sweet-hearts they loved each oth - er so; Of course the oth - ers teased them, But sweet-heart, The games and wild flowers; They nev - er tho't they'd meet again, Up - lit-tle did they care, For they seemed to live in fair-y land, so hap-py were this on the sea of life, Nor in their wild-est fan-cies dreamt, of be-ing man and pair, They sel-dom joined the favorite game But wan-dered off a-lone, And lit-tle May could wife, But fa-ther time doth cause great change, Without warning to our ears, And so it was that al-ways count on one to see her home, They al-ways played to-geth-er, Till the May and Joe both met in af-ter years, Their meet-ing brought them sun-shine, For they
