cross, Servants of the Lord" (Young Men's Societies), are still in C. U. [J. J.]

Wyatt, Henry Herbert, M.A., was educated at Queen's College, Oxford (B.A. 1844, M.A. 1847), and took Holy Orders in 1845. He was travelling secretary for the S. P. C. K., 1852-56; incumbent of Holy Trinity Chapel, Brighton, 1856-66; principal of the Brighton Training College, 1863-86; and vicar of Bolney, Sussex, 1872-86. In 1886 he became rector of Conington, Ely. Mr. Wyatt has pub. Principal Heresies relating to our Lord's Incarnation, 1881; The Gospel according to St. Matthew, with Explanatory Notes for the Use of Teachers in Schools, 1884; and Ps. and Hys. for Public Worship, 1859 (4th ed., 1868). To this Coll. he contributed in 1859 his well known hymn for National Thanksgiving, "God the Lord has [hath] heard our prayer." It is given in several collections, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

Wyn, Elis, the Author of Bard Cwag, was b. near Harlech, Merionethshire, in the year 1750. He stands unrivalled as a Welsh prose writer. He was induced by Bishop Humphreys to enter Holy Orders, and was ordained deacon and priest on the same day, and on the next presented to the Rectory of Llanfair. He held at the same time other parishes. In 1768 appeared his admired work, Gweledigaethau y Bardd Cwag, or the "Visions of the Sleeping Bard," which in style is one of the most beautiful works written in the Welsh language. In 1710 he was charged by the Bishops of Wales to superintend a new edition of the Book of Common Prayer. His "Emyr Cynhebrwg" or Fune-ral Hymn is found in all Welsh hymnals. He d. in July, 1734, and was buried under the communion table in Llanfair Church. [W. G. T.]

Xavier, St. Francis, the great missionary saint of the Roman Catholic Church, was the s. of Don John Giasso and Donna Maria d'Azpilqueta y Xavier; he was b. at the castle Xavier, near Pampeluna, Spain, on April 7, 1506, and is known to history by his mother's name. At the age of eighteen he entered the University of Paris, where in due course he graduated, and then devoted himself to teaching. It was here that he became acquainted with Ignatius Loyola the founder of the Jesuits, who was then planning the colossal work which he afterwards accomplished. Xavier became one of the first nine of Loyola's converts, and the most enthusiastic of the little band. The date of the formation of the Order of the Jesuits is given as Aug. 15, 1534, and the place as Montmartre near Paris. We find Xavier at Venice with Loyola in 1537, where the visitation of a hospital for incurables was assigned to him. Here in the discharge of his duties he gave early evidence of his enthusiasm and self-devotion. He subsequently visited Rome, where with Loyola and others of the Order he was brought, through the influence of the Rector of the University of Paris, who was then at Rome, to the notice of John III. of Portugal, who desired some of them for mission work in India. Circumstances led to the selection of Xavier for the work. He left Rome in March 1540, and set sail on April 7, 1541, for Goa, the chief city of the Portuguese possessions, where he arrived on May 6, 1542. From that time to the day of his death at Sancian, near Canton, on Dec. 22, 1552, he devoted himself to his work in a most heroic and devoted manner, visiting Travancore, Ceylon, Malacca, Japan, and other heathen lands with Cross in hand, and a burning zeal in his heart. Xavier's life has been written by many hands. The roll of deeds which he is said to have done, and the miracles he is said to have wrought, even to the raising of the dead, is long, but many of the alleged facts are open to the gravest doubt, and others are beyond belief. The hymns which are associated with Xavier's name are, "O Deus ego amo Te, Nam prior Tu amasti me" (p. 396, i.), and "O Deus ego amo Te, Nec amo Te ut salves me" (p. 396, ii.). That the first was written by him is most improbable, the evidence in his favour being absolutely nil. The second may possibly be his (see as above), it breathes his abnegation of self in every word, his spirit in every line. See Murray's Mag. for Oct. 1890, for an interesting account of Goa and its Cathedral, where Xavier lies buried. [J. J.]

Ye boundless realms of joy. Tate & Brady. [P. calistif.] Appeared in the New Version, 1696, in 8 st. of 8 l. It is seldom if ever found in its full form in modern collections, but usually as a cento. The metre, which is now somewhat common, is an imitation of John Pullain's version of the same psalm in the Anglo-Genevan Psalter, 1561. Pullain's use of this metre is the first instance known in English Psalmody. [Old Version, § ix.] [J. J.]

Ye Christian heroes [heralds], go, proclaim. Draper, B. H. [Farewell to Missionaries.] This is one of two hymns compiled from a poem which first appeared in a newspaper as "Ruler of worlds, display Thy power;" then in Hys. Orig. & Select., &c., Portland, Maine, 1805, divided as two hymns; and again, as a complete poem, in the Baptist Magazine, vol. viii. 1816, p. 83, where it is given in 28 lines, and begins: "Sovereign of worlds, display Thy power." The hymns compiled therefrom are:—

1. Sovereign of worlds, display Thy power. This cento in 4 st. of 4 l. was given in Frait's Ps. & Hys., 1828, No. 467, as a "Prayer for the Conversion of the World," and is composed of ll. 1-12, 17-20, slightly altered.

2. Ye Christian heroes! go, proclaim. This hymn is composed of ll. 17-28 slightly altered. It is found in several collections, including the Plymouth Coll., 1855; the Bap. Praise Bk., 1871, and others. In the Sabbath H. Bk., 1888; the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1895; Hys. and Songs of Praise, 1874, &c., it begins "Ye Christian heralds, go, proclaim."

The modern use of these hymns is mainly confined to America. [J. J.]

Ye indolent and slothful! rise. S. Martin. [Industry.] First appeared as No. 12 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Proverbs vi. 6-12, in 4 st. of 4 lines. In the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland, and still in use, ll. 1, 3, 4, of st. iii. were altered. The markings of the Trs. and Paraphs. by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 300, ii.) ascribe the original to I. Watts (in whose works we have failed to find it), and the alterations of 1781, to Cameron. In the Free Church Magazine, for 1847, p. 271, it is pretty clearly shown to be by Martin. Martin is there said to have sent in to the Committee versions of other portions of Holy Scripture, which, though not inserted by them, in the Trs. and Paraphs., he probably justly enough regarded as superior to this. [J. M.]

Ye nations exult; Salvation is nigh. [Epiphany.] This hymn appeared in the British Magazine, May, 1832, p. 283, in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "B. J. W." It has been republished in several collections, including Kennedy, 1863, &c. In Mercer's Ch. Ps. and H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, it begins "Ye nations rejoice, Salvation is nigh." [J. J.]

Ye neighbours and friends Of Jesus, draw near. C. Wesley. [Thanksgiving for Success of the Gospel.] This is No. 4 of four hymns written after preaching to the Newcastle colliers, and was pub. in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v., p. 115. Under the date of Nov. 30, 1746, Jackson in his Memoir of the Rev. Charles Wesley, says:—

"The very spirited hymn beginning 'Ye neighbours, and friends of Jesus, draw near,' was written by Mr. Charles Wesley 'after preaching to the Newcastle colliers,' and most probably during his present visit to that town. Under the date of Sunday, Nov. 30, he uses in his journal the phraseology upon which the hymn is founded. On that day he preached in one of the streets of Newcastle to listening crowds, who forgot the sharpness of the frost while engaged in the worship of God.

and in bearing the word of life and mercy." (Small ed., 1848, p. 181.)

The hymn is in 12 st. of 4 double lines. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, sts. i., ii., viii.-xii. were given as No. 38, and this has become its recognized form in later collections. [J. J.]

Ye principalities and powers. G. Rawson. [Burial.] 1st pub. in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 858, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in the author's Hymns, Verses, &c., 1876, p. 114. In the Bap. Pa. & Hys., 1858, No. 616, it was given with the omission of st. i., and began "Though tears will fall and hearts are stirred." This form of the text is repeated in later collections. [J. J.]

Ye royal priests of Jesus, rise. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in his Hys. on the Lord's Supper, 1745, No. 137, in 7 st. of 4 l.; again in later editions of the same; and in P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-70, vol. iii. pp. 819-320. Its use is not extensive. This hymn is one of the most pronounced of C. Wesley's hymns on "The Lord's Supper." It is based on a portion of Dr. Brevint's work on The Christian Sacrament and Sacrifice, sect. vi. 2. "Concerning the Sacrament, as it is a Sacrifice. And first, of the Commemorative Sacrifice":—

"Nevertheless, this sacrifice, which by a real oblation was not to be offered more than once, is by a devout and thankful commemoration to be offered up every day. This is what the apostle calls, to set forth the death of the Lord; to set it forth as well before the eyes of God His Father as before the eyes of man; and what St. Austin explained, when he said the holy flesh of Jesus was offered in three manners: by prefiguring sacrifices under the law before His coming into the world, in real deed upon His cross, and by a commemorative Sacrament after He ascended into heaven. All comes to this: (1) That the sacrifice in itself can never be repeated; (2) That nevertheless this Sacrament, by our remembrance, becomes a kind of sacrifice, whereby we present before God the Father that precious oblation of His Son once offered. And thus do we every day offer unto God the meritorious sufferings of our Lord, as the only sure ground whereon God may give, and we obtain, the blessings we pray for." &c. P. Works, 1868-70, vol. iii. p. 323.

It is curious to note how faithfully C. Wesley reproduces Dr. Brevint's views not only of this aspect of the Holy Communion, but also of its daily administration. It is desirable that all C. Wesley's Hys. on the Lord's Supper be read with the extracts from Dr. Brevint's work, upon which they are based, and with which they are published in the P. Works, as above. [J. J.]

Ye saints! in blest communion. J. S. B. Mossell. [Saints Days, Special and General.] Pub. in his Hys. of Love and Praise, 1863, p. 186, and composed of 5 opening stanzas of 8 l.; 19 st. for special days, as St. Andrew, St. Thomas, and others; and a concluding doxology. In this form it was repeated in his Parish Hymnal, 1873, and in both instances directions were given in a note as to the use which might be made of these 28 st. for special festivals. This hymn suggested to Earl Nelson his well-known "From all Thy saints in warfare, for all Thy saints at rest," p. 296, ii. [J. J.]

Ye servants of God, Your Master proclaim. C. Wesley. [Missions.] Pub. in Hys. for Times of Troubles and Persecution, 1744, in 6 st. of 4 l., as No. 1 of "Hymns to be sung in Tumult" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 51). It is given in its full, or in an abbreviated form in several of the older collections, and especially those of the Church of England. In 1830 a cento was included in the Supplement of the Wes. H. Bk., No. 557, st. i.-v. being from this hymn, and st. vi. from C. Wesley's Funeral Hys., 1746, No. 6, st. v. In the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, this last stanza was omitted. [J. J.]

Ye servants of the Lord, Each in his office wait. P. Doddridge. [Christian Activity and Zeal.] Appeared in J. Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1765, No. 210, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The active Christian"; and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 294. It is in extensive use, and usually in its original form. Sometimes, however, st. v. 1, 3, "And raise that favourite Servant's head," is altered to "And raise that faithful servant's head." [J. J.]

Ye simple souls that stray. C. Wesley (?). [Exhortation.] 1st pub. in Hys. for those that Seek and those that Have Redemption, 1747, in 7 st. of 8 l. In 1780 it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 21, with considerable alterations, and the omission of st. iii. The authorship of this hymn has been a matter of dispute for many years, some claiming it for John Wesley on the authority of Mr. Henry Moore, and others for Charles on the word of Dr. Whitehead. The work in which it appeared is known to have been pub. by the two brothers, and the contents were unsigned. Under these circumstances the difficulty of determining the authorship is great. There is some probability in the suggestion that it was written by Charles, and that the extensive alterations made therein for the Wes. H. Bk., in 1780, were the work of his brother. Original text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 230. [J. J.]

Ye sons of earth, prepare the plough. W. Cowper. [The Sower.] Pub. in the Oney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 85, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The Sower." It is in several modern collections, but it does not rank in popularity with many of Cowper's hymns. [J. J.]

Ye that pass by, behold the man. C. Wesley. [Good Friday.] 1st pub. in Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 13 st. of 4 l. and entitled, "A Passion Hymn" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 70). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, 15 st. were given as No. 24, the omitted st. being ii., iv., and vii. In the 1809 ed. of that collection the hymn is divided into two parts, pt. ii. beginning with "O Thou dear suffering Son of God." Many expressions in the hymn, such as "Give me to feel Thy agonies," and others, have been much criticised from time to time, and this may possibly account for the omission of the hymn from the revised edition of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. Both parts, however, are still in use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Ye that put on the heavenly crown. G. Rawson. [Burial. Easter.] Contributed to the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, in 6 st. of 4 l., No. 856. In 1858 st. iii.-vi. were given as

"Glory to Him Who tasted death," in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., No. 273; and have been continued in later editions. The reason of this curtailment of the hymn probably arose from objections to the opening stanzas, and especially to the lines:—

"Brethren in glory, bend ye down,
And add our faltering hymn."

The abbreviation has however changed a funeral hymn into one for Easter. In 1876 Mr. Rawson republished the full text in his Hymns, with the simple change in st. ii. l. 4, of "beside" to "so near the grave." [J. J.]

Ye whose hearts are beating high. J. Kelle. [Palm Sunday.] Given in his Christian Year, 1827, as the Poem for Palm Sunday, in 6 st. of 8 l., and based on St. Luke xiv. 40. In the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 206, it is given in an altered form as "Come, all grateful human hearts." [J. J.]

Ye wretched, hungry, starving poor. Anne Steele. [The Gospel Feast.] 1st pub. in her Poems Chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i., p. 17, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "Longing Souls invited to the Gospel-Feast, Luke xiv. 22;" also in the ed. of 1780, and D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 10. From this hymn the following abbreviated texts and centos have come into C.U.:—

1. Ye wretched, hungry, starving poor. In Ash and Evans's Bristol Bap. Coll., 1769, No. 144, and later hymnbooks. Usually st. vii. is omitted.

2. Ye wretched, starving poor. This in the American Church Pastors, Boston, 1864, is composed of st. I-iv. rewritten from c.m. into s.v.

3. See, Jesus stands with open arms. In the American Bap. Service of Song, 1871, beginning with st. ii. In the N. Y. Church Frolic Bk., 1852, st. iv. is also omitted.

4. Lo, Jesus stands with open arms. This in the American Prot. Episc. Additional and Selected Hys. from H. A. & M., &c., N.Y., 1859 is composed of st. II., v.-vii. slightly altered.

Through these various forms this hymn is somewhat widely used. [J. J.]

Yea, thou hast drained thy Master's cup. [Conversion of St. Paul.] This cento is in W. J. Blew's Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-53; and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 120, in 7 st. of 4 l. St. i.-iii. are a tr. from "Sudore sat tuo fides"; and iv.-viii. from "Sat Paule sat terris datum." Both hymns are by G. de la Brunetiere, in the Paris Brev. of 1680. The tra. are by Mr. Blow. [J. J.]

Yes, God is good! in earth and sky. [Goodness of God in nature; or, Flower Services.] The history of this popular hymn is somewhat curious and intricate. It is of American origin and came into modern hymn-books in the following manner:—

1. The original hymn appeared in Hys. for Children, Boston, U.S.A., 1825, in 6 st. of 4 l., the opening stanza reading:—

"God is good! each perfumed flower,
The smiling fields, the dark green wood,
The insect fluttering for an hour;
All things proclaim that God is good!"

The editor of this collection is not named. Possibly it may have been Mrs. Follen, the writer of the hymn. The false metre of the opening line (7's instead of 8's) was probably a misprint. In several instances this line has been republished, notwithstanding the clearness of the error. (See p. 300, l. 4.)

2. In Emily Taylor's Sabbath Recreations, Wellington, Salop, 1825, p. 203, this text was given as an original piece never before published, and signed "E. L. C.," the initials of Mrs. Follen's maiden name. Possibly it was sent in ms. to Miss Taylor, before it was printed in the Boston Hys. for Children.

3. In J. R. Beard's English Unitarian Coll. of Hys., 1837, it is included as "Yes, God is good! each perfumed flower."

4. The Boston Hys. for Children, or more probably a little undated work called Gems of American Poetry, fell into the hands of J. H. Gurney whilst engaged in compiling his Lutterworth Coll. of Hys. for Public Worship. In that Coll., in 1838, No. 299, appeared Gurney's version of the hymn as follows:—st. i., Mrs. Follen, "Yea, God is good! each perfumed flower;" st. ii., iii., new; st. iv., ll. 1, 2, Mrs. Follen, ll. 3, 4, new; st. v., new.

5. The Ps. & Hys. for Pub. Worship, Sel. for some of the Churches in Marylebone, was pub. by Gurney and others, in 1851. No. 300 is Gurney's final revision of the hymn. Of this text st. i., by Gurney, reads:—

"Yes, God is good,—in earth and sky,
From ocean-depths and spreading wood,
Ten thousand voices seem to cry,
"God made us all, and God is good."

The remaining stanzas are:—st. ii.-v., repeated from the Lutterworth Coll. as above, and st. vi. is new. To this hymn and another ("We saw Thee not when Thou didst come") (p. 124, l.) Gurney added the following note in the Index of first lines:—

"This hymn ('We saw Thee not,' &c.), and the last hymn in the book, 'Yes, God is good,' were suggested by two poems in a small American volume, which were well conceived, but very imperfectly executed. Successive alterations have left nothing of the original compositions remaining but the first four words, and the repeated words in each hymn. With this acknowledgment, the writer has not scrupled to put his name to them.—J. H. G."

In this note Gurney has overlooked the fact that, in "Yes, God is good," st. iv., ll. 1, 2 are direct from Mrs. Follen. This form of the hymn, in full or in an abbreviated form, is in extensive use.

6. In the Methodist S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 73, beginning "Almighty God, Thy works abound" is thus composed: st. i., ii., Anon.; st. iii., viii., from Gurney, 1851, as above.

7. Mrs. Follen's hymn was pub. in a revised form in her Poems, Boston, W. Crosby & Co., 1839, p. 119, as "God, Thou art good, each perfumed flower." It was also repeated in the English ed. of her Poems, pub. as The Lark and The Linnet, Hys., Songs, and Fables, London, Addey & Co., 1854, p. 12, where it begins:—"Thou art good! Each perfumed flower." Putnam, in his Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, 1875, gives the text from the Poems of 1839. [J. J.]

Yes, Lord, my joyful thanks to Thee. S. Browne. [Giving Thanks.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, &c., 1720, Bk. I., No. 151, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Giving thanks to God always in all things." In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840, and again in his Hymns, &c., 1873, it is given as "Great God, my joyful thanks to Thee." [J. J.]

Yes, there are little ones in Heaven. T. R. Taylor. [Infants' Hymn.] This hymn appeared in the Protestant Dissenter's Juvenile Magazine, 1833, and again in T. R. Taylor's Memoirs and Select Remains, 1836, p. 245, in 5 st. of 6 l. It is found in C. U. in its original form; and also rewritten as "Children's voices high in heaven," in the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 953, and later collections. The rewritten form of the text is by Mr. George Rawson, and was made for the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858. [J. J.]

Yet a little while: the Lord Gave His saints this precious word. Lady Campbell, née Malcolm. [Second Advent.] The first stanza was written early in Nov., and the remaining two on Dec. 26, 1830, and subsequently pub. in lithograph from the author's ms. It was included in J. G. Deck's Ps. and Hys., Lond., D. Walther, 1842. Pt. i., No. 169; in Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855; in Harland's Ch. Psalter & Hyl., and others. [J. J.]

Yet there is room! The Lamb's bright hall of song. H. Bonar. [Parable of the Marriage Supper.] This most appropriate hymn for Home Missions appeared in 1878. It has been somewhat widely adopted, and is given in the collections of Snapp, Sainkey, Thring, and others, and is worthy of this attention. [J. J.]

Yonge, Charlotte Mary, dau. of William Crawley Yonge of the 52nd Regiment, was b. at Otterbourne, Hants, in 1823. Miss Yonge is widely known as the author of The Heir of Redclyffe, The Daisy Chain, and other popular novels; of a series of historical works for the young, including Stories of English History, 1874, Stories of Greek History, 1876, &c.; of the Life of Bishop Patteson; and as the Editor of the Monthly Packet. In 1841 Miss Yonge contributed two hymns to The Child's Christian Year, which was edited by her mother (see below). The hymns are:—(1) "Into Christ's flock we are received" (Holy Baptism); (2) "Why lived I not in those blest days?" (St Thomas). [J. J.]

Yonge, Frances Mary, née Bargus, was b. Jan. 13, 1795, was married to William Crawley Yonge of the 52nd Regiment, and d. Sep. 28, 1868. Mrs. Yonge pub. in 1841, The Child's Christian Year, with a Preface by John Keble. The contents are mainly by J. Anstice, J. H. Newman, I. Williams, and Mrs. Yonge, with a few hymns by Miss Yonge, Mrs. Mozley, T. Whytehead, J. Keble, and others. Mrs. Yonge's hymns are:—

1. Behold a Prophet,—yes, and more. St. John Baptist.
2. His are the cattle on the hill. All things for God.
3. Not only as a sacrifice. Jesus the Example.
4. Put far from us, O Lord, we pray. Advent.
5. The Assyrian King in splendour came. Defeat of the Assyrians.

The use of these hymns is limited. [J. J.]

You now must hear my voice no more. W. Robertson. [Ascensiontide.] First appeared as No. 15 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of John xiv., 25-29, in 6 st. of 4 l. and slightly altered in the revised ed. issued in 1751. In the Draft of 1781 it was included as No. 43, considerably altered, and with st. v., vi. omitted. In the public worship ed. of the Trs. & Paraphs. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland and still in use, st. ii. was re-written, and st. i., l. 8, st. iii., l. 1, were altered from the Draft. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 206, ii.) the original is ascribed to Robertson, and the alterations in 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781 is included in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and a few other modern hymnals. (Compare the version of the same passage of Holy Scripture "Peace—it was our Saviour's blessing," No. 73, in Miss Lecson's Paraphs. & Hys. for Cong. Singing, 1853.) [J. M.]

You who dwell above the skies. G. Sandys. [Ps. cxlviii.] This fine rendering of Ps. cxlviii. appeared in his Paraphrase of the Psalms, 1636, in 40 l. It was republished in his Paraphrases upon the Divine Poems, 1638, and in later editions. Also in the Library of Old Authors. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 669, it is given in 9 st. of 4 l. as "Ye, who dwell above the skies," where the text is but slightly altered. It is worthy of more extended use than is accorded to it in modern hymnals. [See Psalter, English, § x.] [J. J.]

You who the Name of Jesus bear. [Humiliation and Exaltation of Christ.] First appeared as No. 7 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of Phil. ii., 6-12, in 7 st. of 4 l. The author is unknown. In the revised edition, issued in 1751, st. iii. vii. were altered, and this form was included, slightly altered, as No. 52 in the Draft of 1781 beginning "Ye who the Name of Jesus bear." In the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs. issued in that year by the Church of Scotland, and still in use, st. v. was re-written, and st. ii., ll. 2-4, st. vi. l. 1 altered. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 206, ii.) the original is ascribed to Isaac Watts (in whose works it is not to be found) and the alterations of 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781 is included in Pratt's Coll., 1829, the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and a few other modern hymnals. St. v.-vii. beginning "Hence God this generous love to men," were included, with an added doxology, in the Twickenham Chapel Coll., 1845, p. 58. In Miss Lecson's Paraphs. and Hys. for Cong. Singing, 1853, it is slightly altered as pt. i. of No. 81; her pt. ii., beginning "Hail, name of Jesus! glorious name," being partly from "All hail the power of Jesus' name." [J. M.]

Young, Andrew, second s. of David Young, for more than fifty years a most efficient teacher in Edinburgh, was b. at Edinburgh, April 28, 1807. After passing through a distinguished eight years' literary and theological course at the University of Edinburgh, he was appointed in 1830, by the Town Council, Head Master of Niddry Street School, Edinburgh, where he began with 80 pupils, and left with the total at 600. In 1840 he became Head English Master of Madras College, St. Andrews, where he was equally successful. He retired from St. Andrews in 1853, and lived in Edinburgh, where he was for some time the Superintendent of the Greenside Parish Sabbath School. He d. Nov. 30, 1889. Many of Mr. Young's hymns and poems were contributed to periodicals. A collected edition of these was pub. in 1876, as The Scottish Highlands and Other Poems. His poems entitle him to rank in the first order of Scottish minor poets. Some of his hymns are very sweet. His "There is a happy land" (q. v.) has attained great popularity. He d. July 18, 1891. [J. M.]

Young children once to Jesus came.
Jane Taylor. [Christ receiving little children.] This hymn was given in the 1st ed. of Hys. for Infant Minds, 1810, as "As infants once to Christ were brought." In the 4th ed., 1812, the opening line was altered to "Young children once to Jesus came," and this is repeated in the revised ed. of 1836. It is in 6 st. of 4 l. and based upon the words "Suffer little children to come unto me." It is given in several modern collections for children. [J. J.]

Your harps, ye trembling saints.
A. M. Toplady. [Encouragement to Believers.] Printed in the Gospel Magazine, Feb. 1772, in 8 st. of 8 l., and headed "Weak Believers Encouraged." It was included in his Hys. on Sacred Subjects, &c., London, W. H. Collingridge, 1856; and in D. Seigwick's ed. of his Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1860. Several abbreviated forms of the text, all beginning with the original first line, are in C. U. in G. Britain and America. There is also in American use a cento beginning "If through unruffled seas," in 4 st. of 4 l., of which st. ii.-iv. are from this hymn, and stanza i. is by another hand. It is given in the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, the Laudes Domini, 1884, and others. [J. J.]

Z

Zage nicht wenn sich der Himmel.
[Cross and Consolation.] Included in J. Köbner's Christliche Harfenstüm. Hamburg, 1840, p. 150, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled "Guidance." No author's name is given. The tr. in C. U. is "Tremble not, though darkly gather." A good tr. expanding st. ii. as fi., iii., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1st ser., 1854, p. 19 (1884, p. 24). Included in Gillilan's Sol., Dundee, 1875, No. 51. [J. M.]

Zeller, Christian Heinrich, s. of Christian David Zeller, Hofrath at Hohenentrungen, near Tübingen, was b. at Hohenentrungen, March 29, 1779. He matriculated at the University of Tübingen in 1797, as a student of law. After completing his studies he chose, however, the profession of teaching. He became director of the Latin School at Zoffingen, Switzerland, in 1809, and finally removed in April, 1820, to Benggen on the Rhine (Baden), near Basel, as director of the newly founded Institution there, meant for the education of poor children and for the training of teachers for poor children. He d. at Benggen, May 18, 1860 (Koch, vii. 188, &c.).

Zeller was best known as an educationist, and in connection with the working of the Institution at Benggen. His hymns, which are simple, Scriptural and earnest, were written primarily for use at Benggen, and mostly appeared in the Monatsblatt (begun in 1828), and other publications of the Institution. They came into notice through their reception into Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837. They were collected by Zeller's son, and pub. in 1871, as Lieder der Armen- und Schulvereinsanstalt Benggen, 58 being original. Two of these hymns have passed into English, viz.:—

i. Gott bei mir in jedem Orte. Omnipresence. On the joy of God's Presence with us. This appeared in the Monatsblatt in 1828, and was included in the 1871 as above, p. 88. In Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 32 (1865, No. 32), in 6 st. of 8 l.; in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1554, &c. The tr. in C. U. is:—

My God with me in every place. This is a good tr., omitting st. v., by Mrs. Findlater in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 30 (1894, p. 39); repeated, omitting st. iv., in Holy Song, 1869, No. 588. In Miss Warner's Hys. of the Ch. Militant, 1858, it begins, "My God is with me every place."

Another tr. is: "God in every place is near me." By R. Massie, in the British Herald, May, 1855, p. 70, and in Bald's Praise Bk., 1819, No. 438.

ii. Treuer Heiland, wir sind hier. Public Worship. This is in the 1871 as above, p. 84. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 857 (1865, No. 1236), in 5 st. of 7 l.; and repeated in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 235. For this hymn Conrad Kocher wrote the well-known melody which in H. A. & M. is called Dix, and which 1st appeared, set to Zeller's hymn, in Kocher's Simmen aus dem Reich Gottes, Stuttgart, 1838, No. 201. Tr. as:—

Saviour, here to Thee we come. This is a free tr. of st. i., ii., v., marked as by "F. C. C.," as No. 155 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864. [J. M.]

Zeuch ein zu deinen Thoren.
P. Gerhard. [Whiteside.] Appeared as No. 157 in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, in 12 st. of 8 l., viz. st. i.-viii., xli., xliii., xiv., xvi. of the full form. St. xv. was added in J. G. Ebeling's ed. of Gerhard, 1666-67, No. lxxx., and st. ix.-xi. in J. H. Feusking's edition of the same, 1707. The full form in 16 st. is in Waackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 92, in Bachmann's ed., No. 25, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 194. It was probably written during the Thirty Years' War. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Retake thy own Possession. A free tr., omitting st. i.-xii., in pt. ii., 1725, of J. C. Jacobi's Psalmodia Germanica, p. 9. In his ed. of 1732, p. 46, it is greatly altered, and begins, "In me resume thy dwelling." From this form the trs. of st. i., vi., xvi. were included unaltered in the Scottish Evang. Union H. Bk., 1856.

2. Come to Thy temple here on earth. A good tr. omitting st. iv. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Germanica, 1st Ser., 1855, p. 113. From this the trs. of st. i., ii., viii., xii., were repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. H. Bk., 1865.

3. O enter, Lord, Thy temple. A good tr. of st. i., ii., v.-viii., xiv., xvi. based on her L. G. version by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 71. Included in full and unaltered as Nos. 482, 483 in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866; No. 483, beginning "All love is thine, O Spirit" (st. vii.). In the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, No. 250 is st. i.-iii., vi., viii., and in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, No. 106 is st. i., ii., v., xiv., xvi.

Other trs. are: (1) "Retake thy own possession. Thou glorious Guest of Hearts," in Select H. from Ger. Psal. Tranquebar, 1764, p. 43, and the Stappi to Ger. Psal. ed., 1765, p. 26. (2) "Come, O Thou Holy Dove," by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 164. (3) "Come, enter Thine own portal," by Miss Cox, 1864, p. 117. [J. M.]

Zihn, Johann Friedrich, was b. Sept. 7, 1650, at Suhl, in Thuringia. After studying for some time at the University of Leipzig, he went to Wittenberg, where he graduated M.A. in 1678; and in 1679 was appointed rector of the school at Suhl. In 1690 he became diaconus, and in 1708 archidiaconus at Suhl, and d. there, Jan. 16, 1719 (Wetsel, iii. 479; Koch, v. 419, &c.). Zihn contributed five hymns (Nos. 526-530) to the Schleusingen G. B., 1688, the title of which begins, Der ihmmlischer Freude zeitlicher Vorschein. One has been tr., viz.:

Gott lobet noch, Seele was versaget du doch.
Cross and Consolation. 1688 as above, No. 529, in 8 st. of 10 l., marked as by M. J. F. Z. In each stanza ll. 1, 2 are as quoted above, and ll. 9, 10 are the refrain,

" Seele i so gedonks doch; Lobt doch meer Herr Gott noch."

It is a fine hymn, founded on Jer. x. 10. Koch says it was written in 1682. Included in Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 844. The tr. in C. U. is:—

God liveth ever! This is a good and full version, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 33. Repeated in full in Miss Warner's Hymns of the Church Militant, 1858, and in Ep. Kyle's Coll., 1860. Varying centos are included in the Cumbræ H. Bk.; Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871, and the Ibrox Hym., 1871. The form beginning "Our God is good; in every place," in the Hymns of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., 1864, is from ll. 3-6 of st. i., iii., vi., viii.

Other tra. are:—

(1) "God liveth still! Trust," &c. By Miss Cox, 1864, p. 129; repeated in the Gilman-Schaff Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1891. (2) "God liveth still! Wherefore," &c. By R. Massie, in the Doxy of Rest, 1871, vol. vi. p. 326. [J. M.]

Zinzendorf, Christian Renato, Count von Zinzendorf, was b. Sept. 19, 1727, at Herrnhut, in Saxony. He received his education from his parents, and from Johann Langguth and others of the Brethren. He was the only son that survived his boyhood, early accompanied his father on his journeys, and was, e.g., in 1743, for sixteen days imprisoned with him at Rign. From 1744 to 1750 he lived mostly at Herrenhaag in Wetteravia, ministering specially to the single Brethren. When the community at Herrenhaag was dissolved in 1750, his father summoned him to London. He brought with him the seeds of consumption, which developed in England. He d. in London, May 28, 1752 (Koch, v., 312; Hist. Nachricht (to the Brüder G. B., 1778), 1833, p. 192, &c.).

C. R. von Zinzendorf's hymns were principally written during his residence in London. They are by no means free from the faults and mannerisms of that sentimental and fantastic period of Moravian hymn-writing; and their range of subjects is very limited. Their burden is a deep and intense personal devotion to the crucified Saviour; the spirit being that of his favourite saying, "I have but one passion, and that is He, only He." They were collected by his father, and pub. (with a preface dated March 18, 1755), as the 1st. Appendix to the London G. B. of 1754, with 63 (64) pieces, 9 of which consist of only one stanza, and ed. 1759 (See p. 765, ii.). Most of them passed into the Brüder G. B. of 1778. Few have passed into English use in non-Moravian hymn-books.

Three of these hymns may here be referred to:—

i. Ach lass auf allen Tritten. Sanctification. Written in 1751. Included in the Neine Brüder G. B., London, 1754. It is No. 64 in the 2nd ed., 1760, of the Appx. of 1755, and repeated as st. ii. of No. 380, in the Brüder G. B., 1778. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Lord Jesus, Thy atonement. This is No. 427 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 588), repeated in Bickersteth's Christ. Psalmody, 1833.

ii. Für uns ging mein Herr in Todessüthen. Passiontide. This is included as No. 166 in the Brüder G. B., 1778, in 10 st. of 8 l. It is a cento from three hymns in the Appx. of 1755, as above, viz. st. 1-5, 8, 9 are st. 12-15, 17, 11, 18, of No. 28 (this hymn begins "Ach du unansprechlich nahes Herze"); st. 6, 7 are st. 2, 3, of No. 10; while st. 10 is No. 17. The text of 1778 is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1833, No. 230. The tr. in C. U. is:—

My Redeemer, overwhelmed with anguish. By J. Swertner, in full, from the 1778 text, as No. 78 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 93). The tra. of st. 1, 2, 6-8, were included in Walker's Coll., Cheltenham, 1855. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1886, No. 82, it begins with st. vi. "Our enraptured hearts shall ne'er be weary."

iii. O süsse Seelenweide. This is noted at p. 497, ii.

Not including the above the English Moravian H. Bk., 1886, gives seven hymns with his name, and ascribes portions of four others to him. [J. M.]

Zinzendorf, Nicolaus Ludwig, Count von, was b. at Dresden, May 26, 1700; was educated at the Paedagogium at Halle (1710-1716), and at the University of Wittenberg (1716-1719); became Hof- und Justizrath at the Saxon court at Dresden in the autumn of 1721; received a license to preach from the Theological Faculty of the University of Tübingen in 1734; was consecrated Bishop of the Moravian Brethren's Unity at Berlin, May 10, 1737; and d. at Herrnhut, May 9, 1760.

An adequate sketch of the life and labours of this remarkable man would far exceed the limits of our space. The details of his life are fully given in his Leben, by A. G. Spangenberg, 8 vols., Barby, 1772-75 (English version, abridged, by Samuel Jackson, London, 1838); and good sketches, with references to the fuller biographies, will be found in Koch, v. 248, Herzog's Real-Encyclopädie, xvii. 513, &c. The English reader may also consult T. Kübler's Hist. Notes to the Lyra Germanica, 1865, p. 107; Josiah Miller's Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 160; Miss Winkworth's Christian Singers of Germany, 1869, p. 305, &c. It is impossible to speak of Zinzendorf apart from the religious Communion of which he was the Second Founder; and accordingly an account of his life and labours is given in this Dictionary in the article Moravian Hymnody (see pp. 766-769).

Zinzendorf's first hymn was written at Halle in 1712, and his last at Herrnhut, May 4, 1760. Between these dates he wrote more than 2000 hymns. He himself pub. an edition of his poems as his Teutsche Gedichte at Herrnhut, 1735 (2nd ed., Barby, 1766), but this only contains 128 hymns. The fullest representation of them is in Albert Knapp's Geistliche Gedichte des Grafen von Zinzendorf, pub. at Stuttgart in 1845 (hereafter, in this article, referred to as Knapp, 1845). This contains 770 pieces, arranged in three books, with an introduction and a biographical sketch by Knapp.

In preparing this edition Knapp had access to much unpublished material in the archives at Herrnhut, and found there many of the hymns in Zinzendorf's autograph. But too much of the labour he bestowed thereon was spent in endeavouring, not so much to reconstruct the text from the original sources, as to modernise it. In various instances the hymns are altogether rewritten, so that the form in which they appear is not that in which, as a matter of fact, Zinzendorf did write them, but that in which he might have written them had he been Albert Knapp, and lived in the year of grace 1846. So much is this the case, that comparatively few of the hymns are given in Knapp's ed. in their original form. If not altered they are often either abridged or else combined with others.

The keynote of Zinzendorf's hymns, and of his religious character, was a deep and earnest personal devotion to and fellowship with the crucified Saviour. This is seen even in his worst pieces, where it is his perverted fervour that leads him into objectionable familiarity with sacred things both in thought and in expression. If his self-restraint had been equal to his imaginative and productive powers, he would have ranked as one of the greatest German hymnwriters. As it is, most even of his best pieces err in some way or other, for if they are reverent and in good taste, they are apt to lack concentration and to be far too diffuse. His best hymns, and those which have been most popular in German and English beyond the Moravian connection, are those of the period prior to 1734. Among the characteristically Moravian hymns of the period 1734 to 1742 there are also various noble pieces. The later productions, especially from 1742 to 1746, are as a rule one-sided, unreal, and exaggerated in sentiment, and debased in style; exemplifying a tendency inherited from Scheffler (see p. 1006, i.), and suffered to run to riot. Without doubt he wrote too much (especially considering the limited range of subjects treated of in his hymns), and gave too little care to revision and condensation. Yet many of his hymns are worthy of note, and are distinguished by a certain noble simplicity, true sweetness, lyric grace, unshaken faith in the reconciling grace of Christ, entire self-consecration, willingness to spend and be spent in the Master's service, and fervent brotherly love.

The hymnbooks in which Zinzendorf's productions mainly appeared, or with which they have been associated, are described at length at pp. 787, 788. The more important may for convenience be briefly noted here, as follows:—

(1) Sammlung geistlicher und weltlicher Lieder, Leipzig, 1725, with 389 hymns. The 2nd ed. was pub. circa 1723, and contains an Anhang with Nos. 390-1078 [Berlin Library, Et. 2017]; while some copies have a Zugabe with Nos. 1079-1149 [Berlin, Et. 2016], and others have also an Andere Zugabe, circa 1730, with hymns 1-43, bound up with them [Berlin, Et. 2014, and Brit. Mus.]. The 3rd ed., with 1416 hymns in all, was pub. at Görlitz in 1731. A copy of this, now in the Hamburg Library, has bound up with it a Nachtrag einiger geistlicher Lieder, dated 1733.

(2) Herrnhut G. B. 1735 (Das Gesang-Buch der Gemeinde in Herrn-Huth) with its various Anhänge and Zugaben up to 1748.

(3) Louder G. B. 1753-54 (Elbow's vom Liebe Motis ... das ist: Alt und neuer Brüder-Gesang, &c.), pub. at London, vol. 1, 1753, II, 1754.

(4) Brüder G. B. 1778 (Gesangbuch zum Gebrauch der evangelischen Brüdergemeinen), pub. at Barby in 1778.

Zinzendorf's hymns passed into German non-Moravian use mainly through the Ebersdorf G. B., 1742 (Evangelisches Gesangbuch in einen hinfälligen Auszug der Alten, Neuern und Neuesten Lieder, &c.), and in recent times through Knapp's Ec. L. S., 1837-1865. Comparatively few are found in non-Moravian English hymnbooks prior to 1840, save in the versions made by John Wesley. The translations made by the English Moravians have been very little used by others, except by those who were connected by birth with the Moravians, such as James Montgomery (through whose influence several were included in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., 1855 and 1857), J. A. Latrobe and C. H. Bateman. The versions made by English non-Moravians since 1840 have been mostly of hymns which the Moravians themselves had not thought good to translate.

A number of Zinzendorf's hymns are noted in this Dictionary under their German first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). In the larger ed. of the English Moravian H. Bk. of 1886 those which are by Zinzendorf may easily be traced, his name being added to them, and the first line of the original German prefixed. The others which have passed into use outside the Moravian connection, or have been tr. by non-Moravians, are here noted as follows:—

i. Ach Betn vor meinen Heilssa. Longing for Heaven. Written circa 1750 (Knapp, 1846, p. 176). Included in the Kleine Brüder G. B., 2nd ed. Barby, 1761, No. 2110, in 2 st. of 8 l.; repeated, altered, in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1681. Tr. as:—

i. The seasons, Lord! are Thine—how soon. A free version as No. 470 in J. A. Latrobe's Pr. & Hys., 1841.

ii. How soon, exalted Jesus. This is No. 633 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1866, No. 1533).

ii. Ach! mein verwardig Firska. Union with Christ. Written Aug. 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 126). 1st pub. in Appx. viii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B. as No. 1197, and in 4 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 774, st. iv. was omitted.

The tr. in C. U. is of st. i. II., and is noted at p. 658, i. Another tr. is, "My wounded Prince enthron'd on high," by C. Kinchen, as No. 85 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. In the 1808 and later eds. (1826, No. 352), st. III. altered to "Lord, take my sinful, worthless heart" is continued.

iii. Der Gott von unserm Bunde. Supplication. Written in 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 331). 1st pub. in Appx. vii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1201, in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled, "Hymn for the Hours of Prayer." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1474.

The tr. in C. U. is based on st. i. II., and is noted at p. 658, i., II. Other trs. are (1) "The God to whom we homage pay." This is No. 27 in pt. III, 1748 of the Moravian H. Bk. (2) "O may the God of mercies." This is No. 522 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801. In the ed. of 1826, No. 708, it begins with st. III., "Lord, our High Priest and Saviour."

iv. Die Sünder blihen ab. Autumn. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1725, No. 12, dated Autumn, 1721, and entitled "Comforting thoughts on Death." It is in Knapp, 1845, p. 17. Further noted under "Wie wird mir einst doch sein" (see p. 407, II.).

v. Du Vater aller Kreatur. Work for Christ. Written 1722 (Knapp, 1846, p. 26). 1st pub. in Appx. vi., circa 1731, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1169, and in 13 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1717 consists of st. viii.-xiii. beginning, "Des Lebens abgestecktes Ziel." Tr. as:—

Whether the period of this life. This is a tr. of st. viii.-x. as No. 847 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. To this in later eds. (1826, No. 1235) No. 848 was added. This is "Lord may I live to Thee by faith," and is a tr. of an anonymous 17th cent. stanza, "Herr Jesu! dir leblich," which is No. 1086 in the Brüder G. B., 1778. The full form is in J. A. Latrobe's Pr. & Hys., 1841.

vi. Gesehwister! wir geben uns Herzen und Hände. Christian Work. Written 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 234). 1st pub. in Appx. viii., circa 1738, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1217, and in 8 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1281, it is united, as in Knapp, with "Gesinde des Hellsands" (see No. xxvii. below). Tr. as:—

Grass! how good, how cheap, how free. This is a tr. by C. Kinchen, et. v., as No. 23 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. Included in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866.

vii. Glanz der Ewigkeit. Morning. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1725, p. 13, dated Berlin, May, 1721. 1st pub. as No. 470 in the Sammlung, 1725, in 15 st. of 6 l. In Knapp, 1845, p. 16. The only st. tr. into English is st. xi. as part of "Jesu, geh' voran" (p. 689, II.).

viii. Grosser Bundes-Engel. Ascensiontide. Written for Ascension Day (his birthday), 1740 (Knapp, 1845, p. 144, dated May 29, 1740). 1st pub. in Appx. xi., since 1741, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1426, in 27 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 603. Tr. as:—

Lord, when Thou wilt, so let it be. This is a fr. by C. G. Clemens, of st. 11., as No. 166 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 199). Included in the Cong. H. Bk., 1834, and in Dr. Martineau's Eyes, 1840 and 1873.

I. Heiliger, heiliger, heiliger Herr Zebaoth. Eternal Life. Heaven anticipated. The Rev. J. T. Müller, of Herrnhut, informs me that this was written in 1723 on the occasion of the birthday (Oct. 6) of Zinzendorf's grandmaster, H. G. von Gerardt. Knapp, 1845, p. 193, dates it Oct. 18, 1723. 1st pub. as No. 1078 (2) in the 2nd ed., circa 1728, of the Sammelzug in 7 st. of 7 l., entitled, Closing Hymn. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, st. 11., beginning "Hütten wir," are included as st. 11., of No. 1789. Tr. as:—

Had we sought, had we sought. This is a fr. of st. 11., by W. O. Kaley, as No. 1188 in the 1808 Suppl. to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1849, No. 1186), and repeated in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hym., 1841, No. 476.

I. Ich bin ein kleines Kindlein. Children. This is No. 1022 in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammelzug, in 18 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1214, and in the Wid. Nachrich. thereto (1836, p. 186) marked as a catechetical hymn for children, and dated 1722. Knapp, 1845, p. 46, dates it June, 1723, and alters it to "Ich bin ein Kindlein, arm und klein." It is a simple and beautiful hymn, and is contained in a number of recent German non-Moravian collections, e.g. in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1408. Tr. as:—

I. Saviour, who didst from Heaven come down. This is a free tr. of st. 11., v., made by James Bullivant Tomalin in 1860, and contributed to Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, ed. 1866, Appx., No. 27, with the note at p. 600, "I am indebted for this to the kindness of the translator." Repeated in S. D. Major's Bk. of Praise for Home & School, 1869, and in America in the Bapt. Services of Song, 1871, &c. In M. W. Stryker's Christian Chorals, 1885, and Church Song, 1889, it is altered, beginning, "O Saviour, Who from Heav'n came down."

I am a little child you see. By C. Kinchen, as No. 49 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. This form is followed in the ed. of 1888, No. 1038, and in the Bible H. Bk., 1845. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, it begins with st. 11., "Thou, gracious Saviour, for my good;" and this form altered to "O Saviour dear, Thou for my good," in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1875.

Konnt, Sünder, und blühet dem ewigen Leben. Repentance or Lent. Mr. Müller informs me that this was written in Aug. 1730, at Bernau, near Berlin, while Zinzendorf was journeying between Berlin and Königsberg. Knapp, 1845, p. 130, dates it Nov. 22, 1738. 1st pub. in Appx. viii., circa 1739, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1389, in 3 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 321. Tr. as:—

Sinners! come; the Saviour see. This a good and full fr. by C. Kinchen, as No. 120, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1866, No. 359). Of this st. 1., II. are included in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1856. Other forms are (1) "Are you formed a creature new" (st. vi.). In the Moravian H. Bk., 1769 (1854, No. 1280), Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, &c. (2) "Rise, go forth to meet the Lamb" (st. vii. all.). In J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hym., 1854, No. 457.

Kron' und Lohn dahertatter Rieger. The Beauties. Founded on St. Matt. v. 3-12. In his Teutsche Gedichte, 1736, p. 41, dated, Sept. 7, 1722 (his marriage day), and entitled, "Thoughts on my own marriage," 1st pub. as No. 708 in the Sammelzug, 1725, in 16 st. of 12 l. In Knapp, 1845, p. 30. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 613, beginning, "Jesu, der du uns erworben." Tr. as:—

Jesus! Lord so great and glorious. This, omitting st. xiv., xv., is No. 236 in pt. II. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1829, No. 799), as "Jesus, Lord most great and glorious." The venous of st. 1., ix., xvi., from the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, were included in the Dalton Hospital H. Bk., 1844.

Kraft herzu, ihr Lieben Glieder. Holy Communion. Written in 1731 (Knapp, 1845, p. 212). 1st pub. in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammelzug as No. 1410 in 19 st. of 4 l. Also in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1146. Tr. as:—

I. Friends in Jesus, now draw near. This is a free fr., omitting st. v., vi., viii.-x., xiv., by Miss Borthwick in H. L. L., 4th ser., 1862, p. 67 (1884, p. 220), the German being quoted as "Kommt herzu, ihr Lieben Glieder." This fr. is repeated in full in Lays Eucharistica, 1863, p. 37, and abridged in G. S. Jellison's Colt., 1867, Windle, No. 490, and Harvard, 1876, No. 481.

I. Come, approach to Jesus' table. This is No. 666 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 955).

xiv. O du Hüter Ephraim. Supplication for Grace. In his Teutsche Gedichte, 1736, p. 188, dated 1736, entitled, "On his wife's 28th birthday" (she was b. Nov. 7, 1760, see p. 769, il.), and with the note, "This poem was written for the birthday festival of the Countess, was sung by a company or coterie of friends, each member of which was indicated according to their circumstances at the time." It had previously appeared, without the first stanza, and this form, which begins, "Herr der göttlichen Natur," is noted at p. 617, l.

xv. Rath, Kraft, und Held, und Wunderbar, Christmox. Founded on Is. ix. 6. In his Teutsche Gedichte, 1736, p. 25, in 9 st. of 6 l., entitled, "Christmas Thoughts," and dated 1721; and in the Herrnaut G. B., 1735, No. 827. In Knapp, 1845, p. 21. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 438, it begins with st. vi., "Mein alles! mehr als alle Welt." Tr. as:—

My all things more than earth and sky. This is a fr. of st. vi., by C. G. Clemens, as No. 306 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. In 1801 altered to "My all in all, my faithful friend;" and to this in 1826, 6rs. of st. ii., vii.-ix., by P. Latrobe, were added (1886, No. 399). From this form a cento in 8 st. of L. M., beginning, "O Lord! Thou art my rock, my guide," was included in Dr. Martineau's Eyes, 1840.

xvi. Ruh' aus von eurer Mühs. Christian Church. Written in 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 222, as Du gastern und auch heute). 1st pub. in Appx. vi., circa 1737, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1183, in 8 st. of 6 l., entitled, "Hymn of the witnesses." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, st. iv. is given as No. 1042. Tr. as:—

O Jesus Christ, most holy. This is a fr. of st. iv. by C. G. Clemens, as No. 437 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1846, No. 807; 1886, No. 786, beginning, "Lord Jesus Christ") Included in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1856.

xvii. Seligs Volk der Zeugenwolk. Holy Communion. Written in 1739 (Knapp, 1845, p. 133, beginning, "Christ Blut, Die Segensluth," and p. 256, "Selig Volk.") 1st pub. in Appx. viii., circa 1739, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1340, in 13 st. of 8 l., entitled, "Hymn at the Feast of Love." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, as Nos. 1127 and 1522, the latter beginning, "Werther Tod und Wunden roth;" and including st. xi. ("Wisst ihr was? So heisset der Pass"), xiii., xiv. Tr. as:—

I. Would the world our passport see. This is a fr. of st. xi., xiii. as No. 1152 in the 1808 Suppl. to the Moravian H. Bk. of 1801 (1866, No. 995). Included as No. 212 in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hym., 1841.

2. Flock of Grace, ye Witnesses. This is No. 40 in pt. III. 1748 of the Moravian H. Bk.

3. Happy race of witnesses. By C. Kinchen as No. 351 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1769. In 1838 four st. are given as No. 961, and the other two beginning, "Eat and rest at this great feast" (st. viii.) as No. 1029.

xviii. Was hätten wir für Freude oder Ehre. Repentance. Written in 1739 (Knapp, 1845, p. 139). 1st pub. in Appx. viii., circa 1739, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1343, and in 48 st. of 2 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 396, reduced to 19 stanzas. Tr. as:—

What Joy or Honour could we have. In full as No. 161 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742; abridged in 1789 to 12, and in 1801 to 7 st. The 1801 version, which represents st. 1.-iv., viii., ix., xi. was included in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825; and with the 6rs. of st. iii., xi. omitted, and a hortatory stanza added, as No. 368 in J. A. Latrobe's Ps. & Hym., 1841. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1886, No. 372, it begins with the tr. of st. iii., "None is so holy, pure, and just."

xix. Wenn sich die Kinder freuen. Christian Work. Written about 1762 (Knapp, 1845, p. 179, as "Wenn wir uns kindlich freuen"). Included as No. 2101 in the London G. B. (Sinners vom Liede Moris, &c.), 1793, in 16 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 490 consists of st. 1.-iii., vi., ix., xiii.-xv. beginning, "Wenn wir uns kindlich freuen." Tr. as:—

1. When we seek with loving heart. By Miss Borthwick, in full from the 1778 (with an original st. as st. ix.) in the Family Treasury, 1861, pt. II., p. 112, and in H. L. L., 1862, p. 89 (1884, p. 260). Repeated, abridged, in E. T. Frost's Suppl. H. Bk., 1869.

2. When the children joyful are. This is No. 312 in pt. II. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

3. When children are rejoicing. This is at p. 373 of pt. II. in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754.

xx. Wir sind zur Best. Christian Warfare. Written in 1734 (Knapp, 1845, p. 113). 1st pub. in Appx. iii., circa 1737, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1076, and in 21 st. of 6 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1330 has 13 st.; while st. xvii. ("Die Streiter treue") is given as st. v. of No. 1394. Tr. as:—

Warrior, on thy station stand. This is a fr. of st. xvii. as No. 1161 in the 1808 Suppl. to the Moravian H. Bk.

1801 (1898, No. 896). Adopted by Dr. Martineau in his Hys., 1840 and 1873, altered to "Warrior! to thy duty stand."

Hymns not in English C. U.:

xxi. Auf, auf, es ist geschehen. Holy Communion. This is No. 166 in the Sammlung, 1725, in 12 st. of 4 l., and in the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 2. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1188 it begins, "Ich eil in Jesu Armen" (5 st. being added, and st. viii, xi, omitted), and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (ed. 1851, p. 188) is marked as written on the occasion of his first communion in 1714. In Knapp, 1845, p. 6, it begins, "Ist's ja, es ist geschehen." Tr. as "Happy, thrice happy hour of grace." By L. T. Nyberg, of st. i., xii., as No. 693 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 1021); repeated in C. H. Bateman's Cong. Psalmist, 1846.

B.* as No. 1865, in 16 st. of 4 l., entitled, "Hymn for the ship's company, February, 1743." Written during a stormy passage from America to Germany. In Knapp, 1845, p. 164. The trs. are: (1) "Our ship upon the surging sea." In the British Herald, Aug. 1866, p. 313, repeated in Reid's Praxis Bk., 1873. (2) "Our little bark, it rocks itself." In L. Rehfuss's Church at Sea, 1868, p. 18.

xxiv. Die Christen gehn von Ort zu Ort. Burial of the Dead. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 113, as part of No. 48, which is entitled "Over the grave of the grandmother." (Henriette Catharine von Gerstorf. She d. March 6, 1726), and dated March, 1726. The hymn itself is entitled, "Air after the funeral rites." It had appeared in the Andere Zugabe, circa 1739, to the Sammlung, as No. 6 (ed. 1731, No. 1246), in 3 st. of 8 l., entitled, "Funeral Hymn." In Knapp, 1845, p. 72, and in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1701. The trs. are: (1) "Believers go from place to place." By Dr. J. Hunt in his Spiritual Songs of Martin Luther, 1853, p. 148. (2) "Through scenes of woe, from place to place." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 60. (3) "From place to place the Christian goes." By J. D. Burns in his Memoir & Remains, 1869, p. 263. (4) "From land to land the Christian goes." This is No. 1251 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1866.

xxv. Du einzig geliebter Erlöser der Sünder. Readiness to serve Christ. Written in 1736 (Knapp, 1845, p. 222). 1st pub. in Appz. iv., circa 1737, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1080, and in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1335. Tr. as "Sinners' Redeemer whom we truly love." This is a fr. of st. i., iv., v., by C. Kinchen, as No. 121 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. In the 1748 and later eds. (1866, No. 861), it begins, "Sinners' Redeemer, gracious Lamb of God." The text of 1742, slightly altered, is No. 208 in Lady Huntington's Sec., 1780.

xxvi. Da Vater aller Geister. Evening. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 15, entitled, "Evening Thoughts," and dated Oct. 1721. It is No. 487 in the Sammlung, 1725, in 6 st. of 8 l. In Knapp, 1845, p. 16, and in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 235. Tr. as "Father of living Nature." By H. J. Swickel, 1842, p. 102.

xxvii. Gemüde des Heilands des saligen Gottes. Christian's Work. Written in 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 294). 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1738, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1218, and in 10 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1391. Tr. as "Ye blest Domestic of the slaughter'd Lamb." In full as No. 178 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1754, pt. II., No. 269). Repeated, abridged, in the Bible H. Bk., 1845, No. 206.

xxviii. Ich tritt dich, herrliches Gottes-Lamm! Love to Christ. Written in Oct. 1741 (Knapp, 1845, p. 182, as "Ein selig Herze führt diese Sprach"). 1st pub. in Appz. xi., circa 1743, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1724, and in 12 st. of 5 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 104, it begins, with st. ii., altered to "Ein seliges Herze führt diese Sprach." Tr. as "When heavenwards my best affections move." By Miss Borthwick (from the 1778), dated April, 1861, in the Family Treasury, 1861, p. 328. In H. L. L., 4th ser., 1862, p. 60 (1884, p. 223), altered to "When towards heaven."

xxix. O du Hüter Ephraim. Burial of the Dead. This is included at p. 10 in the Nachlese of 1733 to the 3rd ed. 1731 of the Sammlung, and is in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "Of departure to the Father;" and in the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 266, entitled, "In the name of the community." Included as No. 695 in the Herrnaut G. B., 1735, beginning with st. ii., altered to "Tösten ist dem Herrn erlaubt." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1715, it begins with st. iii., "Ehmal solte gestorben sein," and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1853, p. 186) is marked as written on the death of Matthias Linner in 1733. In Knapp, 1845, p. 101. Tr. as "Once the sentence justly sounded." By Miss Borthwick in H. L. L., 1862, p. 92 (1884, p. 252).

xxx. O Liebe, die in fremde Noth. On Unity. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 94, dated 1725, and entitled, "On the Saviour's faithfulness." 1st pub. as No. 198 (b) in the 1725 Sammlung, in 18 st. of 4 l. In the London G. B., 1753, No. 1164, st. ix., x., beginning, "Der du noch in der letzten Nacht," were given as a separate hymn; and this form is repeated in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 714, the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1037, &c. In Knapp, 1845, p. 70. The trs., all of st. ix., x., are: (1) "Lord Jesus, who that very night." By P. H. Moulder, as st. ii., iii. of No. 387 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1854, No. 477, beginning, "Lord Jesus, in that"). (2) "Thou Who didst die for all and each." By Miss Tr., 1847, p. 147. (3) "O Thou, Who with Thy latest breath." By Lady S. Fortescue, 1843, p. 66. (4) "Thou who in that bitter night." By Miss Warner, 1858, p. 438. (5) "Thou who in that last sad night." By Miss Fry, 1859, p. 151. (6) "Thou who upon that last sad night." In the Family Treasury, 1859, p. 305. (7) "O Thou who didst on that last night." By E. Massee in the British Herald, Feb. 1855, p. 28. (8) "O Thou, who on that last sad eve." By E. Harris, 1866, p. 69.

xxxi. O wie so glücklich wären wir. Love to Christ. On the blessedness of union with Christ. 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1736, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1237, and in 8 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 824, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1853, p. 186) marked as written for J. A. Kothe (p. 978, 1), and dated 1737. In Knapp, 1845, p. 256. Tr. as "How full our cup of joy would be." By Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, Sept. 1865, p. 131, and in Reid's Praxis Bk., 1872.

xxxii. Reiner Bräutigam meiner Seele. Desire for Holiness. Written in 1721 (Knapp, 1845, p. 21). Included in the 2nd ed., circa 1728, of the Sammlung as No. 1091, and in the Christ-Catholisches Singe- und Bet-Büchlein, 1727, p. 133, in 36 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 798. Tr. as "Jesu, to Thee my heart I bow." This is a fr. of st. i., x.-xii., xvi., xviii., by J. Wesley in Pr. & Hys., Charlestown, 1735-7, and Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 103). Repeated in the Wesley Hys. & Spr. Songs, 1759, Moravian H. Bk., 1754, Bayley's Sec., Manchester, 1769, Bateman's Cong. Psalmist, 1846.

xxxiii. Sohan von dalzen Thron. Supplication. Written in 1720 (Knapp, 1845, p. 14), and founded on the Lord's Prayer. In the Sammlung, 1725, No. 443, in 6 st. of 8 l. Tr. as "All glory to the Eternal Three." By J. Wesley in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 130).

xxxiv. Solche Leute will der König küssen. Humility. 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1736, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1241, and in 4 st. of 4 l. Mr. Miller informs me that it was written in 1738, and was dedicated to Eva Maria Immig née Ziegelbauer, who on March 5, 1740, became the wife of A. G. Spangenberg (p. 1070, 1). In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 842, st. ii., lit. are st. i., iv. of this hymn, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1853, p. 186) it is dated 1738. Knapp, 1845, p. 89 dates it 1728. The trs. are:—(1) "To such the King will give a kiss of Love." This is No. 154 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1754, pt. II., No. 62). (2) "His loving kindness those shall richly share." This is No. 598 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801. (3) "Such the King will stoop to and embrace." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 310.

xxxv. Verliebter in die Sünderchaft. Love to Christ. 1st pub. in Appz. iii., circa 1737, to the Herrnaut G. B., as No. 1072, in 4 st. of 8 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1103 (beginning "Verliebter in die sel'ge Schaar"), and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (1853, p. 183), dated 1734. The trs. are: (1) "O Thou, whom sinners love, whose care." By J. Wesley, in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 109), and as "Prayer to Christ before the Sacrament." Included in the Churchman's Altar Manual, ed. 1883, p. 407. (2) "Thou, who with sinners smitest art." This is No. 145 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1754, pt. II., No. 192).

xxxvi. Vor seinen Augen schweben. Living to Christ. In the Teutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 283, entitled "Enoch's Life," and dated 1731. 1st pub. in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammelzug, as No. 495, in 5 st. of 8 l., as a hymn on Holy Living. In the Herold G. B., 1735, No. 216, it begins "Vors Bräutigams Augen," and in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1687, it begins "Vor Jesu Augen." In the Hist. Nachrichten to the 1778 (1836, p. 190), it is dated 1736, and marked as written for Theodor Countess Renee (she was his cousin, née von Castell, and first love, but married Count Heinrich xxxix. of Reuss-Ebersdorf, whose sister [see Nos. xli., xiv. above] became Zinsendorf's wife in 1722). In Knapp, 1848, p. 100. The text of 1778 is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1188. In Knapp's Er. L. N., 1865, No. 1835, dated Sept., 1731. Tr. as, "Beneath the eye of Jesus." In the British Herald, May, 1866, p. 257, and in Reid's Prairie Sk., 1872.

xxxvii. Was sag' ich dir, die mit viel tausend Schwermen. Written in 1737 (Knapp, 1845, p. 122). 1st pub. in Appz. vii., circa 1739, to the Herrn-Auf G. B., as No. 1251, in 10 st. of 6 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, st. ii., x., beginning "Du trees Haupt! ich sag' es mit Empfinden," were included as No. 752. This form is tr. as "Oh, faithful God! with deep and sad emotion." By Mrs. Findlater, in N. L. L., 1862, p. 45 (1864, p. 211). [See also Appendix.] [J. M.]

Zion stands by hills surrounded.
T. Kelly. [The Security of the Church.] 1st pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1806, in 5 st. of 6 l. (ed. 1853, No. 136). It is in C. U. in its full form, and also in centos, as:—

1. Every human tie may perish. This cento, beginning with st. ii., is given in a few American collections.

2. On the Rock of Ages founded. In the 1874 Supplement to the New Cong., No. 1215, in st. i., ii., iv., v. rewritten.

3. Zion stands with hills surrounded. This slightly altered text is in a few American hymn-books.

Taking the original text and these centos together, it is found that the use of this hymn is somewhat extensive. It is based on Pa. cxxx., 2, and is a vigorous hymn on the Security of the Church of Christ. [J. J.]

Ζοφεράς τροικυμίας. St. Anatolius [Christ Stilling the Tempest.] The Very Rev. S. G. Hatherly, in his ed. of Dr. Neale's Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1882 (4th ed.) says:—

"These Stickers are not in use in the Church Service. They are probably taken by Dr. Neale from the work of some German antiquarian. Sundays of the First Tone are the 1st after Easter, and the 2nd, 10th, 18th and every eighth following Sunday after Pentecost until the Sunday next before Easter."

It is more probable, however, that Dr. Neale got his text from the "dateless Constantinopolitan book" from whence he said he got his "Art thou weary" (see p. 688, ii.) than that he secured it "from the work of some German antiquarian." Dr. Neale's tr., "Fierce was the wild billow," was pub. in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 8 st. of 8 l., and headed "Stickers for a Sunday of the First Tone." It was included in the Parish H. Bk., 1863; and subsequently in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. In some hymnals it reads, "Fierce the wild billow was," and in others "Fierce was the Galilee;" but Neale's text is that which is most extensively known. [J. J.]

Zwick, Johann, s. of Conrad Zwick, Rathsherr at Constanz, was b. at Constanz, circa 1496. He studied law at the Universities of Basel, Freiburg, Paris, and Padua (where he graduated LL.D.), and was for some time a tutor in law at Freiburg and at Basel. In 1518 he entered the priesthood, and in 1522 was appointed parish priest of Riedlingen on the Upper Danube. Being accused of Lutheran tendencies, he was forbidden in 1523 to officiate, and in 1525 his living was formally taken from him. He returned to Constanz, and was appointed by the Council in 1527 as one of the town preachers. Here he laboured unweariedly, caring specially for the children, the poor, and the refugees, till 1542. In Aug., 1542, the people of Bischofszell, in Thurgau, having lost their pastor by the pestilence, besought Constanz to send them a preacher; and Zwick, proceeding there, preached and visited the sick till he himself fell a victim to the pestilence, and d. there Oct. 23, 1542 (Koch, ii., 76; Hertzog's Real-Encyclopædie, xvii. 578, &c.).

Zwick was one of the leaders of the Swiss Reformation. He ranks next to Blarer as the most important of the early hymn-writers of the Reformed Church. His hymns are collected in Wackernagel, iii., Nos. 672-696. The best appeared in the Neue gesungbüchlein von acht schönen Psalmen und geistlichen Liedern, pub. at Zurich, 1536 (2nd ed. 1546 is the earliest now extant), of which he was the chief editor, and which was the first hymn-book of the Reformed Church.

The only hymn by Zwick which has passed into English is:—

Auf diesen Tag an danken wir. Ascension. This probably appeared in the Neue gesungbüchlein, Zurich, 1536; and is certainly in the 2nd ed. of 1546, from which it is quoted in Wackernagel, iii., p. 695, in 6 st. of 7 l., with "Aleinia." It is also in (2) the Strassburger Psalmen und geistliche Lieder, 1537, f. 96b, and in (3) S. Salminger's (J. Aberlin's?) Der gants Psalter, &c. (Zürich?), 1537, f. 145 [Brief. Mus.]. In each case it is entitled "Another hymn on the Ascension of Christ," while in 1546 the first line is given as "Uf disen tag so dencken wir," in 1537 (2) as "Uf disen tag so dencken wir," and in 1537 (3) as "Auff disen tag so denckes wir." It is the finest of Zwick's hymns, and its spirit of joyful faith, its consciousness, and its beauty of form, have kept it in use among the Lutherans as well as among the Reformed. It is No. 153 in the Yma, L. S., 1851. The tr. are:—

1. Raise your devotion, mortal tongue. This is noted under Wegelin, J. (q. v.).

2. To-day our Lord went up on high. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. iii., in her Lays Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 46. Repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869 and 1870, and the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rd. Poetry, 1881.

3. Askest to heaven, ye songs of praise. This is a free tr., in 4 st. of 6 l., by Dr. G. Walker, in his Hymns from German, 1869, p. 20. [J. M.]

Zyma vetus expurgetur. Adam of St. Victor. [Easter.] Gantier, in his ed. of Adam's Oeuvres poetiques, 1881, p. 42, gives this from a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat. Paris, No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N. No. 15615), and a Missal of St. Genevieve, c. 1230. It is also found in an early 14th cent. Paris Missal in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 146 v.); in a Sarum Missal, c. 1370, and a York Missal, c. 1390, both in the Bodleian; in a St. Gall ms. No. 383, of the 13th or 14th cent., &c. The printed text is given with full notes in Trench, ed. 1884, p. 165; also in Dantel ii., p. 69; Kehren, No. 91; D. S. Wrangham's The Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881, i. p. 80, and others. Of this grand sequence Chotlovaeus says with accuracy:—

"The wonderful mysteries of the Resurrection of our Lord are here set forth, as foreshadowed in the Old Testament by many types, and through the goodness of God explained more clearly to us in the New. And of a truth this prose is almost divine, embracing much in few words, and all distinctly taken from the Sacred Scriptures."

In this eulogy Abp. Trench agrees. The explanation of the Scriptural allusions is given by Abp. Trench, Dr. Neale in his Med. Hys., and Mr. Wrangham in his Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor. In the Sarum use this was the Sequence on Monday in Easter Week; Paris on the Tuesday; York on the Friday; St. Victor and St. Genevieve on the octave of Easter. [J. M.]

The trs. of this Sequence include:—

1. Purge we out the ancient leaven. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediæval Hys., &c., 1851, p. 88, in 13 st. of 6 l., the text used being that in Daniel ii., 69. Interesting notes are added explanatory of various and in some cases obscure references in the sequence to figures applied by the early Fathers to Christ and His holy work; and also of the typical teaching of certain historical events recorded in Holy Scriptures and referred to in the sequence.

2. Purge out the leaven old of sin. By E. H. Plumtre, made for and included in the Hymnary, 1872, in two parts of 7 st., and 2 additional stanzas to be sung at the end of each part. Pt. ii. begins "Shadows of good the law doth show." This rendering is less literal than Dr. Neale's, and the obscure passages are omitted. Dean Plumtre tr. from the Sarum Missal.

Other trs. are:—

1. Let the old leaven be purged out. By C. E. Pearson in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868; and his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871.

2. Purge the old leaven out, that we. By C. E. Pearson in his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871.

3. Purge the old leaven all away. By D. T. Morgan, 1871.

4. Purge away the former leaven. D. S. Wrangham, 1881. [J. J.]
